Without sound business judgment you cannot accumulate property for your heirs. Doesn't the estate so accumulated deserve sound business judgment in its administration?

DANCE NOT IN HEART, MRS. DE SAULLES SAYS

yawned rather noisily during the cross-examination.

District Attorney Weeks turned about and gazed at the juror angrily for a second, but said nothing. When he turned back to Mrs. De Saulles, she said:

"Any one would be tired."

"You mean that I am tiresome?" asked District Attorney Weeks.

"Yes."

"Do you mean that you did not expect me to question you?"

"No, I knew that you would."

"Did you mean to be disrespectful?"

"No."

District Attorney Weeks, although he did not leave any question unasked, was polite and pleasant to the witness. He never raised his voice. He never spoke sarcastically, though he occasionally let a note of incredulity into his questions, especially when he was interrogating Mrs. De Saulles about the period between the time she shot her husband on the night of Aug. 3 and Aug. 13. Her memory, she insisted, was an absolute blank for that time.

One of the letters which the prosecution made a good deal of was written by her on the steamer Calamares in the Summer of 1915, after she had left this country for Chile, following her break with her husband. In it she said:

Dear Jack: Just before leaving I want to tell you that I am really sorry for having made you so unhappy, and I want you to please forgive me, and realize that if I hurt you it was always unconsciously. I know, though, that no excuse makes it any better; a hurt is a hurt.

But want you to know that I have always been fond of you and admired you as a man among men, and nothing will ever change that. That I was not able to make a good wife will ever be a regret to me and a source of reproach. Circumstances and people change so much that who knows that some day, if you wanted still, we might be happy. However, I feel as though you do not like me, and will never want to see me again, and, though I justly deserve it, it does hurt, because, as I say, I am very fond of you and shall always be tremendously interested in all your doings, and hope from the bottom of my heart that you will find the happiness which is your due. As long as I have Toodie I shall make a good mother to him, and make him look forward to the time he will see you again. BLANQUITA.

Always Taking the Blame.

Mrs. De Saulles was asked what she meant by saying that she had not been a good wife. She said:

"I was always taking the blame for everything."

She was asked if she meant that she admired him as a man among men.

"It was flattery," she said.

"Do you mean that it was not sincere?"

"In a way it was."

In another letter, written by her after her arrival in Chile, which was introduced by the prosecution to show that she still thought much of De Saulles, in spite of what she had told of suffering at his hands, the young woman sent snapshot pictures of the child to De Saulles and told how well he was. She suggested in this letter, in the Summer of 1915, that the boy often said he wished he could be with his father at the Yale Club. In this letter she asked that the boy should be "inscribed" for school, and he later was registered as a student at an exclusive boys' school at Groton, Conn.

She was questioned at length regarding one of her earlier letters from London on June 29, 1914, in which she addressed her husband as "Dearest, Darling Dinky," and said:

You have no idea how I enjoyed your perfectly wonderful letters. One of them specially has made me so glad that I took forward immensely to returning to my home which is you, Dinky, you need not be afraid that I shall regret having married you. On the contrary, the more I go out and meet more men I meet, the greater is my thankfulness that I belong to you, Dinky. I knew I'm horribly selfish to be off by myself having a good time, and to have taken Toodie away from you, but you will forgive me, won't you, and think that I'm very young, and that all my friends in New York were so old, the youngest being dear old Louise, who was a woman of 30 when your wife was only 19. Here I have been mostly with girls and boys of my own age, people to whom life is still a rosy dream, and not so frightfully real and earnest as it becomes to those who have passed their first youth.

The Joy of Living.

I am playing in the sunshine, forgetful of everything save the joy of living. I feel so young and cheerful, and I have such a wonderful feeling in my heart, that at the slightest sign of weariness, or should any clouds disturb my sunshine, I have you to go back to and your strong arms to hold me. Oh, Dinky, it will be such a wonderful homecoming for me, and I'm so glad I came away, because I've learned to appreciate you and your goodness. I shall be so glad to settle down in our little home, and won't we be happy in it! Dinky, it will be too wonderful!

You wrote an awfully sweet letter to Auntie, but it has upset me frightfully to think you are worried about me—don't you trust me any more? You seem to be afraid suddenly that some one will run away with me. Jack, if you don't believe me loyal, at least give me the credit of having a very good head on my shoulders, and a good insight into characters, and I am exceedingly careful as to whose invitations I accept and whose I refuse, and I always know when I can go out with a man.

By the way, I saw Elsie Janis at the Palace. She is scoring an immense success. You will be glad to hear Ostend appeals to me strongly—the bathing, the Casino, lots of dancing, the races, &c. They still gamble there, but that doesn't make any difference to me. I have vague ambitions to run down to Biarritz for one week. There are crowds of people going that I know, and several people have begged me to go. That would be in August, before going back. I shall try to persuade Billy and Maria to go as chaperons, if I have any money left by that time.

Mooney is over in Ireland for her holiday, which lasts two weeks. She does not come back until the 11th of July. I miss her most frightfully, as she did everything for me. I've got a beastly English trained nurse meantime, which I loathe, she's as fat as that old German thing.

Believed in Flattery.

"Did you think all those things about your husband—that he was manly and so forth, when you wrote that letter?" she was asked.

"I thought the best way to keep a husband was to flatter him to death."

Mr. Weeks asked that the answer be stricken out.

"Yes, strike it out," said Justice Manning. "Your answer is not very responsive. Do you wish the jury to understand that you were not sincere in those statements?"

"I flattered him in order to hold him."

"But were you sincere?"

"I think I was."

"Were you unhappy when you wrote that letter?"

"I was."

"Were you unhappy at Ostend where you said you were having such a good time."

"I was bored to death."

After she had got home from her second visit to England in 1914, during which the hotel clerk had asked her which Mrs. De Saulles she was and her husband, according to her story, had practically deserted her, she wrote a cheerful letter and insisted yesterday that she was undergoing intense mental suffering at the time. In this she wrote:

New York seemed so bright and cheerful coming up, the streets so lighted, and when I got home to my Toodie boy my heart almost burst with joy. He threw his arms around my neck and hugged me and kissed me till it thrilled me so it almost made me cry. It was the first home-coming I ever really had to my own little home. Dinkie, if you had been there I should have died, my happiness would have been so complete. That God-loved child—he is too wonderful—he called Bombom to go to France to bring daddy home. I said daddy couldn't come back. Then he looked so sad and said: "Poor Toodie." He runs to your door and knocks and says: "Daddy, may I come in?" He talks and talks about everything. He won't leave me for a minute and says: "I love you, my little Bombom," and kisses me and hugs me. He is too sweet. He looks splendidly, and Louise says he has been happy and well all the time. I know you long to see him.

Even when she wrote this letter, she said she was unhappy, and Mr. Weeks asked:

"In view of these letters, whose expressions are invariably affectionate, when would you say that you were unhappy with your husband; what period does your unhappiness cover?"

"I can't say. Those things came gradually."

First Letter of the New Year.

The following letter from her, written on Jan. 3, 1915, was then read:

My Darling Dink: This is the first letter I write this year, and the first wish is for your welfare and your success. I think of you all the time, and am so anxious to know how you are getting on. You are a lazy Dink—you ought to write to your wife.

New Year's night we went to the first Friday evening dance, and we missed you dreadfully. Maurice was feeling splendidly. He came off the wagon for the occasion. Louise and I had every one at our feet, and we danced till we had none left to stand on. Fowler went with us.

Maurice called for those funny punches that you liked—those Southern things that taste like dirty water and look like diluted milk—and we drank them to your health. I tried to drink mine, but all I could do was to taste it. Charlie came to say goodbye this afternoon; he is going out West again. I am enclosing a letter that I opened thinking it was a bill, the envelope looked so formidable. I am sorry. Jack gets more wonderful every day, but he needs his daddy very badly, so as to keep him from being a molly-coddle. He is a beautiful fat lazy thing, and he likes to have me pet and love him. Who does he take after? Please write, Dinkie, even if it's a card. Send us cards with soldiers.

Lots and lots of love and many wishes for a wonderful year, from your little wife, BLANQUITA.

It was this letter that brought out the remark that she did not dance with her heart.

"Did you think at the time when you went to Chile on board the Calamares that your married life was ended?" asked Mr. Weeks.

"I thought it was morally at an end."

"Do you mean that you intended that you would never live together again as man and wife?"

"I thought that if I was leaving him, I wouldn't."

"My duty demands that I ask this question. Is it not a fact that after the birth of your son you did not live with John De Saulles as man and wife?"

"No."

"Did you make that statement to Mrs. Heckscher?"

"I did."

"And it was untrue?"

"She was always trying to pry into my family affairs."

"Did you not tell a woman that you did not care what women De Saulles went with, so long as he left you alone?"

"That is a lie."

Mr. Weeks showed her a letter written by De Saulles to her, and asked her if she remembered it.

"I remember it well," she said.

Thought Letter Rude.

It was read to the jury. This letter, written in 1916, said that he had taken "The Box" for her because he liked the place. In it he wrote:

For the last four years you have refused to live with me as my wife. You have shown me no consideration whatever, and have been disrespectful and rude. In no way have you been playing the game for my sake, that's sure. If you won't play it for Jack's, I don't know what will appeal to you. In entering the new house I am getting for you, you must turn over a new leaf.

"You remember that letter?"

"Yes, very well. I thought it was very rude."

"Since the birth of your boy, were you a real wife to De Saulles."

"Yes."

Mr. Weeks questioned the defendant about her expenditures on clothes, after reading the following letter, the date of which was not fixed:

My Own Dar: It was so nice to hear your voice today. It made me think you were not so far away. Did you have a nice trip? I thought of you all the time and tried to imagine how far you were on your way. You will laugh and think I am telling stories. I am not.

Johnel kept us awake all night. He started in at 1 o'clock. The minute the light was turned on he would stop crying. When turned off he would resume a voice that must have been heard a block away from here. He was purely naughty, and he kept that up until 5 in the morning. Imagine. When the room would be lighted he would start to talk and coo and blow kisses.

I do hope everything will turn out well, my Dadda; you of all people deserve it, you have worked and waited so much. I feel so badly spending so absurdly on clothes when you are denying yourself so many things you like. Never mind, Dadda, I won't do it again, and please forgive me. They were so pretty that I stopped not to think. I feel lost without you. Please come back just as soon as you can. Johnel and I kiss you tenderly. BLANQUITA.

But She Liked the Clothes.

She said that she felt that she should not have paid so much for the clothes, but that she liked them very much and was spending her own money very largely. It had been shown on the previous day that De Saulles had obtained nearly $40,000 from her in checks out of her estate of $100,000.

Mr. Weeks questioned the young woman closely as to the events of the period after the shooting of her husband. He referred to accounts in the newspapers two days after the shooting in which her life with De Saulles was told in detail almost as full as it has been brought out on this trial. He said:

"Do you remember the story of your life printed in newspapers of Aug. 6?"

"I saw it afterward."

"Did you give Mr. Uterhart the information from which these accounts were written?"

"I do not remember. I think he got it from Mrs. Iglehart and Mrs. Flint."

"Did you read how he said, 'If I don't get a jury to acquit this girl on the story she has told me, I'll hand my certificate to practice law to the Judge'"

"I don't remember reading that."

Mr. Weeks began to go in great detail into the financial affairs of the De Saulles household, showing how many of the bills De Saulles had paid. After a great many transactions had been gone into particularly, Justice Manning said:

"I don't see the reason for this. The husband is obligated to support the wife."

Mr. Weeks said the testimony was intended to contradict the contention of the defense that Mrs. De Saulles had paid all the bills. To shorten the matter, Justice Manning asked Mrs. De Saulles if her husband had paid part of the household expenses. She said:

"Yes, he did."

"Most of them?"

"No, I think I paid most of them."

Further questions brought from Mrs. De Saulles the information that they had lived in style in their home in East Seventy-eighth Street with three servants, and that her share of the expense in the parts of 1915 and 1916, when she lived there, was about $12,000.

Mr. Weeks questioned her about a ring given to her by August Heckscher, who had been greatly pleased by the work of De Saulles in finding a purchaser for the Manhattan Hotel property. Mr. Weeks asked her if she had not later turned in the ring to Charlton's for $8,000 and purchased a still more expensive ring. She said:

"When I got the divorce I offered the ring back to Mr. Heckscher, and he refused to accept it."

"Then you kept it?"

"Yes."

"And you later turned it in to Charlton's for a still more expensive ring?"

"Yes."

"How much did that one cost?"

"Twenty thousand dollars," Mrs. De Saulles answered.

The Ring for Mother.

The courtroom gasped. Mr. Uterhart said his client had evidently misunderstood the questions. Justice Manning then questioned her and brought out that the ring she had received from Heckscher was worth between $400 and $500; that she had turned it in with other money and property to make up $10,000; that her brother William had added another $10,000; and that they had bought a $20,000 ring for her mother for a birthday present.

Mr. Weeks pursued financial transactions for a while longer and then suddenly asked in a different tone:

"Mrs. De Saulles, when did you first learn that you had killed your husband?"

"When Dr. Wright told me about it in the Mineola Jail."

"Did he tell you that you had shot your husband in the back?"

"Did I?"

"I am asking you."

Mrs. De Saulles said that she did not know it was the fact. She said the doctor had not told her so.

"What part of your husband's body is the last you remember seeing?"

"His eyes."

"Not his back?"

"No."

Mrs. De Saulles was asked who was the first person she saw when she entered "The Box."

"The baby," she said.

"Did you speak to him?"

"I do not remember."

"Did he speak to you?"

"I do not remember."

"You made no effort to run off with him?"

"I do not remember."

"Did your husband come with outstretched hand?"

"I could not possibly say."

Mrs. De Saulles was asked, incident by incident, of the events following the shooting, but each time she answered that she did not remember. Finally the District Attorney said: "Don't you think it is strange that you cannot remember what occurred during those ten days?"

"I think it very strange," she replied.

Mrs. De Saulles could not remember hiring her lawyer, getting bail for her maid, telling the story of her life, or doing any of the innumerable things that occurred in the busy time following the shooting. To her great relief Mrs. De Saulles was finally allowed to leave the stand. The defense then called her son's nurse, Mrs. Ethel Whitesides O'Neill. She said that she remembered, during the second year of the couple's married life, when De Saulles opened a large envelope with a photograph of an actress in it, autographed to him. He handed it to Mrs. De Saulles, she said, with the words:

"Look, Blanca, at this picture this actress has sent me."

"What right has a woman to send you her picture when she knows you are married?" exclaimed Mrs. De Saulles, according to the nurse. She told how Mrs. De Saulles, when she was in South Bethlehem, Penn., after waiting in vain at the railroad station for her husband, who had promised to come, had been greatly distressed.

"I saw her kneel by the bed where the baby was lying," Mrs. O'Neill said, "place both her hands on its breast, and say: 'Oh, Toodles, father doesn't love us!'"

Mrs. O'Neill said that Mrs. De Saulles was plump and rosy when she first knew her. She was asked if Mrs. De Saulles had changed much when she saw her in the Mineola Jail. She said:

"I did not know her. I walked right past her without recognizing her."

"How had she changed?"

"She was very much paler and thinner."

Miss Isabel Flaherty, a graduate nurse, said she had been with Mrs. De Saulles when the child was born. She was asked as to Mrs. De Saulles's physical condition when she knew her. She said:

"She was in very good physical health."

"How about her coloring?"

"She had color in her cheeks all the time and sometimes her color was high. I considered her extremely pretty."

An affidavit was read from Felipe Cortez telling of the automobile accident in which Mrs. De Saulles had suffered the second fracture of the skull.

Mrs. Maude Cowan, a graduate nurse, who attended the baby at the Hotel Gotham after the couple had been divorced, said that she asked for $28 a week, but that Mrs. De Saulles insisted on paying $35 a week, saying that the "position was one of terrible responsibility." Mrs. Cowan said that when the boy returned from the father, who had the privilege of being with him three hours a day in the afternoon, he was disagreeable, dirty, defiant, usually had his pockets full of candy, and was sometimes sick afterwards. Miss Amalia Errazuriz, a sister of the defendant, was called as the next witness, but court was adjourned before she reached the stand. The trial will be resumed at 10 o'clock this morning.

GARY SEES MONROE DOCTRINE IN EAST

Japan's Rights in China, He Says, Like Those of United States in Latin America.

JOINT ACTION IS NEEDED

Commission from Tokio Declares China Must Be Saved for Good of the World.

Japan, speaking through her Special Finance Commission to the United States, at a dinner given to its members at the Hotel Plaza last night by American financiers, urged the participation of America in a joint plan for the development of China, with due respect to the terms of the Lansing-Ishii agreement, "for the good of China, of Japan, of American and of the world." The Lansing-Ishii agreement, against which China has filed protest, was defended by spokesmen of both Japanese and American interests. On behalf of the Japanese Mission, Y. Yamashita, General Manager of the Sumitomo Firm of Osaka, said that Japan did not intend the exploitation of China against her wishes, "any more than you here in the United States intend such a thing," but that all that Japan said to China was that she must become prosperous and self-governing.

E. H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, defended the Lansing-Ishii agreement and declared that, in setting forth that because of the propinquity of position Japan had certain interests in China recognized by the United States, no more was said than was set forth in the Monroe Doctrine as the special interests, because of propinquity, of the United States in the Latin-American countries. Judge Gary said that he considered that China had no just cause for protesting the agreement, and that her action in doing so was based upon a misunderstanding.

"I conceive it to be of the highest importance," said Judge Gary, "that all questions between the United States and China, the United States and Japan, and Japan and China, be settled on a fair and permanent basis. China has filed a note of protest against the Lansing-Ishii agreement, and that has created temporarily a stir in official circles.

"I think the protest was based upon a misunderstanding. Not being a party to it, China was not bound by it, and I believe that her action was not so much a formal protest as a reservation of the right of protest if at any future time she wished to do so. The part of the Lansing-Ishii agreement to which China is said to have taken exception is that part which says that the United States recognizes that, due to propinquity, Japan has certain interests in China. Those terms can be no more objectionable than the terms of the Monroe Doctrine as to our interests, because of propinquity, in the Latin-American countries."

Baron Tanetaro Megata, head of the commission, devoted a large part of his address to a discussion of the Chinese problem. He told the American financiers that New York had become the money market of the world, and said:

"I might suggest the possibilities of profitable investment of American capital in China. China, with her huge latent resources, offers a very inviting field for development. The recent exchange of notes between Secretary Lansing and Viscount Ishii makes clear the position of America and Japan toward China, and should put at rest auspicions regarding Japan's attitude toward that nation. I earnestly hope that, when the time seems ripe, plans may be formulated for joint participation of the financial and industrial interests of the United States and Japan in the development of the resources of China. We would rely on your confidence in our honest intention to make such participation a mutual affair, and would invite your capital and your brains to join with ours on a basis of equality and fairness. I cannot help but feel that such joint endeavors would be not only profitable to our two countries, but of the greatest possible good to China. By dealing with her fairly we could be of the utmost assistance to her material prosperity. If China was prosperous industrially and commercially many of her present troubles would disappear."

In outlining the purposes of the mission Baron Megata emphasized the necessity of the establishment in the Far East of more co-operative business enterprises.

"Touching upon this suggestion," he said, "I may say that there are already in Japan a number of successful combinations of American-Japanese capital, technical skill, management, and marketing, conspicuous examples being the General Electric Company with the Tokyo Electric Company, Western Electric Company with the Nippon Electric Company, and the Brady interests of the People's Power and Light Company with the Osaka Gas Company.

"I wash to call attention to the great recent increase of trade between America and Japan. Before the war, exports to the United States amounted annually to about $92,000,000; imports from the United States to about $21,000,000. 1916 exports had risen to $170,000,000, imports from the United States to $52,000,000.

"New York is now the money market of the world. Nations from every quarter of the globe will look to you for financial aid. It is but natural that we of Japan should come to you on a mission such as our present one; we want to know the actual conditions from personal study, and we want to find the means of making Japan's name a familiar one in your international bookkeeping. America, with the far-reaching preparation it has been making in recent months for its active and vigorous military participation in the present world struggle, with its unlimited energy and firm determination at this momentous time, has given Japan a great stimulus toward increased co-operative action for an early termination of the war.

"I wonder if my American friends realize that, at the beginning of the war in Europe, scarcely two years had elapsed since the Imperial succession in Japan. There was no hesitation, and eight days after Germany had violated Belgium Japan declared war. Since that time she has been carrying on her part; she has, practically alone, cleared enemy naval bases from the Pacific and Indian Oceans, and has kept and is keeping those seas open to the commerce of the Allies; she has convoyed Australian contingents from Sydney and Melbourne to the Suez Canal; her destroyers, along with those of the Allies, are guarding the Mediterranean. As to financial aid, we have already furnished 1,100,000,000 yen, in spite of the fact that this amount considerably exceeds the specie which Japan has obtained since the beginning of the war. Many of our merchant vessels have been sold or chartered to allied countries, others have been and are carrying munitions and other supplies for them."

Mr. Yamashita said that Judge Gary had admirably expressed the situation.

"We do not mean to exploit China against her intrests," he added. "We have no more designs against China than you here in the United States have. All that we ask of China is to become prosperous and self-governing. It is with these ideas that we ask your co-operation in the development of China. And not only in China. It is an industrial marriage between the United States and Japan, with nothing but love and good feeling between us, that we suggest."

The menu served was meatless and wheatless. The following, members of the Japanese Special Finance Commission were the guests of honor: Baron T. Megata, O. Matsumoto, T. Sakatchi, Baron B. Ito, Dr. S. Hishida, U. Yonevama, Y. Yamashita, C. Koike, and K. Matsumoto, representative of Yasukawa Mining Company.

WILL USE LESS WOOL IN WOMEN'S CLOTHING

Makers, Designers, and Dealers Accept Suggestions of Federal Economy Board.

More than 350 manufacturers, style creators, and retailers of women's apparel from many sections of the country met yesterday at the Waldorf and formally approved the plan of the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense, for the elimination of non-essentials in feminine attire. Yesterday's meeting was part of the nationwide program launched by the Government, looking to the conservation of the country's wool, large quantities of which will be required for the men of the army and navy.

The designers, makers, and sellers of wool clothing gave their approval to the recommendations that they effect a minimum saving of 25 per cent. in materials used in all classes of women's, misses' and children's outer garments. It also was the sentiment of the meeting that garment manufacturers should advocate the freer use of other materials, such as silk and cotton. Advertising and exhibitions to popularize the use of other materials were advocated. The trade interests also made it plain that the reforms asked by the Government a Economy Board would be featured in the Spring and Fall styles of 1918.

On motion of Ancell H. Ball of Best & Co., and seconded by Michael Freidsam of B. Altman & Co., a resolution was adopted unanimously indorsing all the recommendations outlined above. While the meeting was called primarily to deal with the future course of the women's garment industry, there were strong intimations that masculine attire would shortly feel the pinch of the wool shortage.

Franklin Simon acted as Chairman, and the principal speaker was Henry S. Dennison of the Commercial Ecopomy Board.

"Our main purpose," Mr. Dennison said, "is to cut out non-essentials. We have no legal authority. It is only through co-operation that we can work, and if we are successful, as we have been so far, we shall want no authority. The United States is in competition with an autocratic Government that makes efficiency its creed, and it is incumbent upon us to meet that efficiency.

"Our question has to do with the Spring and Fall of 1918, and the goods now being made must be used. The reduction of yardage is a vital necessity. The stock of wool on hand today is our starting point. If we have just enough to last us to 1918 that does not interest us in the least; we must figure on the supply for the duration of the war. If there is wool in Australia or elsewhere, it makes no difference to us.

"With the constant stream of troops going abroad we will have to have cargo space to supply those boys, and it is cargo space that means wool to you, and because of necessity you cannot get the Australian or other foreign wool."

MURPHY PAYS CALL ON JUDGE HYLAN

sweep of his hand. "All I want just now is fresh air."

Despite the declaration of Mr. Murphy that none of his visitors was interested in patronage, there was a buzz of excitement as a proposal pending before the State Civil Service Commission, to be considered at a meeting in Albany today, was being discussed. This proposal, if agreed to, would place three Tenement House Superintendents, now on the exempt list and removable by the incoming administration, in the competitive class.

Hylan Protests to Whitman.

This excitement somehow had communicated itself to the Hylan headquarters, where copies of urgent messages from Judge Hylan to Governor Whitman and the three members of the State Civil Service Commission, protesting against the plan, were made public. Judge Hylan said that the messages had not been sent at the instance of Mr. Murphy, but had been dispatched by the Mayor-elect from Brooklyn before he reached his headquarters or saw the Tammany chieftain at all. Here is the message to Governor Whitman:

Hon. Charles S. Whitman, Albany N. Y.:

There has been an application made to the State Civil Service Commission, which comes up on Nov. 28, placing the Superintendents of the Tenement House Department of New York City in the competitive class by the Municipal Civil Service Commission, and which permits present incumbents to continue without qualifying examination, which is grossly unjust and unfair. I wish you would use your good offices in the matter to the end that the new administration may have an opportunity to officially investigate.

JOHN F. HYLAN.

This message was sent by the Mayor-elect to the members of the State Civil Service Commission:

Concerning application coming before your commission placing the Superintendents of the Tenement House Department of New York City in the competitive class, and permitting present incumbents to continue without qualifying examination, is grossly unjust and unfair. I vehemently protest against its adoption, and request an adjournment until the new administration has an opportunity to officially investigate.

JOHN F. HYLAN.

Wagner Discusses Municipal Ownership.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, leader of the Democratic minority in the upper house, who has been intrusted with the task of framing the legislation necessary to carry out the municipal ownership program of the incoming administration and to abolish the Water Supply, Court House Site and Parole Boards, had a conference yesterday with Judge Hylan after the latter's talk with the Tammany Chief. Senator Wagner intimated that the municipal ownership legislation to be sought would be merely permissive. When he was asked whether the financial condition of the city would not prevent the new administration from entering upon any public ownership venture, Senator Wagner said:

"No, in my opinion the beginning can be made in a small way. I am not prepared to state just how. If certain funds appropriated for purposes which cannot now be carried out are made available by act of the Board of Estimate for other purposes, it has been calculated that there would be a margin of approximately $30,000,000 before the debt limit is reached. And, of course, any municipal ownership undertaking would yield an income almost at once, so that it could be taken out of the debt limit, thus creating a new margin for future needs."

Senator Wagner intimated that legislation to abolish the pay-as-you-go policy, at least as far as the public schools are concerned, in order to enable the Hylan administration to issue bonds for the construction of new public school buildings, would be submitted to the Legislature.

Thomas W. Churchill, former President of the Board of Education, had a conference with Judge Hylan yesterday regarding a proposal to amend the statute creating a new Board of Education composed of seven non-salaried members, so as to increase the membership either to fourteen or twenty-one, or to provide for a salaried board of seven. It is the opinion of Mr. Churchill that the work of the Board of Education cannot be performed by seven members unless they are paid to devote all their time to its affairs.

Judge Hylan said later that he had reached no conclusion on the subject, but would discuss the matter with members of the Board of District Superintendents when that board has its conference with the new Board of Estimate on Saturday.

KAROLYI SEEKS PARLEYS.

Says He Intends to Get in Touch with British and French.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27.—Count Michael Karolyi, the Hungarian Opposition leader, has informed the Berne correspondent of Budapest Az Est that the main object of his visit to Berne was to get information regarding the feeling among the enemies of the Central Powers.

"I openly declare," he said, "that I intend to get in touch with the British and French, in order to explain to them that we are neither conquerors nor oppressors."

SAP GERMAN FORCES BY THRUSTS IN WEST

Secretary Baker Sees Effective Method in Relentless Attacks Which Wear Down the Foe.

EXPLAINS DRIVE IN ITALY

Declares Germans Thought to Divert Enough British and French Forces to Extricate Themselves.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—"The week just closed has been one very favorable to the allied arms," says the War Department's official communiqué issued today, reviewing military operations for the week ended Saturday.

"The success of the British offensive in the region of Cambrai and the steady resistance of the Italians in the face of the repeated attacks of the Austro-German forces are two factors which may be considered as correlative elements of one and the same movement.

"It is evident that the enemy took the offensive in Italy hoping thereby to extricate himself from the increasingly difficult position in which his forces find themselves in the west. The German higher command were apparently confident that, in order to save Italy from invasion, such important contingents of French and British troops would be detached from the western front as to render any further allied offensives in this theatre impossible. Though the French and British have both dispatched large contingents to Italy, this has in no way hampered the continuance of their offensive operations.

"It is the wastage of the enemy forces, the slow, yet relentless sapping of his man power by continued and sudden offensive thrusts, which must eventually result in the softening of his line in the west. This is the ultimate objective of the series of intensive offensives so successfully pursued by the Allies during the last six months, and is even more important than the gain of terrain.

"The military situation is dominated by the spectacular success gained by the British forces in their thrust toward Cambrai. By adopting new tactical methods, by evolving a strategy daringly conceived and brilliantly executed, the British forces have been able to record a greater success, when measured by captured terrain, than any hitherto achieved by either belligerent in the same space of time along the western front. While seemingly continuing his offensive engagements in Flanders by an intense artillery bombardment in the sector stretching from Ypres to the North Sea, Field Marshal Haig was able to mask successfully his plans for an offensive thrust between the Scarpe River and St. Quentin.

British Casualties Light.

"The usual preliminary artillery preparation was dispensed with. The elements of surprise so essential to victory played a large part in the successes gained. The British, by a preponderant numerical superiority in men and mobile material, by improvising the skillful tactical manoeuvring of an unusual number of tanks, and by co-ordinating with precision the deployment of cavalry, made use of these two arms to bear the brunt of the encounter. Infantry then was called upon to hold and consolidate the terrain gained. Thus the British were able to record a decided success with very great economy of munitions and slight casualties. Three successive German lines of defense on a frontage of six miles astride the Cambrai-Bapaume road were captured, and the Scheldt Canal in front of Cambrai was crossed.

"During the first day of the battle dull, dry weather greatly facilitated operations, which began at dawn on Nov. 20. Later bad weather set in, and torrential rains, accompanied by flurries of snow, held up the attack. The capture of the village of Fontaine Notre Dame, two and three-quarters miles west of Cambrai, marks the present limit of the advance. The British forces, while still pressing forward, are meeting with increased resistance. Severe fighting continues, and we may expect desperate attempts on the part of the enemy not merely to prevent any further British advance, but to regain, if possible, some of the lost ground.

"Cambrai, the centre of very important rail, road, and canal lines of communication, now comes under the immediate fire of British field guns, while the large calibre high velocity and naval guns can readily search out the country side for miles in the rear, harassing hostile territory and rendering the continued tenure of the city by the enemy difficult. To the right and left of the scene of the major operations on a front extending approximately to thirty-two miles the attacking forces have penetrated various strong points.

"The number of prisoners enumerated hitherto is over ten thousand, which exceeds the total British casualties.

"While the battle of Cambrai has resulted in so rapid and sweeping an advantage for the British forces, apparently without extensive preliminary preparation, it must not be forgotten that it was only made possible by the continued pounding of the German lines in Flanders. In the meantime the British have not ceased to keep the enemy busy in the Ypres salient, and gains of terrain are noted to the southeast.

Successful Coup by French.

"Along the front held by the French forces the latter have achieved a successful coup de main south of Juvincourt, in Champagne, resulting in the capture of some elements of enemy trenches and the taking of numerous prisoners. Lively artillery duels took place north of the Chemin des Dames and in the Verdun sector, where, as for several weeks past, the enemy continued to bombard the French positions in Chaume Wood.

"In the sector where our troops are training increased artillery activity is noted. Small detachments, while on patrol duty, have gained some useful experience.

"The Italian armies, now completing their reorganization, have been able to withstand the assaults of the numerically superior forces of the Austro-German divisions engaged against them. They have hitherto prevented any further invasion of the Italian plain. The enemy is continuing his efforts to break through. The line of the Piave has held firm. Along the lower Piave, where hostile forces gained a temporary foothold on the right bank of the river, they were driven off with great loss, thus rendering the Italian positions more secure.

"Along the plateau of the Sette Communi heavy fighting is going on. In the mountain regions, between the headwaters of the Brenta and the Piave, defensive operations have been well conducted, and the enemy has been unable to make any further progress. Strategic reserves, strengthened by allied contingents, have been constituted. The morale of the Italian forces is improving daily, and, while the situation is not wholly free from critical aspects, the defensive measures appear adequate to meet the situation.

"In Palestine the British forces under General Allenby are advancing rapidly on Jerusalem. They have now reached a point on the Ramaleh road approximately seven miles west of the city, while another force is bearing down from the north."

MANY LARGE GIFTS TO FUSION FUND

ALBANY, Nov. 27.—The election expense statement of the New York Publicity Committee, which advocated the election of the Fusion ticket in the New York Mayoralty campaign, filed today with the Secretary of State, showed receipts of $422,795 and disbursements of $415,165. According to the statement, however, loans from William Hamlin Childs, credited as receipts, left a deficit of $46,870.

Among the larger contributors were George F. Baker, $30,000; A. C. James, F. C. Converse, Henry C. Frick, W. R. Thompson, $25,000; T. C. du Pont, $22,500; Ogden Mills, Robert W. Goelet, George W. Perkins, $20,000; J. D. Rockefeller, $15,000; Charles H. Sabin, $12,500; William C. Morse, J. P. Morgan, William P. Hamilton, $10,000; J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., C. H. Mackay, $5,000.

The New York City and County Public Welfare Committee, which advocated the election of the Fusion ticket, reported receipts of $57,664 and expenditures of $57,590. The contributors included Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, $10,000; E. M. Anderson, $5,000; Helen Hartley Jenkins, $4,000; J. P. Morgan, F. W. Lamont, D. W. Morrow, Thomas Cochran, $2,500; Jacob H. Schiff, George F. Baker, Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. E. M. Anderson, $1,000.

Election expense statements of the State Women Suffrage Party, showing expenditures of $279,174, and of the State party opposed to woman suffrage, showing receipts and disbursements of $25,931, were filed with the Secretary of State today. The suffrage party statement recorded receipts of $304,439. Consequently, there was an apparent balance of more than $25,000. This was offset, however, by the statement that outstanding bills totaling $90,000 for billboard and other advertising purposes, remained unpaid. The largest contributor was Mrs. Imogene Thomas, $5,500. Other contributions included: Mrs. Thomas W. Lamont, $2,500; John J. Lapham, $2,000; Herbert Parsons and Conservation Commissioner George D. Pratt, $1,000.

ATTACK DISLOYALTY AT TEACHERS' RALLY

Educators and Others Begin Campaign to Eradicate Unpatriotic Instructors.

CHEER ROOSEVELT LETTER

Colonel Approves Efforts to Dismiss All from Schools Who Refuse to Sign Loyalty Pledge.

The beginning of an active campaign to eradicate disloyalty from the schools of New York drew 2,000 teachers last night to the De Witt Clinton High School, where they heard patriotic addresses by William G. Willcox, President of the Board of Education; Dr. William T. Hornaday, Dr. C. Ward Crampton, Thomas W. Churchill and Cleveland Moffett, who denounced disloyal teachers in unmeasured terms. Attacks on disloyalists, pacifists and alien Socialists were greeted with applause. When Dr. Hornaday read a letter from Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, approving the effort to obtain the dismissal of all teachers who refuse to sign the loyalty pledge, the audience cheered loudly.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the American Defense Society and brought together teachers from all parts of the city who desired to express their patriotism.

Cleveland Moffett declared that he had been informed that of the 18,000 teachers in the school system there are about 1,000 whose loyalty is not 100 per cent pure. He told of a teacher who, he said he had been informed, had made numerous disloyal statements both before and after this country entered the war.

"This teacher boasted to a man I can name that when he heard the Lusitania had been sunk he went out and got drunk to celebrate the German victory," said Mr. Moffett. The speaker also said he received a letter from a school teacher saying that twenty-seven teachers in a certain unnamed school heard the Principal of the school make disloyal statements in a conference.

"I tell you that before we get through with these disloyal teachers there is going to be use for a special, well lighted and well ventilated concentration camp," asserted Mr. Moffett.

Dr. Hornaday said that to his mind the 750,000 school children are in great danger.

"I feel as if they were threatened by a den of rattlesnakes," he said. "And I want to tell you why I feel that way. I feel that the ideas of alien Socialism instilled into the mind of an impressionable boy or girl at the wrong time for it to find permanent lodgment there is worse for the child than being bitten by a rattlesnake. A child bitten by a poisonous snake can be cured, but you put into the mind of a boy a set of totally wrong and pernicious ideas and keep them there until he grows up to manhood, and the chances are ten to one they will stay with him.

"The real dyed-in-the-wool Socialist is never happy. He is always knocking on something. Wherever he is, he is an iconoclast, a smasher of idols. Just now it happens to be the pet idea to curse the rich, as they are called, and the capitalists, and to say that this is a capitalists' war, which is an absolute falsehood. It is a war of the poor man much more than it is the war of the rich man."

Dr. Hornaday declared that the people of America have been far too lenient with the alien Socialist, and predicted that four years from now, "the Republicans and the Democrats of New York will have to bury all their hatchets and unite to beat the Socialists."

Mr. Hornaday attacked Henry R. Linville, President of the Teachers' Union, who, he said, sent to the Board of Education a document signed by eighty-six teachers, declining to sign a loyalty pledge.

The following letter from Colonel Roosevelt was then read by the speaker:

Sagamore Hill, Nov. 25, 1917.

Dear Mr. Hornady: I heartily approve the effort to secure the dismissal of all teachers who refuse to sign the loyalty pledge, or who in any way have shown the slightest symptoms of disloyalty to this nation, or of sympathy with Germany and the other foes of this nation at this time. A public school teacher should stand in loyalty and Americanism precisely where we expect an officer of the army or navy to stand, and should be held to an equally rigid accountability for the slightest symptom of disloyalty, or of failure in thoroughgoing Americanism. Sincerely yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Willcox's arraignment of disloyalists was received with applause. "There is no room for disloyalty here," he declared. "There is no room for jealous regard of individual rights and individual opinions. The great cause of human liberty and justice must sweep all before it and unite all our efforts, all our sacrifice and devotion in loyalty to humanity, loyalty and justice, loyalty to the fight, and loyalty to God. There can be no room for neutrality today."

Mr. Churchill said he took serious exception to those who talked of a large number of disloyal teachers in the school system unless those who uttered the charges could prove them.

CONFESSION MAY CLEAR 23 FEUD MURDERS

Gangster Admits Part in Killings and Implicates Groups in Manhattan and Brooklyn.

As a result of an Italian gangster's desire for revenge against members of his old group, who refused to befriend him in his hour of need, the District Attorneys' offices here and in Brooklyn have come into possession of information which, it is said, will lead to clearing up twenty-three murder mysteries and a number of other crimes which have been committed in New York, Brooklyn, Yonkers, and Philadelphia. The information was divulged in a confession made yesterday by Ralph Daniello, known as Ralph the Barber.

Daniello, who is under indictment by a Kings County Grand Jury for a murder a year ago last May, was brought here from Reno, Nev., several weeks ago by Brooklyn detectives. He came back with one thought in his mind—to get revenge on his old comrades.

According to the story Daniello told in the presence of Assistant District Attorney Ranaud, representing Mr. Swann, and Assistant District Attorney Warbasse, representing the Kings County office, he was a member of a gang which established a reign of terror in Brooklyn, and which through affiliations with gangs in New York and Philadelphia was even able to reach out and strike its enemies far off.

District Attorney Lewis, in commenting on the confession, characterized it as one of the most remarkable in the history of the police here. It is a revelation unequaled, he declared, in conditions in the underworld. In May, 1917, Daniello disappeared, shortly after a trial which found him innocent of the charge of robbery and abduction. About two months later, the police obtained evidence connecting Daniello with the murder of Louis Demaro, shot and killed May 7, in front of 123 Navy Street, Brooklyn. Then began a country-wide search for Daniello.

In the meanwhile the hunted man was in Reno. He was without funds, so he wrote to his comrades in Brooklyn, the members of the gang known as the Neopolitans. There was no response. Again he wrote and again there was no response. Then Daniello, not yet ready to believe his friends had forgotten him, wrote once more, this time begging help for his wife and his four children in Italy. When a communication from his wife made known to him the fact that the gang was deaf to appeals, he grew angry. In an incautious letter which was obtained by the police he made threats. Through it two Brooklyn officers who knew Daniello went to Reno and found Daniello. Once in the Raymond Street Jail in Brooklyn, it was not a hard matter to persuade him to talk. He made such startling disclosures that the Manhattan District Attorney was notified and Daniello was brought across the bridge. There he made a full confession.

According to Daniello, the "Neapolitans," together with a gang in Manhattan known on the lower east side as the "Sicilians," had combined for the purpose of controlling certain forms of gambling in the two boroughs. The men who were murdered by the gangs, he declared, were those who had incurred the wrath of proprietors of the gambling houses.

ARMY ORDERED TO AID MRS. HUMISTON

Officer Is Detailed to Co-operate in Her Investigations of Camp Surroundings.

DENIES DETECTIVES 'SPIED'

Woman Lawyer Says She Sent Couple to Learn Truth of Reports Concerning the Hotel at Upton.

Mrs. Grace Humiston, whose agents, James C. Atkins and the so-called Adeline Francis, were examined at Camp Upton last Sunday night after they had been found in a hotel where, they said, they were investigating allegations of the conditions at the camp, declared yesterday that in bringing out the facts regarding conditions around the camps, she was acting in co-operation with the commanding officer of the Department of the East on Governors Island. She said that the War Department, shortly after her public statements against the morals of some of the men in the military camps, had ordered Governors Island to co-operate with her in an effort to learn the truth.

"I sent Mr. Atkins and Miss Francis to Camp Upton to learn certain things I had been told concerning conditions at the hotel inside the camp lines not far from the division headquarters," Mrs. Humiston declared. "The testimoney of my agents has been given in full to officers representing the commanding officer of the Department of the East."

Mrs. Humiston declared she had not wished to give out a word regarding her investigations to the newspapers at present, but in view of statements made concerning the arrest of Atkins and his companion at Camp Upton she thought that in fairness to all concerned she felt a clear exposition of the facts in the case should be made at once.

Some of the facts which the affidavits of both Atkins, who was formerly a soldier under Major Gen. Bell in the Philippines, and Miss Francis, whose real name Mrs. Humiston has asked to be withheld, show that the couple went to the hotel inside the camp lines. They had no baggage. Miss Francis, who says she is 16 years old, was passed readily as the wife of the middle-aged Atkins. Atkins, in his affidavit, declares that the clerk asked him when he entered the hotel if the woman accompanying him was his wife. They went to a room, and were arrested later on the report which Sergeant Klein had made regarding their true identity.

In answering the questions of army officers from Governors Island, it is said the couple were positive that when arrested they were told they were being taken because they "were agents of Mrs. Humiston sent to spy on the camp." They were released after being questioned at headquarters, and came to New York the following morning.

"This is the fifth investigation where I have co-operated with officers from Governors Island," said Mrs. Humiston yesterday. "Governors Island was instructed by the War Department to help me investigate conditions around military camps, especially Camp Upton, as a direct result of charges which Mr. Fosdick, Chairman of the Committee on Morals for Military Camps, made against me, and after Secretary of War Baker had stated he did not regard my statements as charges against the army. I have co-operated in investigations with three different army officers from Governors Island already.

"The facts concerning the visit of Atkins and Miss Francis to the hotel would not have been given out by me to the press until the close of the investigation begun yesterday by army officers, except for the report of the affair which came from the camp. The report alleged that detectives from my office had attempted to spy on the camp, and had been arrested.

Investigation of Report.

"That is not true. No detective from my office went to the camp last Sunday night. But persons who had volunteered to get the truth as to certain alleged conditions at Camp Upton did go. They went to investigate the report that it was possible for men to take young girls to the hotel within the camp lines. The report I had was that if the girl looked 18 the man registered her as his wife; if she looked under that age they registered as brother and sister. The investigation succeeded in establishing the proof of the report.

"This man Atkins and the girl represented themselves as man and wife. They had no baggage, and were assigned to a room and no questions asked. Had it not been for the fact that they were recognized by a soldier who met Miss Francis while at a dance I gave a week ago, they would have been permitted to remain over night.

"Atkins went there solely because he considered it a duty and without compensation. He formerly was a soldier in the army. Some time ago he told me that he had a young daughter, and was interested in my work of saving young women. He told me conditions he knew of in Camp Upton which he said he had seen when he worked there as a carpenter. He was not the one who told me of the death of the two young girls at Upton. I had already gathered certain information which Mr. Atkins verified, and then he offered to prove that immoral conditions existed in the hotel at Camp Upton.

"'If you will select a girl you can trust and whom you will trust to me to take down to Camp Upton,' he said, 'I will go to the hotel, register as man and wife, and show you that it can be done.'

"I did not decide on a girl until half an hour before train time, then I called Miss Francis. Mr. Atkins had only seen Miss Francis once, and then had not talked to her. I told Miss Francis to go to Camp Upton with him, to allow him to register her as his wife, to take note of the room they were assigned to, and then to return at once to New York, where I would meet her. I told her not to say that she came from me, and that is why she evaded the questions asked.

"Atkins and Miss Francis went to the hotel. There, Mr. Atkins, as he says in his affidavit, was hesitating whether he should register her as his sister or his wife, when the clerk said, 'You want a room for yourself and your wife.'

Inquired for Taxicab.

"They went upstairs after conversing, in the course of which the clerk made the statement that 'this is a camp, not a hotel.' Afterward they came down again and inquired for a taxicab to take them back to New York. They had been recognized in the meantime by Sergeant Klein of the Cooks' and Bakers' Division, who reported them. When they were told that there was no other train, that they would have to hire a machine to go to another station where they could catch a late train, they went up to the room to discuss matters, and it was then they were arrested.

"When the military police came in Atkins asked the reasons for the arrest. He was told that 'You are spies for Mrs. Humiston sent to spy on the camp.' Then they were taken separately to headquarters, where a Lieutenant Brown and a Major questioned them. At no time did they see or talk to General Bell.

"They were released after being questioned. Miss Francis was taken back to the hotel where she was allowed to register under her own name and was given a room next to the one she and Mr. Atkins had taken. The next morning both of them returned to New York where they have told their story to me and to officers from Governors Island."

Mrs. Humiston said she had known the Francis girl for about two weeks and she was taking care of her.

At Camp Upton last night Mrs. Humiston's charges were characterized as but a part of the allegations she has been making against the soldiers for several weeks. It was pointed out that at the hotel it was a simple matter for persons without baggage to be given a room without being questioned. It was pointed out that frequently many visitors to the camp had missed their trains and it was necessary to seek accommodations for the night at the hotel.

KING JURY SELECTED, JUDGE RUSHES TRIAL

Testimony in North Carolina Case to Begin Today—Victim's Mother to be Witness.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. C., Nov. 27.—The first surprise in the progress of the trial of Gaston B. Means, under indictment charged with the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King in Cabarrus County last August, came with the unexpected completion of the jury a little before 7 o'clock tonight, after a court session of eight hours, and just as the list of names in the jury box was about to be exhausted.

Further indication that the trial is to be rushed as rapidly as Judge E. B. Cline of the Superior Court feels is consistent with justice was shown this afternoon when he informed E. C. Cansler, leading counsel for the defense, that there would be no Thanksgiving recess and that night sessions might be held; that he was due to convene a term of his court at Asheboro next Monday and would, if possible, complete the Means trial this week. This, however, is regarded as extremely doubtful if all the alienists and expert witnesses now present are placed on the stand.

The jury was selected from 144 names drawn from a hat, and but one remained when the last talesman, J. H. Reader, was passed. Most of the jurors are young men, but all are married except one. Eight are farmers, three are cotton-mill men, and one, J. Frank Goodman, is a member of the Board of County Commissioners.

In the process of selecting the jury, it developed that sixty-one of the men examined were prepared to say under oath that they had formed and expressed an opinion in the case; forty-eight of them were of the opinion, and had so stated, that Means was not guilty of the crime charged, and the remaining thirteen held the opposite view. This ratio of approximately four to one is said to represent the public opinion of the entire county.

Among the witnesses who have already arrived or are expected in the morning are the following: William C. Miller of the Northern Trust Company, William B. Gubbins, former private secretary to James C. King; Dr. William H. Burmeister, Coroner's physician of Chicago; A. L. Johnson, Secretary of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company; William Rockefeller, manager of the Chicago Beach Hotel; Hugh M. Garretson, assistant cashier of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank; James I. Ewing, handwriting expert, and A. B. Melville, an attorney. All those named are from Chicago.

Mrs. Anna Robinson, the aged mother of Mrs. King, did not appear today, but her attorney, P. C. McDuffy, who has represented her in civil actions and is now appearing with counsel for the prosecution, said that she would testify. Mrs. Mary C. Melvin, sister of Mrs. King, may testify in Means's behalf. In one of the civil actions brought against Means by Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Melvin appeared with Means and asked the court to make her a party to the suit. Again, she asked to have the court dissolve one of the civil actions her mother brought against Means.

The testimony of C. B. Ambrose of the Bureau of Investigation of the Federal Department of Justice may furnish a surprise at the trial. The nature of his testimony has not been disclosed.

The taking of testimony will begin at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

OVER $600,000,000 IN ALIEN PROPERTY

Estimates Received Indicate the Total to be Taken May Reach a Billion.

MORITZ ROSENTHAL NAMED

Appointed General Counsel to Custodian—F. P. Garvan Is Among Others Appointed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Estimates, based on scattering returns received from corporations, banks, and warehouses, indicate that the money and property in this country belonging to Germans and subject to sequestration by A. Mitchell Palmer, as Alien Property Custodian, will exceed $600,000,000, and may approach a billion. Under the terms of the law reports of property and money held by German citizens living abroad must be reported to the Alien Property Custodian by Dec. 5, after which time the property and money will be taken over by the Government.

Mr. Palmer has completely organized his office to take charge of the enormous business which will flow through it in the next year. At present there are 250 persons employed, and the number will be increased to 400 by the middle of December.

Some of the important appointments were announced today. Many of the men holding responsible places, especially in the legal departments, are serving without pay.

Moritz Rosenthal of New York was appointed general counsel today. Mr. Rosenthal was for many years a member of the Chicago bar. He was counsel for the packers in the immunity case, and also counsel for the Standard Oil Company in the $29,000,000 fine case, and in the equity suit brought by the Government to dissolve that company. He moved to New York several years ago to become a partner of the banking firm of Ladenburg, Thalman & Co. He will be in charge of the legal department of the Alien Property Custodian, and will have associated with him a number of lawyers from various parts of the country who have volunteered their services.

Among the lawyers already working with Mr. Rosenthal are James E. MacCloskey, Jr., of Pittsburgh, Penn., general counsel for the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company and other Pittsburgh corporations, and W. C. Coleman, of Baltimore, Md.

Francis P. Garvan of New York is named Director of the Bureau of Investigation. Mr. Garvan was Assistant District Attorney of New York under District Attorney Philbin, and for eight years was chief of the Homicide Insurance, and Business Division under District Attorney Jerome. He tried the Patrick and Molineaux cases. He will supervise the investigation leading to the discovery of al lenemy property in this country, and in conjunction with the Department of Justice will have charge of the prosecution of offenders under the Trading with the Enemy act.

Other appointments are:

Scott, Robert T., attorney, formerly with Senator Underwood, secretary to the Alien Property Custodian.

Peter, Julius C., of Detroit, assistant to President of Detroit Trust Company, secretary to Director, Bureau of Trusts.

Stearns, Robert E., with J. J. Danzig & Co., New York, bankers and brokers, acting chief, Division of Pledged Property.

NEW MAIL REGULATIONS.

Government Soon to Issue Rules Governing Foreign Communications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Regulations to govern the transmission to or from the United States of communications not in the regular course of the mails will be issued within a few days under the Trading with the Enemy act.

Ship and consignees' mail consisting of bills of lading and similar business documents probably will not be forbidden when destined to neutral countries, and considerable latitude will be allowed commercial travelers and other representatives of business concerns to carry in luggage letters relating strictly to their business. Most other communications will be forced into mail channels to be subjected to censorship. Communications to enemy or ally of enemy countries are prohibited except by license of the War Trade Board.

The customs division of the Treasury will have charge of the administration of the regulations.

BIG ARMY HOSPITAL FOR STATEN ISLAND

Fox Hills to be the Site of Receiving Station for Men Wounded in France.

CAPACITY 1,500 TO 2,500

Convalescents to be Distributed Thence to Rehabilitation Depots, General Gorgas Explains.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Surgeon Gen. Gorgas announced tonight the selection of Fox Hills, Staten Island, N. Y., as the site of a military receiving hospital from which wounded American soldiers will be distributed to the reconstruction and rehabilitation hospitals which are soon to be established.

The Staten Island institution, which will have a capacity of from 1,500 to 2,500 beds, will be situated on an elevation overlooking the entrance to New York Harbor, near enough to the Quarantine Station to make possible the transfer of the wounded with a minimum of delay.

"The establishment of the receiving hospital," said the Surgeon General's statement, "marks the beginning of a comprehensive plan that is being worked out for the reconstruction and rehabilitation of our soldiers who are disabled in the line of duty. The Staten Island hospital will be used only for purposes of distribution. As the men are received there, they will undergo thorough physical and mental examinations by medical officers, a complete history will be made of each case, and requirements of the individual cases studied. Then, as soon as this is completed, the man will be transferred to a general or special treatment hospital.

"During his stay in the hospital the soldier will be given light work, which will aid in his convalescence, and, where necessary because of his disability, he will be given special training for new occupations, under the direction of vocational experts. He will be fitted for a trade for which he is peculiarly adapted, and at the time of his discharge it will be the duty of the Government to assist him in returning to his proper place in industry, and of various civil organizations further to supervise him until he has been completely rehabilitated—that is, placed once more on a firm economic foundation in society.

"The general and special hospitals are now being selected in various parts of the United States. So far as possible, the soldiers will be sent to places near their own homes. As the additional sites are decided upon they will be announced by the Surgeon General."

You need the "Noiseless"—whether for your secretary's desk or for a staff of stenographers in the open office. The "Noiseless" doesn't simply lessen noise—it kills noise. It actually writes in a whisper.

You'll appreciate it at once: the "Noiseless" in full, swift action—and not a click to be heard. Right at your elbow it's going top-speed ahead—and you can confer in subdued tones, you can hear and speak over the 'phone—you can think.

Put Your Motoring on a War Basis With the Franklin Car

SOME people think they can solve the thrift question by talking about it. The War situation is actual and real. Every man feels it is his duty to help the country, but he tells you what the Government ought to do instead of taking the first practical step—meeting the plain facts in the things close at hand; things he buys and uses and pays to maintain.

Gasoline and rubber are prime necessities of War. Yet many a car owner who talks thrift is actually destroying fifty percent more of these commodities than his motoring should require.

War Time Activity Demands Economy in Motor Car Operation

Ask the man who gets eight, ten or twelve miles to the gallon of gasoline and five or six thousand miles to the set of tires. He probably has the feeling—almost the conviction—that he can do better with the Franklin, but it is easier to close his eyes to the facts and wonder whether the Franklin's record for gasoline and tire saving is really and actually true.

He does not investigate—he takes refuge in a general doubt.

Another way he has of side stepping the issue is to argue that in these days it is better economy to hang on to his old car. He knows how wasteful it is to run, yet he overlooks the fact that the Franklin saving in gasoline, tires and oil would more than carry his investment in a Franklin Car. Perhaps he says he will meet conditions by using his car less. He forgets that while the average car is standing idle its depreciation offsets any reduction in running expense he could make.

He ought to see that it is true conservation for him to put his motoring on a War basis now; clean up his old car proposition; take a fresh start and get an automobile that actually fits conditions as they are today.

War time thrift and economy are possible to every motorist without reducing his mileage or curtailing the use of his car.

War time activity makes this fact of vital interest. Thousands of men are finding increased demands upon their time and more work for their automobile.

Franklin Holds World's Records for Thrift and Efficiency

The Thrift and Efficiency Standards of the Franklin Car are matters of public record.

On May 1st, 1914, 94 Franklin Cars in all parts of the country averaged 32.8 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

On May 1st, 1915, 137 Franklin Cars averaged 32.1 miles to the gallon.

On July 13th, 1917, 179 Franklin Cars established the remarkable average of 40.3 miles to the single gallon of gasoline.

All records under Standard Efficiency Test Rules.

In the Yale University Fuel Economy Test, Professor Lockwood and Arthur B. Browne, M. E., established the fact that the Franklin Car uses less gasoline per mile than any other car with six or more cylinders.

On November 17th, 1915, a Franklin Car covered 1046 miles on a single gallon of oil—a run from New York to Chicago.

Right Now Is the Time for All Motorists to Investigate the Franklin

Franklin Economy and Efficiency, as demonstrated by these records of low gasoline consumption, continue throughout the car. Franklin owners' individual tire mileage reports, for instance, over a period of five years, give a national average of 10,203 miles to the set.

The value of the Franklin Car as an investment is clearly shown every time you find a used Franklin for sale. It brings a 20% higher price than any other fine car in proportion to its first cost and the use it had.

The time is close at hand when the motorist must choose between a restricted use of his car or meeting conditions in a constructive way with the economical Franklin.

REX BEACH SAYS:—

"'The Winds of Chance' is an Alaskan story written by request. It is easy enough to write about the North Country, for I know it pretty well. A romantic glamour attaches to it, and it has a lure peculiar to itself. When I first took up writing I was a young man just back from the North, and naturally I wrote about the life that most vividly impressed me. But all the time I was thinking about a moving drama that was enacted during the early days of the Klondike—one upon which I never touched—and finally I saw a story in it—'The Winds of Chance'. I saw that it offered something more than a tale of adventure and that the background was a cross-section of real Alaskan life. Then I recognized the figure of 'Poleon Doret' in the cast. He wouldn't stay put in 'The Barrier'. You see now why I say the story was written by request."

Rex Beach

"The Winds of Chance," by Rex Beach, appears in Hearst's Magazine for December—Out today. It is another great story of Alaska, vibrant with adventure, intrigue and love. Be sure to read this thrilling tale.

SEES HUGE PROFITS IN SUBWAY DELAY

Service Board Counsel Says Interborough Halts New Lines for Dividends.

THREATENS DRASTIC ACTION

Commission Will Inquire Into Setbacks of Lexington Avenue and Seventh Avenue Branches.

A statement made public yesterday by William L. Ransom, counsel for the Public Service Commission, practically accused the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of deliberately delaying the completion of the Lexington Avenue and Seventh Avenue subways, so that the company may continue to reap enormous profits. The statement says in effect that the Interborough Company, regardless of the discomforts of the public because of the increasing congestion on the rapid transit lines, has made no proper effort to place the new lines in operation, and that the delay would probably continue unless drastic action was taken by the commission.

That such action is to be taken was made a part of the statement. At 2:30 o'clock today the commission will proceed to examine officials of the company, and will try to wring from them the true reasons why the two lines, that ought to have been in operation before Christmas, have been delayed to Jan. 15 at the earliest. "The inquiry," says the commission, "is expected to develop the extent, if any, to which the company is responsible for the delay."

Judge Ransom's statement reads:

"The commission has directed these hearings to ascertain whether the Interborough Rapid Transit Company is using all practicable diligence in completing the new lines and placing them in operation. The beginning of operation will put into effect the financial terms of the dual contracts, and tomorrow the investigation will seek the facts as to any disposition to delay that time.

"Last year the Interborough Rapid Transit Company earned $9,100,000 profits on $35,000,000 of outstanding capital stock—a profit of 25 per cent. Another Winter of congestion means another year of big profits for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and all of it will go to the company, as the financial terms of the dual contracts do not go into effect until the operation of new lines is under way. Then the Interborough Rapid Transit Company's profits will drop back to the $6,335,000 preferential, a marked decrease from last year's profits. The commission desires to ascertain whether the company is diligent in bringing about the commencement of the pool.

"Inquiries will be made as to the dates of orders, purchases, delivery, &c.; the efforts, if any, to obtain priorities on manufacture and shipment; and the prospective dates of operation for portions of the new lines."

The order calling for the inquiry does not limit the extent of it. Under its terms the commission may wander as it pleases into any by-road of the transit question, and it is expected that everything relating to the frequent delays in work on all of the uncompleted lines will be minutely inquired into.

It is certain that one part of the inquiry will be devoted to asking the Interborough officials about the number of passengers on the company's lines who have not been accommodated with seats during the non-rush hours, and whether this number has not been increasing steadily. It was said at the office of the commission yesterday that the hearing was regarded as of the utmost importance. It may lead to a quickening of the work on all of the lines now in course of building.

Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the Interborough, said last night that while he was unable to reply to "what Judge Ransom may try to bring out" at the hearing, he knew certainly that it could not be shown that the Interborough purposely had delayed completing new subway lines in order that the city might not share in transit profits through the dual contracts.

"The fact that the city has been able to complete its rough construction work before we have been able to finish our highly technical end, requiring the services of many skilled engineers and expert mechanics," Mr. Hedley said, "is no reflection upon us. We are just as anxious as anyone to put these huge new properties into operation, but the extent to which manufacturers of cables, interlocking signal devices and other technical equipment have sidetracked our work—very properly—to give Government needs the right of way has entailed delay for which we are not responsible. In addition, there have entered directly into the nation's service not only thousands of skilled mechanics, but a very large proportion of the expert engineers necessary to the completion of our part of the work."

Macy Employes Give Ambulance.

Employes of R. H. Macy & Co. paraded with martial music and flying banners from Fifty-first Street and Broadway yesterday morning to Madison Avenue, thence to Thirty-fourth Street, and across town to the store, at Thirty-fourth Street and Broadway, escorting a splendidly equipped ambulance, which the employes purchased by subscription among themselves and have presented to the Government for the use of the Red Cross on the battle fronts of Europe.

FRENCH COMPANY IN MOLIERE FARCE

"Theatre du Vieux Colombier" Successfully Installed in Remodeled Garrick.

JACQUES COPEAU AS SCAPIN

Highly Intelligent and Successful Innovations That Will Be Much Discussed.

LES FOURBERIES DE SCAPIN, Molière's comedy, in French. At the Theatre du Vieux Colombier.

Argante	Francois Gournac
Geronte	Louis Jouvet
Octave	Marcel Millet
Leandre	Jean Sarment
Zerbinette	Jane Lory
Hyacinte	Madeleine Geoffroy
Scapin	Jacques Copeau
Sylvestre	Marcel Vallee
Nerine	Eugenie Nau

The "Impromptu du Vieux Colombier," with which M. Jacques Copeau opens his first bill at the remodeled and renamed Garrick Theatre, is inspired by Molière's famous "Impromptu de Versailles," and contains not a few passages relative to theatric art which are taken verbatim from its original. But the ideas which this little skit promulgates are mainly those of M. Copeau. The duty of the actor is to realize his part, heedless of his personal success. That of the producer is to develop the inward beauty and force of the masterpiece in hand, ignoring public clamor for superficial or irrelevant entertainment. And when the play is thus worthily interpreted scenery is generally superfluous.

These ideas are all in the current of our general progress in theatric art; but the manner in which M. Copeau presents them is thoroughly original and stimulating to discussion. Before many weeks have passed the tenets of this "Impromptu" will be familiar topics in the fashionable and artistic life of the city. For the present the best point of approach to them is in what M. Copeau has actually accomplished in the Molière farce, which is the main portion of his first bill.

"Les Fourberies de Scapin" is a product of Molière's artistic maturity, having been written while his mind was more seriously occupied with one of his chief masterpieces, "Les Femmes Savantes"; but in its substance and treatment it harks back to the farces of his youth. These were modeled on the Italian comedy of masques with its conventional characters of Harlequin, Columbine, and the rest, and their plots were largely derived from the ancient Latin comedy. This arch rogue Scapin is in reality our old friend Harlequin, and the love affairs of his young masters read like scenes from Terence. In a word, we have here the farce of situation as opposed to the farce of character. Of dramatic development there is none, but there is plenty of theatric movement, which leaps with lightning rapidity from one ridiculous encounter to another, from surprise to surprise. The people of the play are incessantly off again, on again, and the climax is a hailstorm of blows from a cudgel.

In one sense Scapin has character. He loves mischief for its own sake, and deception for the sheer joy of inventing and practicing it. Evil inventions swarm in his brain like maggots in cheese. He is a veritable Iago of farce. But like the "taste" of a young friend of Henry James, his character is all bad. He lacks the light and shade of human nature, the interplay of reasoned motive, and genuine impulse. Active and richly fertile as are his inventions, they are wholly of the theatre. He has nothing whatever in common with comedy character as Molière elsewhere invented it.

M. Copeau deals honestly with his materials. Being a Frenchman nourished on the Comédie Française, (though sometimes poisoned by it,) he could not do otherwise than take this piece in the tempo of extreme farce. But on two points he betters his instruction.

In recent years, which the outer world is tending to simplify and to conventionalize mise en scene, the Théâtre Français has finally capitulated to scenic realism. Molière, whose stage was in many ways more bare of scenic appurtenances than Shakespeare's, is now enveloped in highly detailed sets. For the play in hand, the original scene was probably a simple stock piece—a public square. To reproduce it today would be to strike a note of crudity, needlessly disillusioning. M. Copeau has draped his stage with curtains in the manner long familiar on the Continent, and not unknown here. He thus achieves the essential simplicity and freedom of the master's stage with no jarring note.

Again, the actors of the Italian comedy of masques were also jugglers and acrobats, which is to say that they were lithe and graceful. M. Copeau, as he told us last year in his lectures, has made physical training basic in the development of his company. The contrast here with the ordinary actors of France (and of America) is extreme. In "Les Fourberies de Scapin" dexterity and lithe vigor are of the utmost importance, contributing largely to the smoothness, as to the swiftness, of the performance. It was by such innovations as these that the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier in Paris became recognized as a pioneer in classic and imaginative drama, much as the Théâtre Antoine was in modern and realistic drama.

M. Copeau, who plays Scapin, is really a marvel of agility and grace. There were times indeed when it seemed that his performance was all too rapid and rhythmical—too even and unbroken in tempo. The essence of the character, such as it is, is mentality. The thought ever precedes the act, and there are crises in which the best laid plans gang aft a-gley and have to be reconstructed on the spot. To sustain the physical rhythms is to belie the dominant mentality of this rascal, and so rob the situations of their best element of humor. Yet, on the whole, the performance is vigorously humorous, and everywhere it reveals a virtuosity in broad farce which, in a man of such high intelligence and delicate sensibility, is astonishing.

The performance of M. Louis Jouvet as one of the old men was in striking contrast. Physically decrepit as he was, and frequent victim to contending emotions of avarice, terror, rage, and humiliation, the psychology of the part had full scope and was admirably rendered. The recurrent cry, "Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère!"—a phrase as common in French as "To be or not to be" in English—was delivered with remarkable repression, yet with an infinite variety of comic effect.

The remainder of the company had less scope, but acquitted themselves with credit. As in the case of our Washington Square Players, the dominant note was of intelligent amateur feeling—a very rare and valuable quality in such an endeavor—which was limited at times, perhaps by deficiencies of authority and practical skill. The two ventures have, indeed very much in common, and the development of this company of the Vieux Colombier will be watched with profound interest and respect.

The performance was concluded by a pretty pageant of dancers who crowned a bust of Molière.

FRENCH AMBASSADOR ATTENDS

Women's Council of Theatre Also in Society Throng at Opening.

The social assembly at the opening was an interesting one.

The French Ambassador, Jean J. Jusserand and Mme. Jusserand, were in a box with Mr. and Mrs. James Stillman.

The Consul General of France, Gaston Liebert, Mrs. Philip M. Lydig, who is Chairman of the Women's Council of the Theatre; Mrs. J. West Roosevelt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Marquise de Polignac, Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, Miss Ida Tarbell, and Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, the other members of the council, were present. Also Mrs. Edmund Baylies, Miss Luisita Leland, Mrs. Percy Turnure, Mrs. Henry R. Winthrop, Mrs. William Crocker, and Miss Mary P. Eno.

The Board of Directors is made of Otto H. Kahn, Chairman; Robert Bacon, James W. Barney, Nicholas Murray Butler, Frederic Coudert, Paul D. Cravath, Andre de Coppet, William A. Delano, Robert Goelet, Arthur Iselin, Thomas Lamont, Clarence H. Mackay, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.; Augustus Thomas, Colonel Cornelius Vanderbilt, and H. R. Winthrop.

THE FLONZALEY QUARTET.

Opens Season with a New Viola Player—Dohnanyi's Quartet Played.

The Flonzaley Quartet began its series of subscription concerts last evening in Aeolian Hall before a large audience that signified by its numbers how firmly this organization has established itself in the admiration of lovers of chamber music. It may be, also, that it has come into an inheritance from the Kneisel Quartet, now retired. At all events, the fineness of its performance has won and has deserved a constantly widening recognition.

The quartet has suffered the loss of its original viola player, Mr. Ugo Ara, now serving in the military forces of Italy. His place has been taken by Louis Bailly, from France, who adds a fourth nationality to those represented by the players. He showed himself last evening to be a chamber music player of high attainments, evidently skilled in all the routine and detail of ensemble playing, and possessed of all the fine ideals of the Flonzaley Quartet in regard to finish, precision, and tonal balance, and producing an admirable viola tone.

The program comprised Mozart's quartet in A, a quartet by Ernst Dohnanyi in D flat, Opus 15, and Haydn's in D, Opus 20, No. 4. Dohnanyi's work has qualities that interest and please; qualities that commend it on a single hearing—not usually the ones that make for long survival. But the material is more substantial, of more definite musical value than that of some of this Hungarian composer's music heard here; and there is great skill in developing and molding it, as well as in setting it for the instruments. The instrumentation is beautifully made and uncommonly effective in sound. No one who knows Dohnanyi's work will have expected any excursions into the adventurous regions of modern harmonies, nor yet any deliberate reflection of the composer's nationality in any folksong elements. If any expected suggestions of Brahms in idea and treatment, such as appear in other of Dohnanyi's music, they found them only rarely.

The Flonzaley Quartet played this, as well as the works by Haydn and Mozart, with the finest finish and tonal fullness and beauty; and with great spirit. There was much well deserved applause.

OPERA REVIVALS NEXT WEEK

"Manon Lescaut" and "Daughter of the Regiment" Among Others.

Mme. Louise Homer is to return to the Metropolitan stage next Monday, when the famous American contralto will sing her rôle of Marina in "Boris Godunoff," with Didur and others, starting the opera season's fourth week. Familiar revivals are "Manon Lescaut" next Wednesday, with Caruso and Alda, who appeared in that opera last night at Philadelphia, and for Thursday of next week, "Le Nozze di Figaro," which was given recently in Brooklyn, with Hempel, Matzenauer, De Luca and others, the rôle of Cherubino, however, being here resumed by Mme. Farrar.

Florence Easton, in private life Mrs. Frances Maclennan, who once sang the first "Madame Butterfly" in New York, will make her first appearance as Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana" next week Friday, with Perini and Martin, followed by Caruso in "Pagliacci," with Muzio, Amato, Chalmers, and Bada. The first month of opera will be completed Saturday, Dec. 8, in a matinee revival of Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment," an elaborate production, with Hempel, Carpi, Scotti, and several more, in famous rôles last sung by Sembrich, Gilibert, and others fifteen years ago.

KITTY CHEATHAM APPEARS.

Wins Applause and Hearty Laughter in a Program Partly New.

Kitty Cheatham, who has made an art of gay little songs for children, especially at Christmas time, appeared at Carnegie Hall last night in a program composite of many familiar parts still new to a grown-up assembly, and other parts new to her own repertory, notably a series of classical arrangements with full orchestra, led by Edla Soeller, a Scandinavian woman conductor, who appeared last Summer in Central Park.

Miss Cheatham opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner," her audience joining in, as it did later in the "New Russian Hymn," and other national airs printed in a program folder. Miss Cheatham, in these "community songs," and in her incidental remarks, as when she quoted Stevenson's nursery rhymes as a prophecy of suffrage now fulfilled, held the attention of a great house and won from it frequent applause and hearty laughter. She gave also, without accompaniment, some American negro "spirituals" from her native Tennessee, with an intuitive touch of communicative sympathy rare in performances of this kind.

Among more elaborate numbers were Haydn's "A New Created World," Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite," and "The Little Shepherd" of Debussy.

J. R. MANN IN HOSPITAL.

Overwork Said to be Cause of His Illness.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—James R. Mann of Illinois, Republican floor leader of the House of Representatives, is at Johns Hopkins Hospital undergoing medical observation.

It was stated at the hospital that Mr. Mann was in no serious danger and that overwork was the cause of his visit. He is reported to be "resting comfortably."

Tina Lerner's Recital.

Miss Tina Lerner, who for a number of years has been contributing to the sum of pianoforte playing heard in New York, gave a recital yesterday in Aeolian Hall. Her playing disclosed the pleasing musical qualities that have heretofore won her admirers. Her fleet and brilliant technique and nice feeling for tone makes her playing of such pieces as the "Pastorale Variée," attributed to Mozart; Sgambati's gavotte, and Tausig's brilliant arrangement of Schumann's "Contrabandiste" very attractive; and Miss Lerner was wise to include also in her program a group of short pieces by modern Russians and another of brilliant concert études. The greater emotional exactions of Chopin's B minor sonata she did not wholly meet.

Minstrels on Blackwell's Island.

The annual Thanksgiving Day entertainment given at Blackwell's Island under the auspices of A. Paul Keith and E. F. Albee of the Keith circuit, will take the form of a minstrel show this year. The performance will start at 10 o'clock in the morning, and the entertainers will include Sam Bernard, Blossom Seeley, Savoy and Brennan, Felix Adler, Dorothy Jardon, Conroy and Lemaire, and Adele Rowland.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

In conformity with their announced plan of adding new performers from time to time, the management of the Century Theatre announces that Elsie Janis will join "Miss 1917" next Monday night. She will remain at the Century until it comes time for her to depart for London.

Gene Buck is the author of the sixth edition of the Ziegfeld "Midnight Frolic," which will be seen on the New Amsterdam roof some time next month.

"What's Your Husband Doing?" now at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, will be produced in London at the end of the New York run.

Two hundred soldiers and sailors will be the guests of the City Club at tonight's performance at the Hippodrome.

BRITISH PAPER URGES THE NEED OF SHIPPING

Wants France to Curtail Private Trades and Italy to Use Ships Now Tied Up.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The Daily Chronicle in an editorial on the shipping tonnage problem says that the Germans are right in supposing that their least hopeless prospect of victory is that offered by submarine warfare. Pointing out that for the Allies the only one way of safety is to get more ships added than the submarines subtract, the paper says two things are needed—further success in anti-submarine warfare and a much larger supply of mercantile tonnage for essential needs.

To the latter end The Chronicle urges more controlled and serviceable use of all tonnage which the Allies already possess. Declaring that Great Britain so far is alone in having requisitioned the great bulk of her shipping for war purposes, the paper outlines the sacrifices she made in this way, and proceeds:

"We do not mention these facts for recrimination, but solely for the sake of reform Great Britain is as anxious as ever to do her best for her allies, carying wheat and coal for France and Italy and falling in with whatever is found necessary to facilitate transport of the coming American army, but when things have come to such a pass it is surely time that Italian ships lying up in dock at Genoa or elsewhere should take their part in the hazard of the seas, that the French Admiralty should requisition merchantmen and curtail their private trading in the same proportion as the British Admiralty has done, and that the United States, which during the war has developed a most extensive carrying trade in new waters, should recognize the absolute need of concentrating the whole of its resources on the problem of the 'Atlantic ferry.'

"Such changes would involve sacrifices for each of the allies concerned, but what all have to ask themselves is whether the winning or retaining of certain commercial advantages can justify the losing of the war, and the war may be lost unless in this sphere we all use our full resources without reserve."

GERMAN YARNS ABOUT US.

Anti-American Propaganda Started in Sweden and Switzerland.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Information revealing the extent of misrepresentation employed by Germany in an effort to inflame public opinion against the United States in neutral as well as hostile countries is reaching Washington. The propagandists have been especially active in Switzerland and Sweden, and important newspapers in each country have been used for the spread of anti-American doctrine.

One of the principal reports relied upon to stir up feeling in Switzerland is that an American army will pass through that country in the Spring of 1918. This report has appeared in at least one reputable newspaper, and has been circulated generally through the country. Other misrepresentation includes reports of mistreatment of Swiss subjects in the United States, and antagonism in this country against the Swiss.

An entirely different plan, apparently, is used in Sweden. There German agents give the widest possible publicity to letters purporting to have been written by persons in the United States. These represent the American people as indifferent to the war, with the Government sternly suppressing "uncomplimentary newspapers and peace orators."

Vienna apparently has become a fertile field for the propagandists. There the newspapers are open to them without question, and published reports tell of the "artificial cultivation" of war enthusiasm in the United States, of mistreatment of German subjects, of a panic seizing American Government officials when the results of Germany's submarine campaign became known, and other such statements.

OUST DISLOYAL PROFESSOR.

Leonidas R. Whipple Dropped by Board of University of Virginia.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Nov. 27.—The appointment of Leonidas R. Whipple as Professor of Journalism at the University of Virginia was rescinded today by the Board of Visitors after an investigation of alleged disloyal sentiments expressed by Whipple in an address last week at Sweet Briar College, Va. No action was taken on the appointment of a successor.

AUSTRIA AND THE UNITED STATES.

If it were a matter of the first order of importance that we should declare the existence of a state of war between Austria and the United States, there would be no hesitation about it and little discussion. We have been nearly eight months at war with Germany, Austria's ally, yet in the legal sense we are at peace with Austria. It is an anomalous condition, in many ways it is absurd. The existence of that condition and the fact that it is under discussion show that it cannot be vitally important either to Austria or to the United States that war should be declared.

There has been provocation, justification might easily be found. Austria is actually at war with Italy, and the Government of the United States has advanced money to Italy to carry on the war. That is one of the anomalies, for it is a flagrant breach of neutrality. The bankers of the United States might advance money to Italy and the Government remain neutral; when the Government advances money it is the same as if it should send guns, munitions, or even soldiers. Italy is our ally and we aid her precisely as if we as well as she, were at war with Austria. Austria might with entire propriety make our advances to Italy the occasion for declaring war on us.

On the other hand, we have good reason to believe that some of our ships have been destroyed by Austrian submarines contrary to the laws of maritime warfare. We have exchanged notes with Austria about it with no very satisfactory result. Austria, in fact, gives her approval and support to the lawless submarine policy of Germany. If we thought that a declaration of war against Austria was essential to the objects we seek to attain by the war, we might readily find justification.

So long as there is only a remote probability that our troops will actually confront Austrian troops in the field, it would appear that neither Government sees any compelling reason for declaring war. There are reasons against it. For us a declaration would add to the already sufficient number of alien enemies in this country the entire Austrian, Hungarian, and Czech unnaturalized population of the United States. This great increment in the number of those we must watch and segregate would augment the cost and labor of enforcing the law relating to enemy aliens and their activities. There is some risk involved, for Austro-Hungarians here are under temptation to join the German allies of their country in plots and conspiracies. Of that risk account has been taken and vigilance to guard against it is exercised. Besides, it is probable that, as the war proceeds, plotters against our Government will before very long be warned by exemplary and deterrent punishments which they will be likely to heed.

Austria will not declare war upon the United States save under German compulsion. She will, to the last extremity, avoid making actual and formal enemies of the Americans. The Austro-Hungarian Empire will be in a bad situation at the Peace Conference and will need friends, at least it will not need more enemies. The danger that the empire will be actually dismembered and broken up has been much diminished by the ravages of German socialism in Russia, which have not merely reduced that country to a state of helpless anarchy, but have brought into play separatist forces that may cause the disappearance of Russia as a great power. But when the Peace Conference assembles after the inevitable defeat of the Teutonic Powers, Serbia will certainly get territorial compensations for what she has suffered, and Austria will be confronted by demands for further sacrifices as a safeguard of European freedom and civilization against Germany's ambitious plans of domination in the southeast. These are questions in which the United States is not directly interested; if interested at all, only as a champion of freedom. We should be very little likely to accept a brief from Austria in these matters, but she knows very well that a declaration of war against us would extinguish whatever feeling of consideration for her future we might entertain.

ITALY'S RESISTANCE.

The Italian resistance which centres around the Piave was apparently doomed to defeat. It was quite impossible for a greatly outnumbered army to defend that position permanently. Therefore the early reports of the fighting were received merely as showing a splendid delaying action, fought with the design of postponing as long as possible the retreat to the next position. But as day has followed day, and each morning we have read nothing of the expected retreat, but only of a furious and sustained resistance, it has begun to seem possible that the Piave is as far as the Germans will get.

The Italians are said to be outnumbered four or five to one. Even if that is an exaggeration, they are outnumbered, and being outnumbered they could not hope to keep up this kind of fighting indefinitely. What they have been fighting for is to hold that line until reinforcements can get there that will change their numerical proportion to the enemy. The reinforcements are getting there. If now they can hold out until they are even with the Germans, the boot will soon be on the other leg, for they can then be reinforced continuously and without limit. When that time comes, the Germans will have to dig in or retreat, and they may not be able to dig in. They will be in a disadvantageous position, because most of their supplies will have to come to them over the mountain passes, and they are a long way from their base.

The Germans, of course, understand this situation, and it explains the unremitting fury of their attacks. They must force a decision before the Italians are sufficiently reinforced to establish an equality of strength, because equality will be followed by superiority. Allied superiority will mean German defeat. German defeat in Italy could not be stayed, once it had begun, and retreating over the Alps would mean disaster, the consequences of which cannot be measured. Everything depends, then, on beating the Italians before the reinforcements arrive. The Germans seem to have made preparations only for victory, and not to have counted on that sudden extension of the western front from Belgium to the Adriatic which has changed the situation; still less on that stubborn resistance which the Italians have shown. It has been German experience that when they begin to roll up an army belonging to one of the weaker Allies it goes on rolling up, and they have counted Italy as one of the weaker Allies in the matter of fighting, in which calculation they seem to have made a mistake. They counted, evidently, on a repetition of the Rumanian and Serbian campaigns, and believed that an enemy once weakened would grow weaker. Instead, Italy, weakened until disaster fell upon her, has been strengthened by disaster; a thing not within the German auspices.

RULE OF REASON FOR RAILWAYS.

The troubles of the railways have been progressive ever since the Supreme Court in the '90s overruled the lower court's decision that railways were not subject to the Sherman law, and that, if they were, the Trans-Missouri Freight Association agreement was a reasonable regulation of trade. Presumably the Supreme Court would now agree that the rule of reason, which the court discovered later, allows much that is nominally forbidden, and forbids much that is as well worthy of reconsideration as the decision which forbade pooling by railways. Certain it is that the Supreme Court would now be sustained by public opinion in allowing not railways alone, but business in general, to do what sound men of business have always approved. Instead of taking that reasonable course, it is suggested, on the one hand, that the Government should operate the railways, and, on the other hand, that there should be a wholesale repeal of the laws which cripple their operation.

There is here a double absurdity. The Government ought to be fitter to legislate than to operate railways. But the proved badness of Government operation of the lawmaking machinery is the basis of the notion that the Government should assume activities for which it is not fit, and in which it is not demonstrating that efficiency which no one can deny that the railways are showing conspicuously. The safe and sane middle course is neither to repeal the law to punish unreasonable restraints of trade, nor to "connive," in Colonel ROOSEVELT's phrase, at the breaking of the law. It is only necessary to administer the law according to the rule of reason to confer great benefits upon trade which is broader than even the great work of the railways.

Regarding the railways, a beginning might be made by the Federal Government enforcing the use of the rule of reason against the States in meddling with what does not concern them in interstate commerce. There is danger of losing the way on an untrodden path, and there is no sense in abandoning an old path to the same destination. Besides, it is strictly a Federal function to oversee the States in their activities in this regard, while it is straying from Federal functions to operate railways. What would become of intrastate traffic if the National Government operated interstate traffic? Would the Government merely neglect State traffic in its care of interstate commerce, or would it obstruct it as ruthlessly as the States meddle with interstate commerce? How could the Government help the railways more than by letting the States know, for instance, that they could impose full train crews upon State commerce, but they could not do so to the detriment of national trade? That is a small but heinous and recent example, which shows the obduracy of the States regarding national welfare of the railways.

Greater financial importance attaches to the manner in which the States, through a term of years, have deliberately maintained rates inconsistent with rates found reasonable by the Interstate Commission. Many times States have discriminated against one another by deliberately making rates that foster State business at the expense of the railways, as well as of the neighbor State. Here is the "connivance" which is contrary to public interest. How idle it would be to authorize the Federal incorporation of railways so long as the Federal Government connives at depriving the railways of their bread and butter. In Central Freight Association territory there are many intrastate rates which have not yet conformed to the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1914. Why expect "the Government" to do any better than the Commission, which is constantly seeking fresh tasks, and which "connives" at the breach of its orders? The temporizing with the principle of the Shreveport case is a threat to the structure of our Government, as well as to the rate structure and the solvency of the railways. Here is the thing to be done and not a seeking out of things which ought to be left undone.

There are signs that this is appreciated, and that saying such things is not a mere crying aloud in the wilderness. The Missouri Commission has granted an increase of fares. That signifies a recovery from the two-cent mania of 1907. In the words of Commissioner BLAIR:

> It is short-sighted policy, indeed, that denies adequate compensation for the services rendered. Unless such earnings are secured as will make railroad stocks and securities attractive investments for capital, the traveling public will suffer from curtailed and inadequate service, the railroad properties will depreciate and the general public will be the ultimate loser thereby.

"That is as clear as sunshine," says The Globe-Democrat. But why was it not clear years ago? Why is it not universally clear now? Why meddle with novelties when it takes years to find out that it is necessary to pay the railways for what they do?

MR. TOWNLEY IN THE EAST.

Do the farmers of this State, do those in particular who have just formed the Farmers' Non-Partisan League of the State of New York, under the patriotic auspices of Mr. A. C. TOWNLEY, the head and front of the North Dakota Non-Partisan League, understand what Mr. TOWNLEY is driving at? Do the representatives of some trades unions, who confabulated with the farmers at the request of the Labor Food Council, whose Chairman is Mr. JOHN C. HILSDORF, and whose Secretary is Mr. CARL BECK, know the past history of the North Dakota mother society?

Ostensibly the New York League is a union of farmers and workmen for the co-operation and good of producer and consumer. Is that what the Non-Partisan League has sought or is seeking to do? It began with a little county society organized to elect to the Legislature men pledged to vote for an appropriation to establish a State grain elevator. Of the "big five," who bossed the concern as it spread and widened, one is an English agitator who had been conspicuous as an I. W. W. One is a Socialist lawyer. Mr. TOWNLEY is himself a Socialist. How it grew and prospered as a political party; in 1916 elected the Governor and other State officers, 81 of 113 members of the State House of Representatives, 18 of 25 State Senators, three members of the State Supreme Court; its program of State-owned terminal elevators, packing and cold storage warehouses, flour mills, of exemption of farm improvements from taxation; its attempt to raise the State debt limit and revise the Constitution by legislative bill—these things are parts of its local life. What is vital to remember is that the Non-Partisan League of North Dakota is a secret society, open only to farmers.

It is a class party. It is pledged to the abolition of political parties. That is, it intends and hopes to carry the Northwest, the country, as the main political party. It took vigorous, early growth in South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana. It has now taken root in New York. In the Western States it followed originally the North Dakota program, but a class party of farmers would not be strong enough. So the ingenious Mr. TOWNLEY, the apparent chief, with we know not what veiled figure or figures, contemplating the Presidency, behind him, reaches out for the workmen, an effort begun at St. Paul. The Non-Partisan League is a two-class party of farmers and workmen, shall we say a party of well-to-do farmers and laborers, bourgeois Bolsheviki?

In its national aspects and ambitions the Non-Partisan League deserves a scrutiny more severe than we were at first inclined to give to an attempt "to bring New Zealand to North Dakota." Mr. TOWNLEY is not fond of the press, "men who engineer "the kept press and lie-like-hell men, "who lie by wholesale." He is a patriot, in these latitudes. Last Summer we heard of his saying that "our "young men were going to France to "bleed for the profits of the damned "pirates," and that "the cry for the war came from the trusts." Is it the iniquitous newspapers of his own State that belie him? Did they belie him when they said that he opposed the Liberty Loan and the Red Cross? Well, in September Mr. TOWNLEY's Non-Partisan League got up the St. Paul convention, which was to be a Conference on the High Cost of Living, and was a Convention of Producers and Consumers or what not. There was much patriotic reality or camouflage of patriotism in its resolutions, and there was anti-war economic stuff about paying for the war as it is fought, a sure means of stopping it; but what shall we think of a convention that heard Senator GRONNA cry that "they have conscripted our boys, "the flower of the race, and sent "them to the trenches, from which "you know well ninety-nine in a hun"dred of them will never return"? And it was to this convention that Senator LA FOLLETTE made that Lusitania speech, which patriots all over the country cried out against. Curious loyalists, some of Mr. TOWNLEY's friends, curious admirations his Non-Partisan League has. Mr. LA FOLLETTE has an attentive eye on it.

Pacifism, socialism, confiscatory legislation, a doubtful loyalty may be suspected in this secret order which Mr. TOWNLEY has kindly brought eastward. The President of the Federation of Labor is not the man to be tender to any collaterals of the People's Council. The innocence of some of the New York farmers and trades unions is abused.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

Our old friend, the children's old friend, the Children's Aid Society, made its sixty-fifth report yesterday. What new praise is there for a work of ever-widening good? An excursion among these kind figures shows us nearly 10,000 pupils in the industrial schools, more than 300 friendless orphan and deserted children for whom family homes have been found, 2,300 children in families under the society's supervision, 520 children helped to go west with their parents, nearly 5,000 boys and girls sheltered in its lodging houses, nearly 3,000 pairs of shoes given away, 877 runaways sent home, and so on, all varieties of the familiar labor.

More immediate to the heart in this time is the picture of fourteen young men in uniform, "as likely lads as e'er were seen," about a third of the society's graduates in the Delaware National Guard alone. "During the past two years," writes Superintendent BRACE, "I have received many "letters from our boys who went over "with the Canadian troops or who "enlisted in England, and one of our "boys was killed in action as long "ago as November, 1916." Our boys have enlisted "in the National Guard "of almost every State, and by hun"dreds in the regular army and "navy." Two letters from our boys now in France with the American Expeditionary Force are printed in the report. "I am here to do my duty, even though it cost me my life," writes one. High officials, many prosperous and distinguished men of many occupations, have come from the ranks of the society's boys. Four army officers, 7,000 soldiers and sailors, are among the noblest harvests of this great humanity. It is a friend that enriches the national life with brave, honest men and good women.

THE SALUTE.

Saluting an officer is a ceremony that palls on many a soldier of our national army, if he must go through it frequently in the course of a day. In the reservation or cantonment he is seldom allowed to avoid it, never by an officer who understands the significance of the salute as a part of discipline. On leave, the soldier of the national army, whose head may be filled with false notions of the relation of democracy to military usage, sometimes fails to see the officer to whom a salute is due. Particularly is this the case when the soldier, who knew the officer in civil life as an equal, or perhaps as a less important citizen, disapproves of his success in obtaining a commission. It must be admitted, too, that officers do not always return a salute promptly and in the right spirit. They misapprehend the meaning and value of it as much as the ill-disciplined private does. On this subject Lieut. Col. ANDREW J. DOUGHERTY, late of the 30th Infantry, U. S. A., and now of the 357th Infantry, N. A., speaks words of wisdom, which the national army would do well to assimilate:

> When an enlisted man, a Lieutenant, a Captain, a Colonel, a General salutes his superior, he says by that act: "I will obey you," and the smartness with which the salute is made is an exact measure of the way he will obey. When he returns the salute of an inferior in rank, he says "I will strive "to the limit to prepare myself to lead "you to victory." He will fight as he salutes. This act, repeated scores of times daily, forms a habit which neither fear, nor sickness, nor physical weakness can break.

Colonel DOUGHERTY was once an enlisted man himself. At San Juan he fought as a Corporal of the 3d Cavalry. Ten years later he was Governor of the Province of Santiago by appointment of Major Gen. THOMAS H. BARRY, at the time commanding the American Army of the second occupation in Cuba. The civil Governor had been delinquent, and was ordered to turn his office over to Captain DOUGHERTY, the Corporal of San Juan, who had qualified for the new trust by his success in making Regulars of the Rural Guard of Camaguey and Oriente. The point is that Colonel DOUGHERTY rose in the service because he submitted to discipline when he was in the ranks and taught it to the men he commanded as an officer, in other words, because he was always actuated by the spirit of the soldier. He is, therefore, an excellent authority on the salute.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

American Advice to Officers. Colonel WOLF's farewell address to the Plattsburg graduates must be painful reading to all pacifists, including those who are consciously pro-German as well as the others who lend aid to the national enemy in whatever of innocence is conferred by ignorance and unintention. For the Colonel did not talk to the young men before him as he should have done to corroborate the pacifist assumptions as to the ideas common to the military caste.

He did not tell these officers of the gulf supposed to yawn between themselves and the private soldier. He did not warn them that discipline and military efficiency depended on treating the men under them as beings of a different and lower order. In fact, he said none of the things that every pacifist knows as forming the basis of the army officer's code and of his practice. Instead, Colonel WOLF, apparently fearing that some such notions might have crept into the minds of his hearers, earnestly warned them that they should carry into active service the same courtesy and kindliness that had been exhibited in their associations with each other through the months of training.

He asked them to remember that an American army is made up of men differing from themselves only in the possession of less knowledge about military affairs, and that any display of harshness or brutality on their part would result, not in the establishment and maintenance of the will to obey, but in demoralization, disintegration, insubordination, and all the evils that can exist in an army of intelligent, self-respecting, and well-disposed citizens.

Into all this there might be read criticism of German military methods, which are in every way different from those inculcated by Colonel WOLF, but that will have to be endured with such composure as can be attained. The difficulty in doing it will be in direct proportion to the amount of belief entertained by each of us in the possibility of achieving military efficiency otherwise than as the Germans undoubtedly have achieved it. There will be no difficulty at all for those who have not acquired the delusion that a soldier is necessarily a tyrant who delights in torturing and humiliating all who are inferior to him in rank.

Giving New Heart to Knitters. After a delay far too long and more than mysterious, Secretaries DANIELS and BAKER have issued a statement to the effect that, far from wanting to discourage the knitting of woolen garments for the army and navy by "our good women," they highly appreciate what has already been done in this direction and hope that the good work of "providing through the Red Cross comforts for our soldiers and sailors" will earn their further thanks.

There is in this statement no repetition of previous assertions from the same source that the Government had adequately equipped all the men in its service, and that additions by civilian hands to their stock of clothing were to be counted merely as superfluous luxuries. Presumably the Secretaries have been getting, since they made, or allowed to be made in their names, the announcement that so astonished and grieved the women knitters, some of the information as to camp conditions that has constantly been coming to everybody who had a friend or acquaintance either in training or in service. Why they did not have that information before is incomprehensible, but the question is now unimportant.

Nobody imagines for a moment that either Mr. DANIELS or Mr. BAKER would have said what they were quoted as saying if they had known conditions as they were, and nobody suspects in the slightest degree that they begrudge the country's defenders what they need in the way of protection from the Winter weather. Probably it was just that they fell into the error, so common to the occupants of high office, of assuming that an order given is an order obeyed.

It is a pity that the mistake was made in this case, for a brief explanation of the facts—the confession that though the Government was doing its very best to clothe the men properly, the task had proved too great for immediate performance—would have contented everybody, and the men themselves would have been the last to complain of hardships which, while real, are trivial indeed in comparison with others that war inflicts—with others which they, as patriotic Americans, are willing and even glad to endure in their country's behalf.

It was the denial of the existence of hardships known to thousands and thousands of us that caused impatience, and it was the rejection of needed help in a rather disdainful tone that caused deep humiliation and not a little of justified indignation.

This Effect of War Commendable. Thanksgiving Day is to be marked in Rochester, this State, by the holding of a "union service" that will be really remarkable for its inclusiveness. It is to be held, not in a church, for none would be large enough for the congregation that is expected to join in the manifestation of gratitude, but in the Convention Hall of the city, and though the proceedings are to be distinctly religious, many of the most firmly drawn of sectarian lines will be for the time obliterated and forgotten in a display of American solidarity.

The denominations to participate in this first of Rochester's "community Thanksgivings" are these: Advent Christian, Baptist, Christian Science, Congregational, Disciples, Episcopal, Evangelical, Jewish, Methodist, Presbyterian, Salvation Army, Spiritualist, Unitarian, Universalist, and Volunteers of America. About sixty churches will be represented.

A Unitarian clergyman will deliver the invocation, a Jewish rabbi will explain the meaning of the service, a Baptist will read from the Old Testament and a Universalist from the New, and the President of the Chamber of Commerce will speak on the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation. That will be only the beginning of the "exercises," for the program is a long one—long enough to cause some anxiety, perhaps, to the housewife who thinks of her dinner as she reads it.

Dinner, however, will be a less important feature of Thanksgiving Day than usual this year, if the new spirit of the time is in full play, and the indications are that it will be in Rochester.

WAR SAVING CERTIFICATES.

A Christmas Suggestion by George Foster Peabody.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I suggest that it would doubtless be helpful to a great number of your readers and inform their patriotic impulses to real advantage if civilian readers of THE TIMES should have it exceptionally impressed upon their minds that for the coming Christmas season they should include among their presents, certainly to all the members of the family, and so far as possible to those within range who would not otherwise have such a Christmas gift, a war saving certificate; or in the case of the families who are so unfortunate as not to be able to give as much as $4.12 to each of the individuals, a thrift stamp, which can be obtained early in December from any post office and from a vast number of other places throughout the country. No one gift to an individual can accomplish at the same time so many unquestionably good results as such a Christmas gift would do. It would relate itself for a considerable period of time to the giver, of course, and it would relate itself also to the relation of the recipient to the country of which he is a present or coming citizen.

It is, of course, most desirable that at as early a date as possible every man, woman, and child in the United States without exception should become the holder of a war saving certificate; certainly to the extent of one stamp which, during the month of December, will cost $4.12, and which stamp may be redeemed at any time on presentation at any post office of the United States Government and will receive interest at the rate of 4 per cent., compounded quarterly. In this time of continuous employment and higher wages in dollars and cents—although unfortunately in too many cases not in actual values of consumption necessary to the family—it ought to be made possible that these stamps should be widely purchased by the individuals themselves. It would therefore be advantageous in very many cases that the Christmas gift be not made a full paid war saving certificate, or possibly that it be not even a certificate, but one of the thrift stamps, so that the habit of saving and making one's own the thrift idea should be inculcated and strongly encouraged.

If every man, woman, and child in the United States should own one of the certificates to the extent of one stamp, $4.12, it would in itself make over $400,000,000. It is an easy calculation for any school child of 10 years of age to see that a proper presentation of the facts respecting these should result in the sale of the entire $2,000,000,000 authorized by the Congress by the first of January; because they are so desirable for Christmas presents as well as so important in their educational features, to which I have made reference.

Barnard's Lincoln a Substitute.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In regard to Barnard's Lincoln: The reply, on Oct. 23, 1917, in the House of Commons by Sir Alfred Mond, First Commissioner of Works, states that Lord Beauchamp, the former Commissioner, "offered a site in the Canning inclosure for a replica of the St. Gaudens statue on a request from the Honorable Member from Plymouth in this House on March 9, 1914." After commenting on the "high artistic merit" of the St. Gaudens statue, he proceeds as follows:

"I now understand that the American Committee for the celebration of 100 years of peace are anxious to send a replica of the statue of President Lincoln recently erected at Cincinnati and executed by Mr. George Grey Barnard, a sculptor of the highest standing, which they consider to be a superior monument, and I do not consider that I should interfere with the selection made by the donors, who, I understand, comprise men of well-known artistic standing."

What legal or moral right had this committee to substitute Barnard's Lincoln for St. Gaudens's, after the site had been granted expressly for the St. Gaudens? Has a fraud been worked on the Honorable Member from Plymouth, and on the House of Commons itself?

This is not a small question. It is a large one, and an international one. Is not our great President being slandered, our people betrayed, our art disgraced and England insulted?

The committee, however great the reputations of its members for artistic standing, should be called to account. What have they got to say for themselves?

REASONS FOR THANKSGIVING—1917.

Not for ripe grain we'll thank Thee,
Lord, in the harvest fields;
Not for the golden and purple
That generous Autumn yields;
Oft in the Past we've praised Thee
For food enough and to spare—
Smiled at our bounteous table,
Nor knew that our brother's was bare.
Safe and aloof from Sorrow,
Careless of any foe,
We gathered our own about us,
And shut out the great world's woe.

But now—it has crept upon us
As soft as a thief in the night;
Distance no more is distance,
Hiding the Truth from our sight;
Winds from the East have brought us
A desperate, heroic cry;
We are made one with the nations
That famish, and struggle, and die.
And the voice of our soul grows stronger,
As sympathy makes us wise—
"This is your Sister who suffers!
This is your Brother who dies!"

Not for a bountiful table,
Will we observe the day;
Shame would crimson our foreheads—
Feasting while others slay;
Not for luxurious trappings—
Not for our hoarded pelf—
Not for the narrow Vision
That saw but the good of Self;
But that, aroused from torpor,
Facing the cannon and sword,
Americans fight for Thy Justice and Right—
For this we'll thank Thee, Lord!

FLORENCE VAN CLEVE.

FIRST TO FIGHT IN FRANCE.

Distinction Claimed by Capt. Basil D. Spalding of Maryland.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The distinction of having led the company of American infantry that struck the first blow in the name of the United States against German autocracy last month in France is claimed by Captain Basil D Spalding, a Marylander, who was formerly a teacher in the Maryland State College.

Miss Alice Erma Cain of this city, a cousin of Captain Spalding, has received word of his having been selected to command the first United States troops on active duty. Word has since been received that he returned safely to the base from the front line trenches.

Captain Spalding is a son of Hargraves Spalding and Mrs. Martha Bissell Spalding, formerly of Churchville, Md., now of Macon, Ga. He is a great grandson of Captain John Adams Webster, a defender of Baltimore at the battle of North Point, in the War of 1812. His mother's father, Captain William Bissell, died on the Confederate side in the battle of Gettysburg.

Only twenty-seven years old, the captain enlisted five years ago in the 16th Infantry in Ohio, where he went after teaching for two years at Maryland State College, from which he graduated in 1909, when it was Maryland Agricultural College. He was promoted to a Second Lieutenancy and went to Europe as an acting Adjutant on General Pershing's staff.

NAVAL MILITIAMEN ACTIVE.

95% of National Guard Volunteers on Actual Sea Duty.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Approximately 95 per cent. of the 852 officers and 17,000 enlisted men of the National Guard Volunteers, composed of the Naval Militia of several States, are on active sea duty.

When war was declared, the Navy Department announced tonight, the Naval Militia was fully equipped and prepared for service, its training at home stations having been supplemented last year by cruises on warships. When called into active service the volunteers had a strength of 666 officers and 9,500 men, but this force has since been almost doubled through recruiting in the Naval Militia.

The Marine Corps branch of the volunteers has a strength of 32 officers and 700 men, taken from the ranks of the Naval Militia when the branch was established at the beginning of hostilities.

CONGRESSMEN RETURNING.

Last Leave England After a Speaking Tour in Scotland.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The last of the American Congressional Delegation—Representatives Frederick C. Hicks of New York, Richard W Parker of New Jersey, and John J. Rogers of Massachusetts—have left for home.

The final stage of their visit was a trip to Scotland, where they made a series of speeches on what the United States is doing and planning. The speeches got great prominence by the press throughout Scotland, and the papers referred editorially to the excellent effect produced by the visit.

On a trip to the naval base the Congressmen inspected the cruiser squadron which participated in the Heligoland fight.

MEXICO OUSTS CLERGYMEN.

Expels Aliens for Alleged Violation of the Constitution.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27.—The arrest and expulsion of a number of foreign clergymen was announced in a statement issued today by the Governor of the Federal district. The statement says the clergymen already have been sent on their way out of the country, together with other persons classed as undesirable.

The expulsion of the clergymen is said to have resulted from their failure to comply with the provision of the new Constitution, which permits only Mexican-born priests to exercise religious functions. According to the statement, the clergymen who are being deported were warned to cease violation of this article of the Constitution.

The clergymen probably will be taken out of the country by way of Vera Cruz, although no official information has been given out on this point.

There were fourteen of them in the party, of Italian, French, and Spanish nationality. The time limit set by the Governor after which foreign clergymen were notified to cease exercising their functions had expired.

MEXICAN DUTIES INCREASED.

Heavier Impost on Alcoholic Drinks After Jan. 1 Decreed.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27.—President Carranza has issued a decree increasing the taxes and import duties on all wines and alcoholic liquors, to take effect Jan. 1. All alcoholic liquors produced in Mexico will be subject to a tax of 50 per cent., and wines will be taxed 25 per cent.

Wines and alcoholic beverages of foreign make will have to pay a stamp tax of 70 per cent. above the import duties. Foreign made beer will be taxed 80 per cent. above the import duty.

The decree provides also for a stamp tax of from 5 to 20 centavos on corked bottles sold over counters.

A CALL FOR AMBULANCES.

Poets' Committee Urges Generous Gifts to Help the Italians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Can any one read tonight's account by The Associated Press correspondent of the conditions of the Italian soldiers on the battle line without wishing to do something for these brave men at once?

Exhausted by ceaseless fighting on barren ground in a temperature of 10 degrees above zero, without shelter of trenches or dugouts, and with an insufficient supply of water, they are still stubbornly holding their lines against the picked men of the relentless enemy. They are fighting our fight as really as though the line ran along the Adirondacks instead of the Carnic Alps. Who is not eager to help the common cause by helping Italy?

I will tell your readers how to help. For weeks the American Poets' Committee has offered the public the most prompt and practical means of helping Italy. For weeks it has been raising money to buy by cable Ford chassis in Milan and top and equip them and rush them to the front. Individuals cannot send guns, munitions, or food; others will do that. But through us one can provide ambulances, for they are there in northern Italy, 100 miles from the firing line, and every day men—yes, heroes—are dying for lack of them.

The Poets' Committee stands on its record. We already have placed fifty of these "Chariots of Mercy" on the front; twenty-six more will be there this week. Others are being bought as fast as funds admit. We have cabled $135,700. When all our assurances are realized we shall have $160,000. Our average is about $10,000 a week. This is not enough; we ought to have $100,000 more this week in large subscriptions. For a fortnight we have been trying to awaken the sleepwalkers of Wall Street to help us immediately. I have vainly asked a dozen captains of industries to take hold and complete the work. I have not found one man with imagination enough to see, or enterprise enough to aid. They will give generously to anything else but the most pressing need.

In this emergency we appeal to women, and especially women who love Italy, to aid us at once. We have received nearly sixty checks of $2,000 each—the cost of an ambulance—and these and smaller contributions are welcome, but why should we wait ten weeks to get $100,000 more? Who will be the first to respond, sending to me at 70 Fifth Avenue a check drawn to the order of George A. Plimpton, treasurer, for $10,000 or $20,000?

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON,
Chairman.

KHAKI THE DRESS FOR THANKSGIVING

Officers and Men Will Be Dinner Guests of Many Organizations.

TURKEY AT ALL THE CAMPS

New York's Largest Spread Will Be at 12th Regiment Armory for Soldiers from Western States.

In armories, hotels, restaurants, clubs, and private homes thousands of soldiers and sailors will be Thanksgiving dinner guests tomorrow. In addition, the Government will provide an old-time Thanksgiving meal at all camps and cantonments for the soldiers, while on every ship, in port or at sea, the stewards will see that the officers and all on board have no reason to complain.

The largest dinner to be served in New York will probably be that which the National Service Commission will serve to enlisted men from the division at Camp Mills. This dinner will be served in the Twelfth Regiment Armory, and will be for soldiers from Western and Pacific States. Those in charge of the dinner have asked former Westerners now living in New York to come to the dinner and join in the welcome extended to the men from the States from which the division now at Mineola has drawn its men.

The Union League Club announced yesterday that it will have 200 soldiers from Camp Upton as its guests at the clubhouse, Thirty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue. The men have been selected by Brig. Gen. Wittemeyer, and will arrive in New York tomorrow afternoon. The club will also entertain 200 negro soldiers from the 36th infantry, at Camp Upton, at a dinner to be served in Liberty Hall, Seventh Avenue and 139th Street.

Adolph Lorber of Lorber's Restaurant, at Broadway and Fortieth Street, will have as his guests 1,000 Western soldiers from Mineola. Mr. Lorber will bring the men to New York on special trains, and will provide a sightseeing tour on Fifth Avenue buses for them before the dinner. The dinner will be served from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M., and during these hours the restaurant will be closed to the general public.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association, 610 Lexington Avenue, will entertain 102 soldiers at its rooms, the men being, for the most part, from Camp Upton. The Young Women's Christian Association will have 500 soldiers at its clubhouse, 31 West 110th Street, while the Catholic War Work Council will provide a dinner for 1,000 soldiers, entertaining the men at hotels and in private homes. Two hotels will each care for 400 men for the council, while members of the council will entertain the remaining 200 in their homes.

The Broadway Tabernacle will provide a dinner for 300 men; the National Arts Club, Gramercy Park, will give a dinner in honor of forty officers, while St. George's Club, in Stuyvesant Square, will have 120 soldiers and sailors as guests.

THANKSGIVING IN SCHOOLS.

President Willcox Issues Proclamation to be Read to Pupils.

President Willcox of the Board of Education has sent the following appeal to public school children, which will be read by the Principals in all the schools today:

"For nearly three hundred years the American people, in gratitude for their blessings, have celebrated Thanksgiving Day. This year, on the Thanksgiving Day, which our great President has proclaimed for next Thursday, even in the midst of a terrible war we have many things to be thankful for.

"Let us be thankful that we have a country worth fighting for. Let us be thankful that the great soul of America is rising not only to protect the rights of her own people, but also to join in the defense of liberty, justice, and humanity throughout the world. Let us be thankful that all classes of our people, high and low, rich and poor, American born and foreign born, are forgetting selfish interests and joining together in patriotic service and sacrifice for this great cause. Let us be thankful that a new national spirit and common purpose is uniting the American people with mutual appreciation and confidence. Let us be thankful for the hope and promise of a better world to come after the war.

"America is fighting for you. The men and women of America stand ready to sacrifice everything, even life itself, in order that you, as you grow to manhood and womanhood, may enjoy the blessings of liberty and peace. And with America all of the other democracies of the earth are fighting for their children, fighting to overthrow the tyranny of might and bring in its place the rule of justice and right among all nations.

"Let us honor our brave men who are answering their country's call. Let us be proud to do anything we can to help them to win the war. Let us be thankful that we live in America, with the great American nation to protect us, and let us stand first, last, and all the time for the American Government and the American flag.

"I am proud of our pupils and proud of our teachers for their patriotic spirit and service during the last year, and I confidently call upon them all on this Thanksgiving Day to pledge a new devotion to our beloved country for the year which is to come."

SPARTANBURG FEAST PLAN.

Turkey and Entertainment Aplenty to be Provided Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 27.—Uncle Sam is going to furnish the mainstay of the Thanksgiving spread of the Twenty-seventh Division, it was learned today, when orders were placed for thousands of turkeys. Authorization has been received for the camp Quartermaster to purchase sufficient to give each of the more than 32,000 men a pound of turkey, which will be the ration served in all camps. Few of the time honored fixings of the Thanksgiving spread will be missing.

The Y. M. C. A. will put a special program of entertainments in all its huts, bringing quartets and big time vaudeville stars all the way from New York, Philadelphia, and Cincinnati. The Fosdick people will run a big bill in their tent theatre.

Besides the good times at the camp, it is said that there will be scarcely a single home in Spartanburg that will not have one or more soldiers as its guests on the holiday.

The week's training includes drilling in methods of concealment formerly employed by the North American Indians. Special squads were out in the woods this afternoon; one detachment, the Reds, being those elected to hide; the other, known as the Blues, being those nominated to find the concealed Reds. The latter covered themselves with fallen leaves, and practically the only time the "camouflage" didn't work was when some heavy Blue foot trod on some recumbent Red.

Privates Harold C. Houghtaling, 107th Infantry, and James V. Blythe, First Company, 102d Supply Train, have been ordered transferred to the Aviation Service. Houghtaling was sent to the Princeton school, while Blythe was ordered to report at Kelly Field, South San Antonio.

General Barry Leaves Camp Grant.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Nov. 27.—Brig. Gen. L. W. L. Kennon took command of the Eighty-sixth Division of the national army at Camp Grant, succeeding Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, who departed on detached service. General Kennon, an Indian fighter, has seen service in Cuba and the Philippines. He entered West Point in 1876 and was made a Captain in 1897.

BRITISH DAY DRAWS MANY TO HERO LAND

English Embassy Counsel Lauds Efforts to Aid Victims of the Hun.

GARBLE DIPLOMATS' TALKS

Wild Tales of Submarine Sinkings Spread After Speeches by Jusserand and British Official.

Much interest was aroused last night by a statement issued by the press department of Hero Land, the bazaar at the Grand Central Palace, that T. B. Hohler counsellor to the British Embassy in Washington, who spoke as the representative of the Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, had closed his address with this remark: "It may interest you to learn that I have been informed that between Nov. 1 and Nov. 15 thirty-nine submarines had been sunk."

Later, however, Clive Bayley, the British Consul General, who had sat next to Mr. Hohler on the platform, explained that the Counsellor had really said that he had heard rumors in Washington of these sinkings. Secretary Daniels declared when told of the report that he had not heard of any such report.

This is not the only case of misunderstood statements regarding the destruction of submarines. On the previous day J. J. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, visited Hero Land, and it was announced that he had declared that six submarines had been sunk in the last four days.

This, it is now learned, was not the exact statement made by the Ambassador. When referring to the sinking of six submarines within four days he did not mean sinkings previously unannounced, but was coupling together the destruction of five U-boats by the British Navy on Saturday, Nov. 17, which was announced by Premier Lloyd George in his speech of the following Monday, with the announcement made on Sunday last of the sinking of another by two American destroyers.

Statements have recently been made on high authority that more submarines have been sunk in the past four months than in the year before the beginning of that period, but with the exception of Mr. Lloyd George's statement at the conclusion of his speech, which reassured his control of the House of Commons regarding the destruction of five U-boats in a single day, no exact figures as to the work done in particular periods have ever been officially given out.

"British Day" at Hero Land drew large crowds to the big war bazaar yesterday and last night. The attendance in the evening eclipsed that at the opening Saturday night.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, who was to have made an address, was prevented by illness from being present, and in his place, T. B. Hohler, Counsellor to the British Embassy, made an address in the afternoon.

"I am glad to see," he said, "that so many loyal Americans have come forward to help aid the victims of the Hun. I rejoice to learn that Americans are beginning to appreciate that the United States is in the war to win. You Americans should do everything possible to help repair the damage done by the Hun. As we visit these exhibits, I can imagine our men inspired by the news that Hero Land is a great success.

"There has been some criticism of the amount of money that has been spent on Hero Land. That criticism is wrong. Every dollar that has been spent has been spent for a good purpose."

Among the other speakers were C. Clive Bailey, British Consul General at New York; Brigadier General W. A. White, head of the British Recruiting Mission, and Brigadier General James D. McLachlan of the British Army.

The following cablegram from Arthur James Balfour was read:

"Am glad to offer my warm congratulations on the scheme of the bazaar of the allied nations. Those who visit it will see on all sides evidences of great achievements. They will have an opportunity of helping the victims of German barbarism in Europe and in Asia, and they will bear away with them memories of the great war due to the ingenuity and industry of soldier prisoners. I heartily wish it every success."

The British party from Washington watched the British tank in action and inspected the "Hindenburg" trench. The Daughters of the British Empire presented a program on the Novelty Theatre, in which Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sothern, Eugene Cowles, Norman Trevor, and others appeared. In the motion-picture theatre, on the fourth floor, official British war pictures were shown.

Yesterday there was placed on exhibit a German flag captured by the Imperial Light Horse Infantry in German West Africa. Every man's name who took part in the attack in which the flag was captured is written on it.

Last night was given over to a program of sports in the Great Hall, arranged by Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson. There was a feature of a bayonet drill of men from Camp Upton under the direction of British officers.

The Russian Street, which contains at one end a booth bearing the sign "Pour les Gens de Lettres Francais," and of which Mrs. Newbold LeRoy Edgar is the President, is one of the most interesting features of Hero Land. Eugene Brieaux of Paris is Honorary President of the booth, the object of which is to aid the dependents of literary men of France.

Associated with Mrs. Newbold LeRoy Edgar are Mrs. James W. Gerard, Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden, Mrs. Charles Clive Bayley, wife of the British Consul General; Miss Janet Scudder, the sculptress, Mrs. William Kinnicutt Draper, Mrs. Francis Burrall Hoffman and Mme. Seygard-Lane, who recently returned from Paris and who at 10 o'clock sang the "Marseillaise."

A new film, entitled "France in Arms," was shown yesterday under the direction of the section presided over by Mrs. Newbold LeRoy Edgar.

This will be Jewish War Relief Day at the bazaar, the program for which has been arranged by Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff. A pageant, "On the Road to Victory," in which 300 persons will take part, and arranged by Margaret S. Crawford, will be the spectacular feature of the day. In the afternoon the 306th Regiment Band, from Camp Upton, will play in the Great Ballroom. Mme. Bertha Kalich, Houdini, Mme. Shomer-Rothenberg, Mme. Clerget, Irving Berlin, Harry Fox, Dan Casey, Harry Tierney, Mary Jordan, Blanche Duffield, and Lydia Locke, are among the theatrical folk who will aid Jewish War Relief Day.

Elsie Janis, Hilda Spong, Olive Wyndam, Mrs. Thomas Wisem, Laura Hope Crews, Charles Cherry, Holbrook Blinn, Eva La Gallienne, Augusta Close, and Helen Grey will take part in a program under the direction of State Women's War Relief Fund Committee. Cosmo Hamilton's play "Soldiers' Daughters" will be presented, as will two acts from "Miss 1917" from the Century Theatre. The members of the committee in charge, headed by Mrs. Schiff, are Mrs. I. N. Spiegelberg, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Sidney C. Borg, Daniel Frohman, M. H. Hanson, Mrs. Eugene Lewis, Miss Harriet B. Lowenstein, Miss Irene Lewisohn, Mrs. Otto Lowengard, Mrs. Thomas Seltzer, and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim.

SWEENEY IS INDICTED.

"Advertising Director" for Army Bazaar Charged with Forgery.

George F. Sweeney, who was "advertising, publicity, and campaign manager" for the Army and Navy Bazaar, was indicted yesterday by the New York County Grand Jury on a charge of forgery. The indictment charges that Sweeney forged the name of Edward S. Moore, Treasurer of the bazaar, without the latter's permission to letters sent out soliciting contributions and advertising for the bazaar.

District Attorney Swann yesterday said he had received information that some solicitors for the bazaar threatened German and German-American residents of New York with internment if they did not contribute to the bazaar. Assistant District Attorney Kilroe is investigating these complaints.

District Attorney Swann in a statement issued last night declared he had investigated the recent collection of money for the "War Babies Cradle" and said that forty-five checks of $10 each had been collected for which he said there had been no accounting. The District Attorney said that he had obtained the money from the solicitors and would forward it at once to the "cradle" fund.

LICENSE FOR ALL BAZAARS.

Aldermen Make Charity Promoters Answerable for Receipts.

The Aldermen yesterday upon recommendation of its Committee on General Welfare unanimously adopted the amendment to the city ordinances, introduced by President Frank L. Dowling, providing that the holders of all fairs, bazaars, or entertainments given in the name of charity hereafter must obtain a license from the Department of Licenses for which they must pay a nominal sum and be under the control of and make a report to the department.

Not only must a license be obtained but financial statements and other safeguards are required. The amount paid to managers or solicitors in salaries or commissions must be made public, so that contributors will be under no misapprehensions as to where the money is going. The ordinance carries a penalty for its violation of six months' imprisonment or a fine of $250 or both.

ANTIS NOW TO FIGHT NATIONAL SUFFRAGE

State Organization Temporarily Drops Its Plan for a Loyalty League.

MAY SELECT A NEW LEADER

Determines on a More Vigorous Campaign Than Was Made on the State Issue.

Instead of converting themselves into a loyalty league to fight pro-Germanism, the State anti-suffragists yesterday turned their organization into a body to war on the Federal suffrage amendment. The refusal of the suffragists to abandon the whole question and "fight the war," it was explained, had led their opponents to change their plans.

To reinforce the women's organization, which will be known as the "State Committee of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage," there also is to be an organization of men. The Man-Suffrage Association Opposed to Political Suffrage for Women, under the leadership of Everett P. Wheeler, has resolved to convert itself into a body to battle against the national amendment.

In altering their plans for the immediate future, the anti-suffragists, it was said yesterday, had not abandoned their prospective loyalty league, but simply would hold the project in abeyance for the time being. At yesterday's meeting, at 280 Madison Avenue, at which the decision to alter the plans of the organization was reached, a committee of three was appointed to represent the new body at the national convention to be held in Washington on the same days in December as the national gathering of the suffragists. Miss Mary G. Kilbreth, Mrs. John F. Maynard, and Mrs. A. M. Banca were selected as the members of the committee.

The change in the antis' plans probably is to involve a change in leadership. Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, long the head of the State body, it was announced had determined to retire from active participation in the new campaign. Miss Kilbreth was appointed head of the committee to arrange the details of the change, while Miss Chittenden will look after the legal steps incident to changing the corporate name. Miss Chittenden and others prominent in the movement yesterday urged Miss Kilbreth as the logical new leader. Miss Kilbreth, however, said yesterday that she would not head the organization.

In discussing yesterday the lines on which the new body would wage its fight, Miss Kilbreth said she believed the most important task was the education of "the man in the street" to a full understanding of exactly what abandonment of states' right suffrage meant. She felt certain if voters once grasped the full significance of such a surrender of what she called fundamental American government principles, they would reject the suffragists' propaganda for radical constitutional revision. A minor, but none the less a strongly emphasized note in the campaign, she said, would be the inappropriateness of interjecting the suffrage issue into the forthcoming war session of a Congress beset with Government business of unprecedented importance to the nation and to the world.

In addressing the meeting of the Anti Suffragists yesterday Miss Chittenden, in urging the course which subsequently was followed, said:

"In this last appeal which I shall probably ever make to you as a body of women, I beg you not to be slackers, especially in this hour of our country's greatest need, but to live up to the full measure of your responsibility as voting citizens. The Socialist women will vote in large numbers, and the pacifist woman, who did not raise her boy to be a soldier, will vote, and their votes must be offset by the votes of the women who put loyalty to their Government in the prosecution of this war above everything else at the present moment, because they realize that this war is being fought to upbold the same principles of free government for which the 'embattled farmers fired the shot heard around the world!'"

SUFFRAGE PICKETS FREED FROM PRISON

Twenty-two Hunger Strikers Get Out, but Nine Others Stay in Washington Jail.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Twenty-two militant suffrage pickets, most of them hunger-strikers, serving terms varying from fifteen days to seven months, were released from the District Jail late this afternoon. No reason for their release was given by the jail authorities other than that it was by the order of Alexander R. Mullowney, the Police Court Judge who sentenced them.

Miss Alice Paul, leader of the pickets, who was serving seven months, was the first to be released. Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia, Miss Lucy Burns of Washington, Miss Kate Heffelfinger of Shamokin, Penn., and Miss Rose Winslow of New York, all of whom had seven-month sentences, were among those released. Miss Paul, who had been on a hunger strike for twenty-two days, was very pale and thin. When she reached suffrage headquarters at Cameron House she said:

"We are put out of jail as we were put into jail, at the whim of the Government. They tried to terrorize and suppress us. They could not, and so freed us. The Administration has found that it dare not imprison American women for asking a share in the democracy for which we are fighting abroad. Our prisoners in Occoquan were released from that institution last Saturday on the court ruling that they were illegally and lawlessly confined. The action of the Judge in commuting our sentence today acknowledges it was unjust, arbitrary, and a gross discrimination made in an attempt to suppress legitimate propaganda, an attempt which failed.

"Twenty-two of us are out, but nine are unjustly imprisoned. Those of us who hunger-struck were freed. The others were not. These, too, must be released before the Government's conscience is clear."

Asked when they would picket again, Miss Paul said:

"We hope that no more demonstrations will be necessary, that the amendment will run steadily on to passage and ratification, without further suffering. But what we do depends on what the Administration does. We have one aim: The immediate passage of the Federal amendment. As for picketing, we are well pleased at what it has accomplished."

Among the pickets released were:

Miss Agnes Morey, thirty days, Boston.
Miss Cornelia Whitcomb, thirty days, Worcester, Mass.
Miss Julia Emory, Baltimore.
Miss Paula Jacobi, thirty days, New York.
Miss Lou Daniels, fifteen days, Boston.
Mrs. L. H. Hornsby, thirty days, New York.
Miss Catherine Lincoln, thirty days, Philadelphia.
Miss Elizabeth McShane, thirty days, Philadelphia.
Mrs. P. B. Johns, thirty days, New York.
Miss Alice Gram, thirty days, Portland, Ore.
Miss Betty Gram, thirty days, Portland, Ore.
Miss Matilda Young, fifteen days, District of Columbia.
Mrs. Alice Cosu, thirty days, New Orleans.
Miss Hattie Kruger, thirty days, Buffalo.
Mrs. Kate Stafford, thirty days, Oklahoma City.
Miss Belle Sheinberg, thirty days, New York.
Miss Minnie Hennessy, seven months, Hartford, Conn.

The suffrage pickets still in jail include Miss Maude Jamison, seven months, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. C. T. Robertson, thirty days, Salt Lake City; Mrs. R. B. Quay, thirty days, Salt Lake City; Miss Amy Jungling, thirty days, Buffalo; Mrs. George Scott, thirty days, Montclair, N. J.; Miss Dorothy Day, thirty days, New York; Miss Ella Findelsen, thirty days, Lawrence, Mass., and Miss Hilda Blumborg, fifteen days, New York.

AMERICANS LIONIZE WAR CROSS WINNERS

Ceremony of Presentation Followed by Rush to Congratulate the 15 Men Honored.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Monday, Nov. 26.—(Associated Press.)—An impressive ceremony marked the presentation today of the French War Cross to the fifteen American soldiers who withstood the first German raid on the Americans early this month.

It was late in the afternoon when the regiment, to which the company that suffered the casualties is attached, marched to the top of a big grassy hill. There, under skies threatening rain and with the cold, wintry wind blowing, the men formed three sides of a hollow square. At the base of the square the regimental colors and the Stars and Stripes cracked in the wind.

The regiment was called to attention as the General commanding came up and took his position in the open side of the square. The General first read the citation for the whole company, which was standing near the colors, breaches in the ranks showing where the men now in hospitals or prisoners in Germany had formerly stood. He congratulated the company, saying:

"Occasions arise frequently in war, and will arise frequently again, where clear-headed coolness and courage are necessary. This company behaved on one occasion as it was expected to do and as every other company of American soldiers is expected to do under similar circumstances. The French General commanding the sector considers these men have earned War Crosses and I here deliver them and the citations.

"You must understand that you must not wear them, but must keep them in your possession until Congress authorizes the wearing of them."

The General then presented the company's citation and Cross to the Lieutenant commanding Next the three lieutenants stepped from their positions, saluted and received their individual crosses. The General congratulated each. Next the non-commissioned officers and men marched up, were congratulated on receiving the honor and then returned to their places in the ranks.

The company Lieutenant received the Cross and citation for a corporal who was unable to leave the hospital because of a severe wound. To the regimental Colonel the General entrusted the decorations awarded to the three men killed in the raid, asking him to see that they were sent to the next-of-kin in the United States.

As the regimental band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," the regiment came briskly to the salute, remaining in that position until the last notes had been borne away across the valley by the wind. The regiment then marched back to the nearby town where it is billeted, seemingly with just a little more snap in every step. The men who had in their pockets the coveted French decoration, which is awarded only for heroic deeds in the face of the enemy, wore broad smiles of satisfaction.

If there was any man in the regiment who did not go to the tents of the honored company to shake the hands of the decorated comrades, it was because he had urgent duties elsewhere requiring immediate attention. The soldiers several times tried to evade the congratulations of their comrades and two of the younger ones who got the War Cross actually blushed when the press of admiring friends became too great around them.

HOWLAND TRUST ALLOTTED.

Estate of Hetty Green's Aunt to be Divided Among 45 Heirs.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—The full bench of the Supreme Court ruled that the Silvia Ann Howland trust fund, amounting to $1,000,000, in which Mrs. Hetty Green had a life interest, should be divided into forty-five parts for distribution among the heirs. By his order three grandchildren of Gideon Howland will each receive one part, and the remainder will be divided among the more remote of the 437 claimants.

Arguments in the case were heard recently at Taunton, certain of the heirs contending for a division of the estate into eleven parts, to correspond with the number of Gideon Howland's children. Under the plan as ordered by the court today, it is to be divided on the basis of the number of grandchildren, living and dead. The heirs concerned reside in thirty-three States, Hawaii, Canada, England, and France.

The property constituted the residuary estate of Sylvia Ann Howland of New Bedford, who died in 1865. Mrs. Green was a niece. Mrs. Howland's will provided that after the expiration of Mrs. Green's interest, the estate should pass to the lineal descendants of her grandfather, Gideon Howland of Dartmouth.

John Palmer Gavit, for four years managing editor of The Evening Post, announced yesterday that on Jan. 1 he would become associated with Harper & Brothers. Mr. Gavit will be a Director of the Harper organization, and will devote his attention both to the magazine and to books.

"I leave the active service of The Evening Post with a reluctance and a regret that it would be impossible to exaggerate," said Mr. Gavit yesterday. "Reasons of a strictly personal character, of interest only to myself and my family, make it imperative for me to retire from the daily newspaper business; otherwise, nothing that I can imagine would have induced me to leave The Evening Post."

Mr. Gavit will continue as a member of the Board of Trustees of The Evening Post.

Dr. and Mrs. Simon Baruch of 51 West Seventieth Street celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding last night with a large reception at Sherry's, more than a thousand guests attending. They stood on a dais on the south side of the large ballroom, in front of a basket of immense golden wedding chrysanthemums, sent by President Wilson, and received their relatives and friends, who began to arrive at 9 o'clock. Mrs. Baruch wore a trailing gown of white and gold brocaded satin and chiffon, with diamond ornaments.

The entire ballroom suite was used, and the ballroom was massed with thousands of yellow chrysanthemums, some of them in huge baskets sent by various organizations, for Mrs. Baruch is prominent in women's clubs.

Receiving with Dr. and Mrs. Baruch were their four sons, with their wives, including Bernard M. Baruch, appointed by the President as a member of the Advisory Committee of the Council of National Defense, and Mrs. Baruch; Dr. and Mrs. Herman B. Baruch, Mr. and Mrs. Hartwig N. Baruch, and Mr. and Mrs. Sailing W. Baruch. Eight of their nine grandchildren were also in the family group.

When the guests had all assembled the orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner," after which selections of patriotic and old-time songs were sung by a trio. Later, a buffet collation was served in the rooms adjoining at small tables. On the buffet table a small fountain sparkled in a golden light.

Many gifts were received by Dr. and Mrs. Baruch, which were displayed at their home in West Seventieth Street. Among them was a gold replica of the tablet placed by the municipal authorities a few weeks ago at the Rivington Street bath, commemorating his work in obtaining the bath, which bears his name, he being the first man in the United States to introduce municipal baths. Also a gold loving cup from the Charity Hospital which Bernard M. Baruch presented several years ago to the City of Camden, S. C., in honor of his father, who lived there before the civil war, and an illuminated address from the Directors of the Montefiore Home and Hospital, of which Dr. Baruch was one of the founders.

He is known widely through his writings and lectures and as a consulting specialist in chronic diseases. In 1888 he diagnosed the first recorded case of perforating appendicitis successfully operated on, and was formerly Professor of Hydrotherapy at the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

RILEY AND HYDE EARN FINAL ROUND BRACKETS IN ANNUAL FALL SQUASH TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

REACH FINAL ROUND OF SQUASH TOURNEY

A. W. Riley Will Meet F. Van S. Hyde Today—Exhibition Between Kinsella and Feron.

A. W. Riley, former Princeton Club squash tennis champion, but now playing from the Squash Club, and Fillmore Van S. Hyde, second in rank among the Harvard Club players, advanced to the final round of the annual Fall tournament at the Squash Club yesterday, the victories of each being registered in straight games. Riley, who was expected to have rather a hard time of it in advancing past the Harvard Club expert, J. W. Appel, succeeded in vanquishing his rival by rather a one-sided score of 15-5, 15-9. Hyde put a fellow Harvard Club player, J. Onatavia, out of the race with the score 15-5, 15-10.

The match between Riley and Appel was the centre of interest, for it was generally conceded that Hyde would have little difficulty in forcing the abdication from the tournament of Onatavia. Riley has for some time been a proficient wielder of the racquet, but he transcended his former skill in yesterday's contest. In his work there was a reflection of the style of play which has made Walter A. Kinsella the world's professional champion. Kinsella has been coaching Riley for some two months and Appel doubtless found his opponent a decidedly stronger rival than he had anticipated.

Appel's game is based largely on speed. He hits with great power at all times, but Riley met this attack without a tremor and made remarkable gets in the early stages of the conflict that presaged what was to be the eventual outcome of the match. Riley could not begin to match pace with his antagonist and fell back on a type of strategy which was finely developed to bring confusion to Appel's game. He changed pace in baffling manner and used the Kinsella passing shot to its full advantage. Then too he was more accurate in his stroking of the ball. He hit low, but seldom into the telltale and his corner shots were elusive.

The Harvard Club player, however, was far from being an easy victim. He fought determinedly for every point and the rallies were often long sustained until Riley's greater steadiness frequently decided the issue.

In the first game Appel was evidently taken by surprise by the swift rush of points that fell to Riley's play. In the second, however, he came more nearly to solving the game of his rival and the closeness of the contest is reflected in the score of 15-9.

Hyde was never pressed to display the full power of his game against Onatavia. Next to Winston, Hyde is probably the most adept and graceful squash tennis player hereabouts and it was evident from the start yesterday that the measure of his superiority over Onatavia was large.

The final round of the tournament will be played this afternoon. Following the match between Hyde and Riley, Walter A. Kinsella, the world's professional squash tennis champion, will play an exhibition match for the Red Cross against his old rival Stephen J. Feron, professional at Harvard, himself a former holder of the professional championships. Kinsella will allow Feron five aces in each game this afternoon.

YALE TRACK MEN REPORT.

Coach Mack Has Squad Preparing for Indoor Meets.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 27.—Yale athletes who are expected to try for places on the track and field team reported for the initial practice of the season yesterday. Coach Mack ordered all interested into the baseball cage and announced to the assembled candidates that there would be training every day excepting Sunday from now on until the mid-Winter holidays.

It is expected that those men who round to condition early will be entered in some of the Amateur Athletic Union indoor meets held in New York and Boston this Winter. It is almost certain that Yale will be represented in the annual meets of the Boston Athletic Association, the Meadowbrook A. C. of Philadelphia, and the New York A. C. games, provided the N. Y. A. C. holds a meet this season.

Coach Mack will give most of his attention to the development of hurdle and sprint men. Few veterans of any ability in these events have returned to the university this year. The coach made it known that the Winter work is important for track men, especially as it fits them for the outdoor season in the Spring and brings them to high efficiency more quickly.

Distance men will report, for the time being, to Coach Queal at the track house on Yale Field. Numerous races for these men will be held every few days.

TRACK MEET FOR SOLDIERS.

Camp Upton Athletes to Compete in N. Y. A. C. Games.

Officials of the New York Athletic Club announced last night that 5,000 soldiers from Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I., will compete in the club's set of track games to be held at the camp next Saturday. In preparation for this large turnout Paul Pilgrim of the Winged Foot organization is now at Yaphank attending to final arrangements for the meet. The day will be officially known as "New York Athletic Club Day," and promises to make one of the greatest days in the history of the camp. Assisting Pilgrim in the preparations for the meet are Frank Glick, the former Princeton athlete, who is civilian aid at the camp; Matthew P. Halpin, Chairman of the New York A. C. SIX-DAY CYCLISTS TRAIN.

Thirty Riders Get Into Condition for Race at Newark Velodrome.

Almost every one of the riders entered in the annual six-day bicycling race to be held in Madison Square Garden, beginning Sunday night at midnight, were training for the long grind over the Newark Velodrome track yesterday. Led by Frank Kramer, former sprint champion, and Oscar Egg, who are paired for the long grind, there were thirty riders busy at the same time. Kramer and Egg are expected to make a formidable team along with such contenders as Alfred Goullet and Jack Magin, Eddie Root and Peter Drobach, and Eddie Madden and Frank Corry.

It was Egg's first workout since his arrival from France Monday. The Swiss champion insists that he is in good condition and well able to stand the long grind. He has ridden in many long races in Europe during the last year. Bobby Walthour and Paul Suter, another foreigner who arrived with Egg, practiced together. They are to team in the race. Walthour rode with Suter over European tracks last Summer, and is well acquainted with his partner.

TENNIS LEAGUE ADVOCATED.

Kings County Members Advance Scheme to Keep Sport Alive.

With the idea of not only keeping alive but of stimulating interest in tennis even during the war period, it was proposed at the annual meeting of the Kings County Tennis Club, held last night at the home of Frank B. Ogilvie, President of the club, that a league of clubs be formed next season for the holding of week-end tournaments. The plan was first suggested by Charles Chambers, H. L. Westfall and Henry Mollenhauer, and was received enthusiastically at last night's meeting.

It was suggested that the following clubs, in addition to Kings County, would enter such a league as that proposed: The West Side Tennis Club, New York Athletic Club, Crescent Athletic Club, Montclair Athletic Club, University Heights Lawn Tennis Club, Terrace Club of Flatbush and Englewood Field Club.

The retiring members of the Board of Directors, Charles Chambers, A. A. Leverich and Jesse Fuller, advocated that the club cultivate the game of tennis among junior members, and that many special tournaments for them be held during the year.

There was no change in the officers of the club, all of the present incumbents being re-elected. The officers are: President, Frank B. Ogilvie; Vice President, Arthur J. Murphy; Secretary, J. W. Anderson, and Treasurer, Augustus R. Platt. Three changes will be made in the Board of Governors. H. L. Westfall, recent winner of the club championship; H. J. Morganthaler and Harry Lewis were elected to fill the places now occupied by A. A. Leverich, Jesse Fuller and Charles Chambers.

SUMMON BOXING OFFICIALS.

Fighters Also Called to Answer for Bouts at New Polo A. A.

Magistrate Ten Eyck, in the Harlem Police Court yesterday, issued seven summonses for the officials of the New Polo A. A. of Harlem and the boxers who took part in bouts at the club last Friday night. It is alleged in the complaint that those for whom summonses were issued promoted and engaged in boxing exhibitions in defiance of the law prohibiting such exhibitions. The summonses were made returnable on Friday. The affidavits on which they were issued were sworn to by Police Lieutenant Butler and four detectives from the Fourth Inspection District, acting under instructions from Inspector Morris.

The bouts last Friday night were the first that the officials of the New Polo A. A. have held since the Frawley law was annulled. They were carried on under the membership plan. The police officers in their complaint say that they were permitted to enter the club and witness the exhibitions after signing application blanks for membership in the organization and paying a nominal initiation fee.

On Friday also the case of the officials of the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn will be called in the Gates Avenue Court before Magistrate Howard Nash. Both cases are similar and upon the decisions in each will depend the future of boxing in this city.

A scarf pin will also go to every non-prize winner who weighs in and competes, and a point trophy has been donated to be presented to the club having the largest number of entries. NEWS OF ATHLETICS.

Hannes Kolehmainen, the veteran Finnish distance runner, is expected to start in the tenth annual Berwick modified marathon race which will be held tomorrow at Berwick, Penn. Kolehmainen has won the event two years in succession, but is promised stiffer opposition this year with Jimmy Henigan, the Boston runner, who recently won the senior national A. A. U. title; Clifton Horne, another Hub athlete; Juan Routzo, the Indian runner of Carlisle; Terry Halping, the local distance runner, and several other stars.

A field of about thirty harriers is expected to start in the tenth annual Yonkers marathon, through streets and roads of Yonkers, tomorrow. Officials of the race are hopeful that Villar Kyronen, the Finnish runner of the Millrose A. A., who won the event last year, will be among the starters. Already twenty-eight names have been received. The race will be twenty-five miles.

The Meadowbrook Club of Philadelphia will conduct its annual five-mile race tomorrow, and indications point to a large number of athletes competing in the run, with a representation of harriers from the metropolitan district. Another event tomorrow which is expected to attract its quota of entries among the local athletes is the Orange County championship. This race will be conducted over a course from Goshen to Middletown.

Officials of the Morningside A. C. are enthusiastic over the prospects of success attending their army and navy road run which will be held Sunday. Already fifteen entries have been received from the soldier athletes of Camp Dix, at Wrightstown, N. J., and there is every indication that the race will attract entries from Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I.; Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton, and the United States Army Ambulance Corps at Allentown, Penn.

Dates have been announced for four sets of indoor games. The Millrose A. A. will hold its annual indoor carnival on Jan. 23, and then will come the John Wanamaker Commercial Institute games, Meadowbrook Club games, and the senior national A. A. U. indoor championships. The latter competitions are usually held on the third Saturday in March, while the Meadowbrook Club holds its carnival on the second Saturday.

The next weekly handicap road run of the Yorkville Athletic League will be held from the Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A. Sunday, and will have representatives of St. John's Club, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., Union Settlement A. C., Hungarian-American A. C., St. Thomas's Club, and East Side House among the starters. Al Feher, the Hungarian-American Club's barrier, will start from scratch.

Entry blanks have been issued by the officials of the Morningside Athletic Club for the club's army and navy road race, which will be held over a course in Harlem, Sunday, starting and finishing at Central Casino, 154th Street, east of Eighth Avenue. The run will be for athletes in the service only and no entrance fee will be charged. The distance of the course mapped out is about five miles. The proceeds from the run will be used in purchasing athletic paraphernalia for the various local army camps.

Officials of the Long Island Athletic League at their first monthly meeting at the Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A. elected Frank J. Ruddy, Brooklyn A. A., President to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of James Clark, who is now an athletic director at Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I. Charles Hicks, Kings County A. A., was elected handicapper for the coming season. Plans for the 1917-18 road-running season were discussed and a decision was reached to inaugurate the season next Sunday with a run from the Swedish-American A. C.'s quarters in Brooklyn.

George Bothner, former wrestling champion, is to referee the series of matches to be held in the catch-as-catch-can tournament which is to start at the Lexington Theatre Dec. 3. Bothner has officiated at most of the wrestling matches held in New York in the last few years.

JULIALEON BEATEN IN RACE AT BOWIE

Promising Filly Fails to Reveal Previous Form and Loses in Slow Race.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 27.—Horses that had not won previously at the meeting came together this afternoon in the Autumn Consolation Handicap at a mile, and although some good performers were among the starters, the cold wind seemed to affect their speed, and the race was won by A. Lezama's Shooting Star in the slow time of 1:42 1-5. Three two-year-olds essayed the competition with older horses, but not one of them finished in the money. Perhaps the greatest disappointment was the comparatively poor showing made by G. W. Loft's Julialeon, a three-year-old filly that established track records at Saratoga. Julialeon appears to have lost the early foot that made her so formidable at the outset of the season, and the best she could do was to finish third, behind Shooting Star and M. Shea's Woodstone.

The best performance of the day was placed to the credit of Paul Powers's Bringhurst in the second race, at six and a half furlongs. This son of Plaudit exhibited the sprinting pace that gained him several victories early in the Maryland season, and at all times had the foot of his field. Buxton hustled him along at such a good pace that he completed the distance in 1:20 1-5, not far behind the track record. Bringhurst was opposed by a fair lot of sprinters, but although he was conceding weight to all the other starters, he was at odds on at the close of the mutuel speculation. The Thorncliffe Stable's Incog ran second and Grant Hugh Browne's Josefina Zarate third.

There were several surprises, the greatest coming when G. L. Goodacre's Golden Bantam won the fifth race, at a mile and a sixteenth. Very few considered the daughter of Star Shoot-Autumn Leaves as a contender, but J. Mooney, who rode her for the first time, appeared to get more out of the filly than had the other boys, and landed her in front of Handfull, another outsider. Golden Bantam paid better than 30 to 1. Billy Oliver scored a popular victory in the last race, when G. Walls managed to get Judge Wingfield home in front of E. K. Bryson's Vermont.

COCHRAN DISPLAYS TOP BILLIARD FORM

Young Player Has Average of 50 in Match at 18.2 Against Mayer.

Welker Cochran showed the true merit of his billiard game yesterday in the second and third blocks of his 2,500-point 18.2 match with Joseph Mayer of Philadelphia at Maurice Daly's Academy. By the excellence of his work he drew rapidly away from his rival, and is now leading by a score of 850 to 413. In the afternoon game Cochran defeated Mayer, 250 to 130, and made a high run of 158 and an average of 35 5-7.

In the evening his superiority was even more pronounced, Mayer being hopelessly outclassed by the brilliancy with which Cochran nursed the ivories. In this block Mayer was defeated by 300 to 64. Cochran averaged an even 50, and again passed beyond the 100 mark with his high run, which was 119. Mayer made his best run in the afternoon, when he clustered a count of 54, and his average was 21 4-6. In the evening his play was only about half as effective as regards high runs and average.

In recent matches in this city Cochran has shown a disposition to play the ivories wide open, but yesterday he demonstrated beyond question that he is still a master of the close-nurse game. His work was a revelation in artistic billiards. He was always master of the ivories, and made them do his bidding with almost mechanical precision. His high run of the day, 158, was a product of the closest kind of play, with a delicate weaving of the spheres across the short table and an occasional use of the line nurse for sizable clusters.

In the afternoon the Chicago expert only failed to count in double figures on two occasions, and in the evening he missed double counts only once. After a run of 4 at the outset of the evening game he gathered in a culster of 119, and followed this with runs of 72, 30, and 42 to run out his 300 points.

Mayer could never get started against such a formidable bit of play as that set forth by Cochran. An average of 35 is far beyond Mayer's ability under any but extraordinary circumstances, and when Cochran cut out an average of 50 in the evening Mayer was forced to sit idly by and witness disaster engulf him. He could not even summon the better quality of his game in an effort to hold down the margin of success for his opponent. There was little opportunity for him to get the ivories under control, and even when he did succeed he could not hold them for a continued run.

The scores:

AFTERNOON GAME.

Cochran—35 14 20 0 20 3 158. Total—250. Average—35 5-7. High runs—158 and 35.
Mayer—22 54 39 1 12 2. Total—130. Average—21 4-6. High runs—54 and 39.

EVENING GAME.

Cochran—4 119 72 30 42 33. Total—300. Average—50. High runs—119 and 72.
Mayer—8 12 9 25 12. Total—64. Average—12 4-5. High runs—25 and 12.

Gridiron Contest with Camp Upton Arranged for Tomorrow.

It was announced last night at Fordham University that arrangements had been completed whereby the Fordham eleven would play the Camp Upton team, headed by Franak Glick, tomorrow afternoon at Fordham Field. It was originally intended that Fordham play Fort Slocum, but somehow a conflict arose, and as Camp Upton wanted a game, Fordham agreed to the contest between the elevens.

Special to The New York Times.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Henry C. Gillo of Milwaukee today was elected Captain of the Colgate football team for 1918. Gillo is regarded locally as one of the best line plungers in the East. He has played three years as full back on the Colgate 'Varsity.

PENN ERASES ROUGH EDGES.

Quakers Put Finishing Touches on Eleven for Cornell Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—Coach Bob Folwell put the finishing touches on his Penn football aggregation today for the all-important Thanksgiving Day game with Cornell. The team dispensed with scrimmage drill, but the coach sent it through a hard workout so as to run no chances of his athletes being out of form for the Red and White squad. The entire eleven was on Franklin Field for practice with the exception of Captain Heine Miller.

Buck Wharton and Roy Mercer were on the field aiding Folwell in grooming the men. Mercer devoted his time to the Quaker backfield, and showed Berry and his comrades several finer points of football.

Folwell lined up the scrubs to oppose the 'Varsity. The second string players used the Cornell formations. Only a shadow scrimmage took place, the Penn coaches wishing to play safe and run no risks of injuries before the biggest game of the year. The regulars had no trouble breaking up the attacks launched by the scrub combination.

Captain Milller's damaged hand has shown improvement and Miller stated today he would be in the game.

FINAL GAMES FOR W. AND J.

Will Play W. and L. Tomorrow and Soldier Eleven Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Nov. 27.—Nineteen Washington and Jefferson football players left here tonight for the final games of the season, one at Richmond, on Thanksgiving Day, with Washington and Lee, and the other on Saturday at Toledo, Ohio, with the Camp Sherman soldiers, the latter a post-season army benefit event. The men making the trip are Captain McCreight, Carroll, Henry, Wilberly, Guy, Straw, Stein, Tressel, Stobbs, Smith, Ruble, Rese, Garbisch, Neal, Bixler, Young, Fiter, Creel, and Lally.

There was no practice today, but Coach Metzger hopes to hold a signal drill at Richmond tomorrow afternoon. Henry and Wilberly, two of the best line men, are suffering from injuries sustained in the Notre Dame game, but it is thought they will be able to play on Thursday. Smith, who has been out of two games, has recovered from his injuries, and will be in the backfield. Washington and Jefferson expects to win from Washington and Lee, but is dubious about the Camp Sherman clash, as it knows nothing of this team except that it is composed of former college stars.

EGAN WILL LEAD N. Y. U.

Quarter Back of Football Team Elected Captain for Next Year.

At a meeting of the Executive Council of the New York University Athletic Association ysterday, the members of this year's football team elected Quarter Back Floyd Egan Captain for next year. He comes from Brooklyn, where he attended Manual Training High School. Besides being a gridiron star Egan has won his letters in basket ball, track, and baseball.

Sidney J. Weinlander of Flatbush, a member of the Class of 1919, was elected Manager for 1918. Letters were awarded to the following: Egan, Finley, Fernandez, Goff, Brin, Goldberg, Sokolower, Gardiner, Christtopher, Gilloon, Ebenfied, Buckley, and Güntzer, Manager. Numerals were awarded to Billo, Covello, Fiedelbaum, Sulzer, Baker, Steilwagen, Wirth, Storch, and Weinlander, Assistant Manager.

CORNELL'S LINEUP IS STILL IN DOUBT

Coach Sharpe Not Expected to Pick Eleven for Penn Game Until Last Moment.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 27.—The makeup of the Cornell team in the game against Penn may not be known until after the players reach the clubhouse on Franklin Field Thursday noon. Dr. Al Sharpe, head coach of the teams, said today that he was not yet ready to announce his selections, intimating that much might depend on the condition of the players after the long trip to Philadelphia.

There were reports among the undergraduates today that in the signal drills Sharpe had been experimenting with a number of radical shifts, and that surprises might be forthcoming Thursday, but the head coach was silent on this question. The Ithacans worked for more than an hour in a final practice of the formations on which Nethercott will rely in the game, and it was noticeable that frequent changes were made in the lineup both in the forwards and backfield. Based on the work of the last two days the coaches are certain to place Colvin and Spiegelberg at the ends, and Herriman and probably Harris at tackles with Swanson, Straus, and Trowbridge probable selections for the centre trio, though there is a possibility of unexpected last minute changes.

Nethercott will play quarter back and Acting Captain Hoffman is certain to play in the backfield. Carry has come to the front fast in the last week, and he is likely to replace Cross at left half back for part of the game at least. Coach Sharpe said he would take thirty-seven men to Philadelphia, including all of the 'Varsity squad and fifteen scrubs.

Weeks to Lead Brown.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 27.—Joshua H. Weeks of New Bedford, Mass., was elected Captain of the Brown University football team last night. He has played at end for three years.

BOND CLUB HEARS ECONOMY APPEAL

D. W. Morrow of Morgan & Co. Urges Sale of War Certificates.

STOUT HEARTS WILL WIN

Banker Warns Members Not to Be Discouraged by Temporary Military Setbacks.

Dwight W. Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Co., in an address yesterday before several hundred members of the New York Bond Men's Club, 120 Broadway, urged them to take an active part in war economy, by assisting in the sale of war savings certificates.

"The fundamental principle which underlies the war savings movement," said Mr. Morrow, "is to release labor and material for the Government. It is not primarily a bond-selling movement; it is primarily a national thrift movement to conserve materials and labor now utilized for non-essentials. It is the doctrine of releasing services for the Government. It is a doctrine of releasing man power for the Government. And in this war savings campaign if men and women do without goods and services now by lending $4.12 to the Government and getting a bond that pays them $5, five years from now, they are obviously deferring the command of goods and services until a future time when with the proceeds of that bond they will again command goods and services.

"The important thing is that they will at that time be commanding goods and services for which their Government is not in such acute competition with them. It is all summed up in that one expression, that no man ever spends anything without making some one else work for him."

Quoting Lloyd George Mr. Morrow pointed out that the war would have its disasters as well as its successes, its defeats as well as its victories, and that it would be won in the end by the nation with the "stoutest heart."

"The nation that can do without the most for the longest period," said Mr. Morrow, "that will be the nation with the stoutest heart. War means discouragement; war means disappointment. War means the making of plans over and over and over again, and watching the frustration of those plans over and over again. War means a Gallipoli, and perhaps another Gallipoli; another Rumanian and another Italian disaster. War means discouragement until all but the soutest hearts are sick. This war will be won by the nation that can best stand disappointment, by the nation that has the stoutest heart. It is going to depend upon men like you all over the United States whether or no America shall be the nation with the stoutest heart."

George F. Baker, Jr., Vice President of the First National Bank and a member of the Red Cross Mission which recently returned from the Italian front, described some of his impressions of the Italian Army. From what he had seen of Italian soldiery, he said, he had complete confidence in its ability to convert the recent reverses into final success. During the Teuton advance into Northrn Italy, he said, the Italians were forced to abandon hospitals containing 100,000 beds. A good portion of the prisoners taken by the Germans, he said, were undoubtedly wounded Italian soldiers.

"The Italian Army is well fed, well clothed and well able to keep up its end of the fight," said Mr. Baker. "Even though circumstances may force it to yield its position on the Piave, I have no doubt that it will organize its new lines at the Adige to such great advantage that the enemy will finally find its venture into Italy fruitless of results."

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Want Trade Bureau Cared For.

Believing that upon the success of the efforts of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce will to a considerable degree depend the increasing of American exports of textiles after the war, the National Council of American Cotton Manufacturers has passed resolutions urging Congress to allow liberal appropriations for the support and development of the bureau. It further urges that the men of the ablest business talents be included in the personnel of the bureau. Copies of the resolution have been forwarded to the President, the Senate, and the House.

Crude Rubber Prices Steadier.

A little more active trading, in which big buyers joined only to a limited extent if at all, kept local crude rubber prices from dropping as much as usual in the week just closed. However, they closed generally below the prices current at that time. Up-river fine was quoted at 55 cents, spot, with coarse at 37 and upper Caucho ball at 35. The plantations brought 57 cents for spot first latex, and 56 cents for prompt shipments of smoked sheets. The market is now thought to be "scraping bottom," and higher prices are predicted by sellers in spite of the dilatory buying tactics of the bigger manufacturers.

Cold Weather Hits Coal Trade.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that the sharp weather which arrived over the week-end found the local retail trade poorly prepared to meet a sudden increase in demand. For a long time past coal has been going out of the yards as fast as received, so there is no reserve to draw upon. From all accounts there has been little, if any, recent increase in the tonnage coming to this market. Trading in the bituminous market remains practically at a standstill. Mining companies and jobbers alike are putting everything on contract. The only exception is an occasional odd lot which, for one reason or another, has to be disposed of at the Government price.

Jobbers Like Hem Tops.

If makers of men's hemmed top hosiery of the new type, in which a double four-inch top is knitted and welted in a single operation, were as sure of a liberal reception of their product by the consumers as has been given it by the jobbing trade, they would have very little to worry about. Not that they are really worrying, for they feel that the advantages of the new sock over the ribbed top can easily be demonstrated by retail sales clerks. That the jobbers favor the new socks is shown by orders for several thousand dozens which have been received in various quarters before the mills are equipped with the special machines to turn them out. While these jobbers are calling mostly for cotton hose, the new tops are also being favorably regarded by them in medium-priced silk goods.

New Bathing Suit Styles.

New bathing suit styles for the Palm Beach trade and for Spring, as shown by a number of local manufacturers, include most of the striking effects that were produced so successfully this Fall in women's dresses. The bustle effect is variously treated, in several cases the designers going so far as to use wire for stiffening purposes. In these creations taffetas and satins are most frequently used, sometimes in black and unadorned, other times in bright solids or in brilliant color combinations. There are also stripes and plaids, both large and small, in all the popular shades of the day. The tunics which proved so popular last Summer are again in evidence this year in many attractive variations.

Holiday Neckwear Selling.

Holiday buying of men's neckwear in the local department stores is said to have started in already with fair activity. Though some small stripes and checks in black and white and other hues are sought, it is reported that the most popular so far have been of large splash designs in the more subdued colors. Brocaded four-in-hands have been unusually popular, the quieter shades in these also being the most in demand. In some of the more expensive lines Persian effects and large jacquard figures have attracted a great deal of attention. The bias as well as the straight-cut type are used, and both seem to be well taken.

Something New Is Badly Needed.

That the cry the retail milliners are sending up for new things is not camouflage is shown by the experience a well-posted millinery man had recently during the luncheon hour at one of the city's smartest hotels. He went there to see if he could come upon something new, and this is what he said afterward: "The styles were what might be called mediocre, with the Russian turban absolutely dominant—the same Russian turban that has been selling for the last year in the better millinery departments. Not a single departure in the way of shapes or trimmings was noted."

Gray Goods Trade in the Air.

With cotton at its highest point since 1869, the lid was torn off in the local gray goods market yesterday by buyers who wanted to cover as far into 1918 as the mills would sell. With some of the latter by no means anxious to take up long contracts, and others refusing outright unless top prices were paid, it can be seen that trading for these positions could have been more active. The scarcity of actual spots of all constructions kept the bulk of the trading confined to deliveries wanted in the next three to four months. Contract business was done on printcloths at these levels: 39-inch 68-72s, 13½ cents; 38½-inch 64-60s, 11¾ cents; 60-52s, 10⅝ cents, and 60-48s, at 10¼ cents. Sheetings, drills, and specialties continued to move where sellers had not put the clamps on, with all prices "top." Spot printcloth prices ranged about this way:

39-inch, 68-72s	*14c	39-inch, 60-52s	10⅞c
29-inch, 56-44s	9¾c	9-inch, 60-48s	10⅜c
38½c-inch, 64-64s	12½c	27-inch, 64-60s	*8⅝c

Coat-Dress for Spring.

The coat-dress, which proved to be so popular this Fall, and which many believe was a big factor in the reduced demand for suits, is very much in evidence in the early Spring styles. It is variously treated and many attractive arrangements of materials are displayed. Wool velour is used extensively, and so is wool jersey cloth. In many of the garments the bustle effect is beautifully worked out, sometimes in modified forms, sometimes quite extreme. The straight silhouette, however, has also been given a good deal of attention and thought by designers, and especially in the "stylish stouts" great ingenuity is shown. Houses with men out on the road are already said to be receiving substantial orders, and everything points, they say, to a prosperous 1918 season.

Some Eastern Underwear Priced.

Buyers who came to this market yesterday in the hope of a general opening of Fall, 1918, lines of ribbed and fleeced underwear were disappointed. Several well-known ribbed lines were opened at prices running from 45 to 60 per cent. above those quoted for 1917 goods a year ago this time, but other lines, it was announced, will probably not be priced before Monday next. Fleeced goods probably will be opened at that time also. Many of the prices made yesterday were tentative, and it is probable that several of them will be withdrawn by today. As for the actual figures, a line of 11-pound ribbed shirts and drawers was opened at $8 a dozen, against $5.50 a dozen last year. Others brought as low as $7.50, while 15 and 16 pound union suits for men were priced anywhere from $4 to $5 a dozen higher than last year. In percentages these advances were practically the same as on separate garments.

CANADIAN WHEAT POURS IN.

Volume Entering United States Greatly Increased with Duty Off.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Canadian wheat is pouring into the United States duty free through every customs district on the northern border in largely increasing volume, the Department of Commerce announced today.

For the nine months ended with last September, this country imported from Canada 21,490,269 bushels, more than 14,000,000 of which came in free after April 16, the date on which Canada removed its import duty on wheat. During these nine months wheat-flour imports totaled 403,270 barrels, of which 297,000 came in free, against a total of 157,289 barrels in the same period of 1916, and hardly more than 90,000 in 1915.

Movement of Canadian flour to the west coast is noticeable.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Market Shows No Definite Trend—Campaigning for National Economy Begins.

The stock market continues to reflect efforts of traders to take advantage of opportunities for profit through the readjustment of prices following the halting of the long decline. The changes yesterday were again highly irregular and in no way a reaction to the day's news. The railroads lost a little ground, but the Street has not yet made up its mind as to what the revolutionary changes proposed by the War Board will mean when translated into net earnings. The publication yesterday of October results for the Atchison and Union Pacific served to emphasize the extent to which operating costs are outstripping the economies put in force when labor and materials were cheaper. Both companies enjoyed a substantial increase in gross earnings, and both reported decreases in their net earnings after taxes. These roads are among the more fortunate lines. Some of the Eastern carriers have been forced to accept more business than they have facilities for handling, and have lost any measure of control over their operating costs which was possible when they were able to sidetrack equipment for small repairs when needed.

Wall Street's machinery for the distribution of securities is being made ready to aid in the sale of the new war savings thrift stamps, of which it is confidently expected that the full $2,000,000,000 authorized by law will be sold in the next few months. The importance of this supplementary scheme of Government financing lies not so much in the additional revenues which it will bring into the Treasury as in the lesson it will carry in the campaign for national economies. The line of self-denial must be drawn more clearly if the United States is to make good its promises in the way of support both for its own troops abroad and for the Allies. It is doubly hard to press home the new idea of thrift when wages are at unprecedented levels, but the war savings cards proved an important factor in bringing about the concentration of Great Britain's energies upon the speeding up of useful industries, with the result that with more than 10 per cent. of the entire population under arms the output of manufactures has actually increased, and similar results are expected here. With the lesson of the other belligerents' experience before us, more rapid progress should be attained in putting this nation upon a war business basis.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

Fair Degree of Activity in Gilt-Edged Securities.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The stock market maintained its cheerfulness and strength today. The publication of the prospectus of the French loan did not lessen interest in other allied war loans, and gilt-edged securities in which there was a fair degree of activity.

Argentine rails were dearer and shipping shares buoyant, while oil, iron and steel stocks were active and strong features, speculators as well as investors buying them. Brazilian bonds were better. Money was tighter and discount rates were steady.

DETAILS OF GOLD EXPORTS.

Japan Alone Took $155,467,726 in 9 Months—Spain $99,337,400.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Details of the country's commerce for the first nine months of the year, made public today by the Department of Commerce, showed that the enormous increase in gold exports was absorbed largely by Japan and Spain. Japan took $155,467,726 in gold from the United States from January through September, as compared with $9,300,630 in the same period of 1916, and was virtually the only one of the allied countries to receive precious metal from America in September. Spain imported $99,337,400 for nine months, against $29,601,520 in the same period of the preceding year.

Mexico got $8,712,279 in gold up to Sept. 30, as compared with less than a million dollars in the corresponding period of 1916. Total gold exports for nine months amounted to $348,968,514 in 1917, compared with $94,430,462 last year.

Silver exports increased from $47,723,604 in 1916 to $62,236,862 so far this year. Imports of gold almost ceased in September, being less than $5,000,000, due to the fact that the Government now is financing the Allies' purchases here by credits. Silver, however, attracted by record high prices, was imported in unusual quantities, amounting to $5,796,320 for the month, or more than 100 per cent. greater than the quantity brought in during September, 1916. Mexico sent the bulk of the metal, with other large quantities coming from Peru.

Importations of merchandise for September included $1,153 worth of German goods bought before diplomatic relations were severed and held in transit by the Allies' blockade.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Cotton Fluctuations.

Apropos of yesterday's slight reaction in the cotton market, which carried prices back somewhat from Monday's high level, an old trader remarked that in his opinion the significant feature of recent market movements is not the strength of the advances, but the feebleness of the reactions. In ordinary markets the speculative pendulum swings back and forth with about equal vigor, but now there is a strong and steady undercurrent which is constantly upward, and consequently neutralizes the down swing almost completely. The result is that not only are the reactions of the market relatively slight, but the volume of business on down days is much smaller. A close observer of the cotton trade, who has just returned from a business trip through the South, reports that the advance in prices has, as might have been expected, failed to keep pace with the desires of the producers. A short time ago they declared that nothing short of thirty-cent cotton would be reasonable. Then their ambitions advanced to forty cents, he said, and now, with prices well over the thirty-cent level, some of them are already beginning to talk about fifty-cent cotton. As a matter of fact, some cotton is selling for fifty cents a pound already—the best quality of long staple, which, it is rumored, is much in demand for airplane cloth.

Christmas Gift Suggestions.

The substitution of United States Thrift Cards, War Savings Certificates, and Liberty Loan bonds for money as Christmas gifts is being actively encouraged by the American Exchange National Bank. A sign was placed over its doors yesterday calling attention to this unusual opportunity to please friends and serve the Government at the same time.

Bank's Letter Effective.

It was reported last week that a large New York City bank had written a letter to one of its Southern correspondents in regard to the sale of Liberty Loan bonds, in which attention was called to the unpatriotic action of subscribing to bonds merely for the purpose of "making a showing" and selling the same immediately after the closing of subscription books. It was learned yesterday that the Southern institution was enlightened by the letter, repented its proposed move, and immediately canceled the order for the sale of the bonds. The bank further advised that it had decided to join the Federal Reserve System.

Interest on Russian Bonds.

A semi-annual interest payment on the $25,000,000 five-year 5½ per cent. bonds of the Imperial Russian Government is due Saturday and will be paid at the National City Bank. Payments will amount to $687,500. The bonds are not due until Dec. 1, 1921, and they are redeemable either in dollars in New York or in rubles at the Imperial State Bank of Russia at the current commercial rates of exchange in Petrograd at sight in New York. Yesterday the bonds sold up to 49, closing at 47¾, with a bid of 47. The issue price was 94¾, or just about double the present selling price. At current quotations the Russian bonds yield between 13 and 14 per cent.

Not a New Contract.

There was gossip in Wall Street yesterday to the effect that the Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation had obtained a big contract from the Government. Apparently, however, this was founded upon the fact that the Aircraft Production Board recently altered some of the terms and the specifications of the existing contract under which the corporation is now working on Hispano-Suiza motors, providing for more power in the motors, and also looking to increased production. The latest advices from the Wright-Martin plant are that production is now close to eight complete Hispano-Suizas a day.

HUFF SUCCEEDS MAHER.

Elected President of the Third Avenue Railway Company.

Slaughter W. Huff, Vice President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, was yesterday elected President of the Third Avenue Railway Company. He succeeds Edward A. Maher, who tendered his resignation last August, the same to take effect Dec. 31.

Mr. Huff is a native of Virginia, and a graduate of Cornell University. The first position he held was with the Baxter Electric Motor Company of Baltimore, one of the pioneer manufacturers of electric street railway motors and equipment, of which company he ultimately became the General Superintendent. He later became Electrical Engineer of the Columbia & Maryland Railroad, Master Mechanic, and Electrical and Mechanical Engineer of the United Railways of Baltimore. In 1902 Mr. Huff accepted the position of General Manager of the Virginia Railway and Power Company of Richmond, Va., and spent six years in rebuilding and reorganizing the various properties. In 1908 he came to Brooklyn to assume the Presidency of the Coney Island & Brooklyn Railroad Company. When the stock of the company was acquired by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, Mr. Huff was continued as President, and in addition was made Vice President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit and its subsidiaries.

Union Pacific Report for October.

The October report of earnings of the Union Pacific Railway Company shows an increase of $1,439,004 in gross revenue and a decrease of $388,000 in net earnings. This discrepancy was due to an increase of $365,022 in maintenance expenses, $768,362 in operating expenses, and $580,506 in taxes. For the ten months ended Oct. 31, the net earnings amounted to $35,734,325, or $1,644,890 less than in the corresponding period of 1916. In this case, however, the difference was almost entirely accounted for by the increased taxes due to the Federal War Tax.

TELLS STOCK INCREASE NEED

General Electric Co. Issues Statement for Voting Stockholders.

The General Electric Company, which has called a meeting of its stockholders for Jan. 3 next at Schenectady to vote on a proposition to increase the authorized capital stock of the company from $105,000,000 to $125,000,000, has issued, for the information of voting stockholders, a statement of its financial position and of the reasons for this action.

It is explained that the proceeds of the $15,000,000 of three-year notes sold by the company last July, and of the $10,000,000 of two-year notes sold last week, are needed to tide over the emergency need for more capital, resulting from the increase, under war conditions, of the company's business from the 1915 total of $133,000,000 to the estimated total for the present year of $230,000,000. The company has already expended $36,000,000 in extensions of its manufacturing facilities, with an increase of $70,000,000 in inventories and customers' notes and accounts outstanding.

As normal business conditions are restored, the statement continues, "it is expected that sufficient capital will be released by the reduction of inventories and notes and accounts receivable to meet the $25,000,000 notes at their maturity. The $10,000,000 capital stock which it is now proposed to offer to the stockholders at par will supply all the permanent capital which it appears necessary to provide at present."

A brief statement is appended showing the orders, sales, net income and surplus of the company for 1915 and 1916 and an estimate, based on the business so far done, for 1917. The net income is estimated at $27,000,000, against $19,160,975 in 1916, and the surplus at $50,000,000, against $34,[illegible] in 1916. The policy of semi-annual stock dividends was adopted, it is explained, because of the large surplus account which represents earnings invested in additional manufacturing facilities and working capital.

COTTON MARKET DULL

Th cotton market rested yesterday after three successive exciting bull sessions, the last of which had carried the list above the 30-cent level. The market, accordingly, was rather dull, and trading was narrow in scope. Such fluctuations as took place seemed due to the efforts of some traders to even up their commitments over Thanksgiving, even at less than top profits. As a result, the market, after an abbreviated imitation of recent rallies in the morning hours, sagged off later and closed barely steady, off from 3 to 23 points.

The opening was from 2 points down to 3 points up. Early trading was more brisk than at any other time during the day, Liverpool and domestic trade buying continuing to supply the impetus. Presently, however, immediate demands seemed to be met, and profit taking became evident, with the result that prices went down almost as rapidly as they had gone up. The bottom was found between 20 and 30 points below the opening, before the short interest had had a chance to develop much strength. The result was the best upward swing of the day, but on a small volume of trading, and realizing at the close brought prices down once more.

Southern spot advices varied, there being reports of continued demand east of the Mississippi, but easier trading in the Southwest. There was some Southern selling on the local market.

No improvement was reported in the ocean freight situation so far as immediate room was concerned, and cotton sold for shipment abroad is said to be accumulating in the warehouses. Exports yesterday were 12,836 bales, making 1,654,401 so far this season. Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were 13 points lower to 13 points higher; generally unchanged.

RAPID TRANSIT REVENUES.

October Gross Report of Interborough Gains Over Last Year.

The monthly report of earnings of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for October shows a gross operating revenue of $3,563,592, an increase of $16,658 over the figures for October, 1916. The net operating revenue, however, owing to an increase of $233,068 in operating expenses, decreased from $2,211,543 to $1,995,134. Owing to heavy increases in interest and rental charges and taxes, the reduction in net corporate income dropped from $1,032,940 for October, 1916, to $724,570. For the four months' period ended Oct. 31, the net corporate income was $2,080,763, a decrease of $246,780.

The monthly report of the Third Avenue Railway shows a total operating revenue for October of $896,965, an increase of $506,943 over the figures of October, 1916, when the lines were still affected by the strike. Operating expenses were slightly decreased, and as a result the Third Avenue, which for the month of October, 1916, showed an operating deficit of $238,442, last October showed an operating income of $276,516. The net income for the month still shows a deficit, but of only $5,870, against $505,508 for the previous year.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

It remains to be seen whether the new departure of the Food Administration, which will no longer give entire preference to the moving of wheat but will also control corn and oats, is going to seriously affect the movement of wheat to the mills. Some authorities complain that if the receipts are materially curtailed, mills in all parts of the country will be clamoring for wheat within a very short time, as the movement at best has been moderate, at least as it appears in the daily statistical reports. A break of 4 cents a bushel occurred in the Argentine market yesterday, which was thought to reflect larger offers and possibly less favorable conditions regarding tonnage.

RYE.—Market firmer; No. 2 Western, $1.91, cost and freight, New York.

CORN.

The corn market was easy at the close owing to the promise of larger receipts in the near future. The Food Administration has taken up the question of moving the corn crop, and it was said that in the future preference will not be given to wheat, but that corn and oats will also receive attention. John J. Stream, Vice President of the Chicago Board of Trade, has been appointed head of the coarse grain division of the Food Administration and will have charge of the transportation and movement of coarse grain. The local cash market was easier, new yellow corn being quoted at $1.89, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, ten days shipment; Argentine, $2.05 to $2.10, free on board, New York, to arrive.

OATS.

Another sharp advance in the oats market sent that market to new high records, but prices reacted at the close on the promise of increased transportation facilities, and final prices were ½c net higher to ⅝c lower. A further sharp advance in Winnipeg and reports that Government buying, both in Canadian and American markets, was absorbing offers proved the potent bull factor. The local cash market was firm, standard quoted at 80c; No. 2 white, 80c; No. 3 white, 79½c; No. 4 white, 79c; fancy clipped white, 79½@81½c; ordinary clipped white, 78½@79½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

A more liberal hog movement, with the hogs coming in heavier, and a decline in the hog market exerted only a temporarily bearish influence on the provision list. Prices were influenced more particularly by the action of grain, at one time showing a sharp upward movement and closing with a partial reaction, although considerably above the previous close. The cash demand was active, and there was said to be a good export business doing. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 32,000; estimated for Wednesday, 35,000. Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 8,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

A firmer tone prevailed in the market for cottonseed oil owing to an absence of selling pressure and due to the pronounced firmness in hog products, as well as other fats and greases. The volume of business was small, however, consisting of 1,000 barrels, and net price changes were not important, the close being unchanged to 10 points higher. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market was steadier yesterday. It seemed that recent liquidation had left a firmer technical position, while there was trade buying as well as scattered covering, accompanied by reports of a steadier tone in Brazil. March contracts sold at 7.24c and May at 7.36c, or about 4 to 8 points net higher, with the general list closing at a net advance of 5@7 points. The business included further exchanges of December for September at 77 and 78 points, and of December for March at 25 points. The local spot market was steady on the basis of 7½c for Rio 7s and 9¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

Cuban officials are expected to meet here Friday and again start negotiations looking toward a maximum price on new-crop sugars. It is believed that, before the conference is ended a price will be fixed, and that the International Sugar Committee will at once make purchases of new crop, to come forward as rapidly as possible. In the meantime the situation here is acute, and the Russian sugar recently released has not been distributed, but it is believed that details will be settled upon so the sugar may be widely distributed the last of this week. Old crop Cubas remained nominally unchanged at the fixed price of 6.90c, duty paid. Spot prices follow: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅛c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,074 packages. The market was higher and excited. There was a very marked shortage of fine and fancy fresh creamery, and prices on these grades jumped 1c a pound, but the secondary qualities moved upward a little and did not show the same improvement as the finer qualities. More done in storage creamery, but values advanced about ½c. Ladies and packing stock remained slow. Creamery, higher than extras, per lb., 48½@49c; extras, (92 score,) 47½@48c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43½@47c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40½@43c; thirds, 38½@39½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 49½@50c; extras, 48½@49c; firsts, 44½@47½c; seconds, 41½@44c; creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 44@44½c; extras, 43@43½c; firsts, 41½@42½c; seconds, 40@41c; thirds, 38@38½c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 46@47c; good to prime, 42@45c; common to fair, 36@41½c; renovated, extras, 41@42c; firsts, 39½@40½c; lower grades, 35@38c; ladles, current make, firsts, 35½@34c; seconds, 32½@33c; lower grades, 31@32c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 30@31½c.

EGGS.—Receipts, 4,072 cases, not including 400 cases in transit for export. The scarcity of new-laid qualities continues, and dealers are short of any new-laid stock to supply urgent needs of the trade. Prices show further improvement under the competition to secure the few lots arriving which show desirable quality. Storage eggs more active, and the tone firmer, with sales reported showing some improvement in prices. Nearby white eggs are in comparatively light supply, the demand is quiet and selective, and values very irregular. Few of the receipts show uniformly good size and freshness, and only such reach top quotation. The greater part of the business ranges from about 72c downward. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 58@60c; extra firsts, 56@57c; firsts, 54@55c; seconds, 47@53c; thirds and poorer, 40@45c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34½@35c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 33@34c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 30½@32½c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 24@30c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 72@76c; ordinary to good, 60@70c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 60@72c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 55@60c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 56@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 60@68c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 56@60c.

Safety in War Time

ESPECIALLY in times like these, investors should rigorously apply the standard rule to confine their investments to securities founded on necessities.

FIRST mortgage bonds, safeguarded under the Straus Plan, are based on the first necessities of life. They mature serially in two to ten years, and yield 6% net. Denominations, $1,000 and $500.

THE character and record of these sound bonds merit their thorough investigation by conservative investors. On request we will send literature explaining the merits of the Straus Plan and the bonds safeguarded thereunder. Call or write for

DISCUSS EFFECTS OF PAPER DECREE

Government's Lawyers See in It an End of General Combinations.

AID TO PRICE REGULATION

Federal Trade Commission Now Recognized by Court as Body to Fix the Maximum Figure.

While members and employes of the News Print Manufacturers' Association, which was dissolved by court decree on Monday, were preparing yesterday for a wind-up of the business of the association, lawyers and corporation heads were discussing the significance and probable ultimate effects of the agreement between the Government and the news print manufacturers by which the paper situation was settled.

Two features of the agreement and court action based upon it were generally considered as especially important to the country at large, as distinguished from the news print paper industry. These were the establishment in law of the illegality of the so-called open competition associations when they have the effect of restraining trade and the court recognition of the Federal Trade Commission as a maximum price-fixing body for manufacturers and their customers.

Mark Hyman of 61 Broadway, one of the special assistance to the Attorney General who represented the Government in the action against the news print manufacturers and in the agreement, said yesterday that, in his opinion, the court decree abolishing the News Print Manufacturers' Association would have the effect of causing Directors to modify many other open competition associations now acting to restrain trade, and would, in addition, give the Government a sound basis of action against any such associations which continued to operate illegally. He pointed out that the decree had been admitted as having a foundation in law by several of the leading corporation lawyers of the city, and this gave it a standing among the members of the bar which would be generally recognized.

The News Print Manufacturers' Association, as do similar organizations in various industries, represented the latest method adopted by manufacturers to control their market, according to the Government's contention. When the first "trust busting" activities of the Government directed against the great corporations were successful, manufacturers seeking a new way to do an old thing, made formal agreements among each other as to prices, output, and distribution of products, Mr. Hyman said. The Government broke up these formal agreements as illegal, he went on, and then pooling agreements, according to which manufacturers paid certain sums of money into a pool and forfeited their stake if they became independent as to prices, &c., began to be heard of.

The Government put an end to the pooling agreements, and then came arbitration agreements, under which a man employed by manufacturers went from place to place to investigate and determine the prices and conditions that should govern the selling of products. When the arbitration agreements had been declared illegal, some manufacturers devised the system of selling their products through an agent who would apportion his sales among them.

Such selling schemes had their short day before falling below the law, and the next and latest development was the informal agreement among manufacturers which in the popular mind is represented by the famous "Gary Dinner," although Judge Gary has denied without successful contradiction by the Government that the dinner over which he presided was a price-fixing occasion. The News Print Manufacturers' Association, according to the Government, was a "Gary dinner" kind of an organization. The allegation upon which the decree for its dissolution was based was that the Executive Committee of the association held secret and informal meetings at which no minutes were kept but at which a small group of men who knew each other well discussed their industry and verbally agreed as to how it should be controlled in the interests of the manufacturers. The results of these agreements, the Government charged, were distributed among the members of the association who, though under no stated compulsion to abide by the decisions as to prices, production, and distribution, acted in what they considered their own best interest and did so.

The dissolution of the association was the first instance of Government success against this particular kind of "open competition association," and so established a precedent of importance. Mr. Hyman pointed out, however, that many industrial associations of manufacturers and others, formed for the purpose of advertising, research work, and mutual co-operation in such things as patents, were perfectly legal and distinctly beneficial. The only associations which need fear the law, he said, were those which had the effect of restraining trade, whether this was their expressed purpose or not.

Herbert C. Smyth of 15 Wall Street, who was also a special assistant to the Attorney General in the case against the paper manufacturers, emphasized yesterday the importance of the court recognition of the Federal Trade Commission as a price-fixing body. He said that the commission appeared for the first time as the fixer of a maximum price to govern an open market. The first price regulation by the commission came when it advised purchasing war boards what prices they should pay for products. Now the commission has been empowered to fix maximum prices for news print paper as between manufacturers and customers in general. This granting of authority to the commission was by agreement, but, Mr. Smyth said, if the public came to look upon the commission as a price-fixing body, the time when the commission would be authorized by Congress to fix maximum prices in any industry would be brought nearer. Mr. Hyman yesterday presented the most important features of the news print agreement as follows:

1. The agreement provides for determining maximum prices and does not fix prices; thus it leaves competition open up to the point of the maximum price, and assures the publishers that they will not have to pay more than the maximum.

2. The agreement will bring before the Federal Trade Commission considerably over one-half of the total consumption of news print paper within the United States and over three-fifths of the total consumption east of the Rocky Mountains. It brings in practically all of the Canadian manufacturers, including the tonnage represented by the Canadian Export Paper Company, Limited, which tonnage would not be subject to the jurisdiction of the United States except for the making of this agreement.

3. It is expected that steps will be taken to request the consent of the other manufacturers so that the great bulk of the tonnage, at least east of the Rocky Mountains, may be brought before the Federal Trade Commission, with the exception of the two companies that have never been in any combination and have always made just and reasonable prices without Governmental coercion.

4. The agreement brings in the tonnage represented by Mr. Gould and Mr. Backus, both of whom had declined to come into the previous arbitration agreement.

5. The agreement provides that each manufacturer shall insert in his contracts with his customers the arbitration provision as to prices and terms of contract, so that each publisher will have a legal cause of action in case of a violation of the agreement. In addition, the right is reserved to the Attorney General, representing all the publishers, to take steps to have the agreement carried out. The agreement is also recognized in the court decree.

6. The previous arbitration agreement provided for merely a six months' duration of fair prices, leaving the publishers at the mercy of the combination when the six months was up. The present agreement is complete, and covers the entire duration of the war and three months thereafter.

7. The defendants are put under broad injunctions preventing any form of general combination in the future, and preventing any of the manufacturers or their agents from entering into agreements, understandings, or concerts of action to limit or restrict them in their competition or to deter others from entering the field.

8. The Government's view that these open competition associations are illegal, is recognized in the most sweeping way, first, by the imposition of very substantial fines upon the indicted defendants, and, second, by the broad provisions of the decree enjoining the defendants from entering into any general combination which involves a concerted working to control or raise prices.

9. The agreement provides for regulation of just and reasonable terms of sale, instead of the arbitrary uniform contracts which were sprung on the publishers last Fall.

It was said yesterday at the offices of the News Print Manufacturers' Association, 18 East Forty-first Street, that a meeting of the members of the association would be held here about the middle of December so that they might take formal action dissolving their organization in accordance with the court decree.

JACOB H. SCHIFF RESIGNS.

To be Succeeded on Federal Milk Commission by His Son.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Because of pressure of other affairs, Jacob H. Schiff, the New York banker, has resigned from the Federal Milk Commission of New York. The Food Administration announced the fact in the following communication:

"To the great regret of the United States Food Administration and of those who would have been associated with him, Mr. Jacob Schiff of New York finds it necessary to resign from the Federal Milk Commission for New York City.

"Mr. Schiff's wide experience, both in business and in philanthropic projects, would have made his judgment of very great value to the Commission, but the pressure of other affairs prevents his giving the time required for the comprehensive and extended hearings planned by the Commission. Mr. Schiff will be succeeded by Mr. Mortimer L. Schiff."

WAYS TO WIND UP ENEMY INSURANCE

State Official Suggests That They May Return Premiums or Reinsure.

It will be easy to liquidate the German insurance companies doing business under the laws of New York State, according to Daniel F. Gordon of the Insurance Department, who has supervision over the German insurance situation in New York.

"There are two things they can do," he said. "One is to cancel contracts and pay back the unearned premiums, and the other is to reinsure. Either course will take time, and needs careful administration."

The latest order of Secretary McAdoo, which calls upon German life insurance companies and companies of countries allied to Germany to stop writing new business, and to liquidate, was unexpected by several companies whose business here totals hundreds of millions.

D. H. Quackenbush of the Aachen and Munich Company, which writes direct fire insurance, said yesterday that his company had received no order from the Government. "We have just seen in the newspapers," he said, "what we are called upon to do. They say to liquidate, but, of course, that in itself means nothing. We can tell more about where we stand when we learn what plan the Secretary proposes. If they ask us to liquidate within a month, it can't be done, that's all."

H. N. Kelsey of the Hamburg-Bremen, another direct fire insurance company, said his company would need months to close up its business.

"It will be no easy matter to liquidate the German companies," he said. "I am afraid it will be like the small boy with the big meal; easy to swallow but bad in after effects. We can only wait until the Government tells us how to proceed and then do the best we can for the country and our policy holders."

The German companies all reported, in answer to inquiries, that their business had suffered tremendously since the entrance of the United States into the war. Before that, while the Allies were fighting alone, it was declared that business went on as usual, with the exception of a few anxious queries as to the prospects of loss due to the possible bankruptcy of the home offices.

The companies doing business in New York affected by the Secretary's order, are the Aachen and Munich, Agent J. A. Kelsey, 80 Maiden Lane; Francona Reinsurance Company, (Fire,) Agent C. H. Franklin, 123 William Street; Hamburg-Bremen, Agent H. N. Kelsey, 123 William Street; Nord Deutsche, (Fire,) Agent J. A. Lenahan, 123 William Street; Frankfort General, (Liability,) 123 William Street; First Bulgarian Insurance Company, Agents Snow & Theime, 80 Maiden Lane.

A number of German companies have already suspended business because of war conditions and the order issued several weeks ago directing German insurance companies writing marine insurance to close. One German life insurance company, the Mercury Reinsurance Company, Agent M. W. Torrey at 1 Liberty Street, remains open.

DECLARE SUGAR DIVIDENDS.

Two Companies Make Disbursements Besides Regular Payments.

Three sugar-producing companies declared dividends yesterday, two of them making disbursements in addition to the regular payments.

The Great Western Sugar Company declared an extra dividend of $10 a share on its common stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividends of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred and common stocks, all payable Jan. 2 to shareholders of record Dec. 15. Three months ago an extra dividend of the same amount was declared on the common stock.

The National Sugar Refining Company declared yesterday a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent., payable Jan. 2 to holders of record on Dec. 10. This places the stock on a 7 per cent. basis. Previously the dividends have been at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, or 1½ per cent. quarterly.

The Federal Sugar Refining Company declared its regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the common stock, the same being payable Dec. 15 to sharholders of rcord Dc. 5.

National Bank Call Modified.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—To facilitate the reports of national banks in response to the call for conditions as of Nov. 20, Controller Williams tonight waived the requirement that the reports must include items of "interest accrued, but not yet collected," and "interest collected, but not yet accrued." Banks must keep their records of loans, however, so that these items may be reported in future calls.

5-CENT MATINEES EXEMPT.

New Government Ruling on Application of War Tax on Theatres.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—A ruling has been made by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper to the effect that where the admission to a theatre at a matinee performance is only 5 cents the charge is not to be regarded as a fraction of the 10 cents admission which is taxable under the War Tax act. The law imposes a tax of 1 cent on each 10 cent admission or fraction thereof, and the tax is to be paid by the person buying such admission. It is now held that where the maximum charge for admission to a matinee is but 5 cents and to an evening performance more than 5 cents, the tax is due only on the evening performance. The text of the decision follows:

"The rule has been established that where the charge for admission to any part of a theatre during a matinee performance does not exceed 5 cents and a charge exceeding 5 cents is made for the evening performance, tax will be due only on admissions to the evening performance. However, all admissions for the evening performance, including those not over 5 cents, will cause liability to tax to accrue.

"The same rule applies where the performance is continuous and the maximum charge up to a certain hour is not in excess of 5 cents, and the maximum charge after such time does exceed 5 cents. In such case tax is due only on admissions paid after the time when the increased charge takes effect, but is due on all admissions paid after such time, including admissions not exceeding 5 cents.

"Bona fide employes of the theatre, municipal officers on official business and children under twelve years of age are exempt from such tax when admitted free. All other persons admitted free are subject to tax the same as parties paying for admission."

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Profit taking, stimulated by the approaching holiday, caused prices on the Consolidated Stock Exchange to recede in the last half hour of trading. In practically all of the active issues the early gains were not only wiped out but were replaced by net losses. In the early morning the market advanced vigorously and sentiment was optimistic, although based upon little that was definite beyond the improvement in Italian exchange, the ease of call money rates and the success of the British and French in maintaining their gains against counterattacks by the German allies. After the first hour the market was dull and reactionary following a selling movement in the rails.

HYLAN WARNS BOARD AGAINST BUS GRANT

Urges Estimate Members to Hold Up Contract with Fifth Avenue Company.

POINTS TO ITS EARNINGS

Judge Says Corporation Made 1,100 Per Cent. in Year—Prendergast Calls Letter "Nonsense."

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan sent a letter to the Board of Estimate last night protesting against any grant to the Fifth Avenue Coach Company of rights to operate in streets, not covered by the company's present franchise. The Mayor-elect declared he had been credibly informed the Board of Estimate had called a special meeting today to take steps toward "granting to the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, a subsidiary of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, sweeping rights to operate motor omnibuses upon certain most important streets of the Borough of Manhattan." Controller Prendergast last night pronounced Judge Hylan's letter the "veriest nonsense," and declared that a glance at the City Charter would convince Judge Hylan that the Board of Estimate could not if it would do what Judge Hylan said it intended to do.

In his letter Judge Hylan urged that any new grant to the company be deferred for at least ten days to enable the incoming administration to investigate, and that nothing be done until there had been adequate publicity regarding the terms on which the grant was to be made.

"This matter," Judge Hylan wrote, "together with the application of rival companies, has been before your board during the entire term of its existence. The last active step in connection therewith, I am informed, took place in the Spring of this year; after that time, I am informed, despite the frantic efforts of the chief competitor of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company for this franchise to obtain some action at your hands, nothing was done by your Franchise Committee or by your board. So passed the Spring, the Summer, the Fall, and the campaign period; the time when the important public acts of an administration are under close scrutiny. Now, within just about a month from the finish of your administrative life, after conferences with the Interborough interests, a proposed form of contract has been determined upon, and, I am credibly informed, you are seriously contemplating turning over to the Interborough interests the last rights in the surface of the important streets of New York that this outfit does not already control.

"At this time," the Judge continued, "I will call your attention to the opinion of your own Corporation Counsel, embodied in the minutes of your board of March 16, 1917, to the effect, briefly, that the operation of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company's vehicles upon the streets of New York, other than upon Fifth Avenue, between Eighty-ninth Street and Washington Park, is absolutely without authority of law, and to the further fact that the Public Service Commission of this district, in a short memorandum handed down on the 29th day of June, 1917, stated, in reference to the 'permits' for operation that your board saw fit, in the goodness of your generous hearts, to grant to the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, without going through the formalities prescribed by law for the granting of rights in the streets of this city, that such 'licenses' were of no value or legal force.

"The incoming administration, which I shall represent as Mayor, was elected upon a platform of municipal ownership and operation of public utilities. This principle was advanced by me in the campaign as one of the leading issues on which I solicited the judgment of the public, as evidenced by its votes. The citizens answered the question emphatically on Nov. 6 last. Their verdict is made no less positive by the fact that the present incumbent in the office of Mayor was elected on a like platform."

On the subject of the Fifth Avenue Company's earnings the Judge wrote:

"The official figures seem to show that for the year 1916 the Fifth Avenue Coach Company earned, net, the sum of $458,672.90, over 900 per cent. upon the company's capital stock. For the year ending June 30, 1917, the Fifth Avenue Coach Company seems to have earned, net, $582,535.69, over 1,100 per cent. on the stock.

"The 1917 statement shows that the company has a total earned surplus of $1,785,474.32. Taking the figures for the last three years, since June 30, 1914, this seems to show that the company's surplus earnings on its capital stock have increased over 3,500 per cent. in three years. Why should rights that have shown such an amazing earning power be given away to this private corporation for a miserable 5 per cent., or 10 per cent., or 15 per cent., of its earnings, inclusive of the State taxes? Is this city so prosperous? Have these gentlemen in their past dealings with the city shown such fairness, such bigheartedness, as to entitle them to this fabulously rich Christmas gift to it in the last few days of your official life?

"The figures before me show that these rights, for the period of 15 years covered by the proposed franchise, are worth not less than $45,000,000, in place of the miserable few hundred thousands of dollars per annum for which it is contemplated to hand them over to the Interborough crowd. In the 1917 statement of this company, there is shown an expenditure of over $150,000 under an item explained as being, among other things, in connection with 'New Franchises.' Why should any one spend any such money in an application to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of this city for a franchise?

"It is my intention, as Mayor of the city, not only to see to it that no further such rights are given away to any one as a gift, a favor, or as a poor bargain, but that operations by public utilities corporations, be they motor bus companies, street surface railways, telephone companies, or electrical or gas companies, be promptly stopped where such operations are not founded upon legal rights. I ask that this matter be laid over for 10 days and that the terms of the franchise be published in full, (at the expense of the applicant for the franchise,) in The City Record."

Controller Prendergast said last night that the principal competitor for the franchise sought by the Fifth Avenue Coach Company was the New York Motor Bus Company.

"The statement at the beginning of Judge Hylan's letter is quite as incorrect as everything else he says," said the Controller. "The simple fact is that the Fifth Avenue Coach Company has submitted what virtually amounts to a new offer to the city. The New York Motor Bus Company has been invited to do likewise. We have been informed that it will have an offer ready by 10:30 tomorrow forenoon. If this offer is ready then, the Board of Estimate will go ahead with the advertising and arrange so that public hearings may be held in three weeks.

"It would not be legally possible for the Board of Estimate to do what Judge Hylan says the board is going to do. Mr. Hylan not only shows his arrant ignorance, but doesn't even take the trouble to look at the charter and convince himself as to what the board can or can not legally do. Nothing can be done under any circumstances before three weeks have elapsed, and then only after fullest publicity, including advertising of the form of contract and public hearing. Tomorrow's meeting was called merely to arrange for the advertising of the contract."

WANTS NEW LAWS FOR DRUG TRAFFIC

Investigators Fear Many Soldiers Will Return From War Under Thraldom of Narcotics.

Fearing that thousands of soldiers will come back from the front addicted to the use of drugs originally administered to them in field hospitals to relieve suffering, two committees on drug evils met in this city yesterday to consider measures that would put the use of narcotics under more stringent State or Federal control. One committee was the Whitney Legislative Committee, of which Senator G. H. Whitney is Chairman, and the other was the New York City Committee on Drug Evils, of which Justice Cornelius F. Collins is Chairman. Both committees worked on the subject of drug evils last year, and were more or less instrumental in bringing about certain restrictions which prevail under the present laws.

In its conference at the Murray Hill Hotel, the Whitney Committee, consisting of Senator Whitney, Senator John J. Boylan and Assemblymen Morris Bloch, George R. Brennan, and R. M. Prangen, decided to make a thorough investigation of the drug evil as it exists in this city at the present time. Beginning next Wednesday, the committee will hold a series of hearings at the City Hall, where it will take testimony regarding various phases of the drug traffic. According to Senator Whitney, a special effort will be made to have drug victims themselves appear before the board to tell how they manage to obtain their supplies.

"We desire to have addicts before us," said Senator Whitney, "and also wish to learn what treatment, if any, they have ever received to cure them. Contrary to the position taken by physicians, it is the contention of this committee that the addiction to drugs is not a habit but a disease, and should therefore be treated as a disease. The aim of this committee is primarily to provide a method of treatment that will make it possible to deprive a victim of his drug without demoralizing him so completely that he merely hungers for it and seeks to obtain it in any way he can. The solution of the whole drug evil problem lies in a proper method of treatment, such as will help to bring the victim back to his feet, after the drug which sustains him has been taken away. Once this method has been ascertained the entire situation will clear up."

Aside from addicts to the drug, witnesses before the committee will include physicians, pharmacists, members of the Police Department, and attachés of the Magistrates' Courts, who will be called to testify to the effect of the present laws upon the use of drugs. Senator Whitney said that there was much opposition to the provision in the present law which requires every physician to file his list of drug addicts with the State Department of Healty, whereby the name of the victim was open to inspection. In many cases, according to Senator Whitney, this requirement tended to discourage victims who were honestly endeavoring to overcome their weakness from submitting to treatment.

At the meeting of the New York City Committee on Drug Evils in the Criminal Court Building the same situation was discussed. The members of this committee, however, agreed that what was most needed was Federal control of a definite and comprehensive sort.

Mark P. Andrews, solicitor in charge of collection of customs in New York, submitted to the consideration of the committee a bill which he had drafted to meet the problem. This bill provides that the Government shall restrict the sale and manufacture of narcotics through the imposition of a tax which would tend to make the distribution of drugs for any but legitimate purposes prohibitive. The bill will be brought to the attention of Government officials at Washington.

MONEY TO RUSSIAN POLAND.

American Express Co. Authorized to Send Remittances.

Under special authorization arranged for by the United States Government War Trade Board, the peoples of that portion of Russia and Russian Poland controlled by Austrian and German forces can now receive money remittances from this country by means of the American Express Company.

The American Express Company can now handle these remittances by foreign money orders sent through their Rotterdam office for reforwarding to destination, and its officers have every reason to believe that delivery to the payees can be effected with reasonable promptness.

The War Trade Board has, however, imposed the following conditions, and the company is allowed to accept remittances only on the understanding that remitters and sellers have complied with them:

1. Remittance may be sent to individuals only.
2. Payee must be a Russian or allied subject.
3. Payee must be in need of funds for daily necessaries of life.
4. Remittances for any one individual must not total in excess of $75 to an adult or $25 to a minor during any one period of thirty days, (not more than $125 to a family.)
5. Remitter must furnish an agreement and guaranty signed by him (or her) witnessed by selling agent or banker, and sworn to by remitter before a notary public.
6. Remittances must be in United States dollars only.
7. Payments will be made in Polish money by means of money orders.

Arrangements have further been made for the return of payees' receipts, but upset mail conditions make it impossible to set a time limit on that feature.

SEIZE NEGRO McCALL FREED

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—John Johnson, the West Virginia negro whom Governor McCall last week declined to surrender to the authorities of that State on extradition papers, gave himself up to the Federal authorities here today and was held for a hearing Dec. 5 on a complaint charging him with being a fugitive from justice.

His counsel, William H. Lewis, formerly Assistant United States Attorney General, announced that the defense had the backing of the negroes of Massachusetts and that the case would be fought to a finish. Bail of $2,000 was furnished by the pastor and Treasurer of a Cambridge church.

The indictment against Johnson returned by a Federal Grand Jury in West Virginia charges violation of the Mann "White Slave" act through the transportation of Edith Godbey, a white girl, from Charleston, W. Va., to Catlettsburg, Ky., in November, 1916. In the extradition proceedings on which the Governor acted last week Johnson was charged with an attack on a child.

Package Stolen from Clerk's Desk in a Cleveland Hotel.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 27.—Cleveland police and detectives today were working on the theft from the crowded lobby of a prominent hotel of a registered mail package containing diamonds valued at $20,000. Although the theft was committed last Friday evening, no word of it became public until today, and then every effort was made by the police to keep the facts quiet.

It was learned, however, that the diamonds, said to be sixty-five in number and unset, were the property of the Yankhauer, Newitter & Platt Jewelry Company, New York.

The mail package containing the diamonds was sent to Theodore Yankhauer, in this city, by one of his partners, M. R. Newitter, in Detroit. The package reached the hotel Friday. A boy was sent to page Yankhauer. Failing to find him, the boy returned the package to the mail clerk's desk. Before the girl in charge of the desk turned to take up the package, some one had stolen it.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Considering the present state of the realty market, the sale at auction yesterday of 234 Bronx lots by Joseph P. Day and J. Clarence Davies was one of the most remarkable ever conducted in the Vesey Street Exchange salesroom.

A total of $415,400, or an average of $1,775 a lot was realized for the holdings of the Joseph Godwin Estate, as the result of a Supreme Court order directing the partition sale.

In spite of the general opinion prevailing that vacant land could not be sold at the present time, one of the largest crowds in the history of the salesroom attended and filled it to capacity. At one time the attendance was estimated at 1,000 persons.

The first lot offered, at the southwest corner of Bailey Avenue and 230th Street, 32 by 105, went to Simon & Polsky, Bronx builders, for $3,300. The same buyers took the adjoining lot, 25 by 100, on Bailey Avenue, for $1,550.

The lot, 25 by 125, on West 230th Street, opposite the Kingsbridge station of the New York Central Railroad, and containing a small saloon building renting at $35 a month, was sold to H. Canning for $3,000.

Emil Fred of Bayhead, L. I., took the eight adjoining lots, including the northwest corner of Bailey Avenue and 230th Street, for $16,350.

Other lots sold were on Broadway, Albany Crescent, Ver Veelen Place, Exterior Street, Kingsbridge Avenue, West 231st Street, Goodwin Terrace, and Kimberly Place. The prices ranged from $16,000 for the corner of Broadway and 230th Street to $750 for inside lots on the side streets.

Among the buyers were Alexander McLean, Charles E. Gremmels, Patrick J. Hanley, Hugh E. Smyth, William L. Thompson, C. F. Keyes, L. Lessner, William G. Fitzgerald, and James Keane.

Messrs. Day and Davies announced at the close of the sale that it could be adjudged a successful undertaking from all angles, especially in view of the fact that the advertising commenced after the flotation of the second Liberty Loan of $5,000,000,000. They said: "This loan absorbed almost entirely the available cash in the hands of the public, but this condition was somewhat relieved by the acceptance of Liberty bonds in payment as deposit for the lots.

"The Godwin estate is to be congratulated at the successful disposition, in these times, of their unimproved property for $415,400, irrespective of the fact that it represented about one-half of the assessed valuation. The purchasers are also to be congratulated on their foresight and good judgment in buying at these prices.

"The agents and auctioneers feel happy at the successful marketing of so large and important an offering in war times, and predict that as soon as the war is ended, the section will develop into a substantial apartment house community that will double and even treble the lot prices that prevailed at this sale."

$120,000 Bronx Exchange.

The Morgenstern Brothers Syndicate, which has been active lately in the Bronx realty market, figured in another transaction yesterday involving properties in that borough. The syndicate bought from the Henry Morgenthau Company the five-story new law apartment house at 906 Simpson Street, on a plot 75 by 105, containing thirty apartments. The property has been held at $100,000.

In part payment the purchaser gave the taxpayer at 511 to 517 East 136th Street, on a plot 75 by 100 by irregular, held at $20,000. Solomon Gerlich & Co., were the brokers in the deal.

Buyers for Private Dwellings.

The two three-story dwellings 235 and 237 West 120th Street, each occupying a lot 16.9 by 100 have been sold to an investor by the Lawyers Mortgage Company.

Bronx Sales.

L. A. Adams sold to an investing client of Samuel Cower, 829 Jackson Avenue, a five-story new law apartment on a plot 42 by 90.

The Howard Realty and Development Company purchased from Lillian B. Taylor, 639 East 137th Street, a five-story tenement on a plot 37.6 by 100.

An investor purchased from the Day McDonald Company, the five-story tenement with a garage in the rear, occupying a lot 25 by 100 on the northwest corner of Lincoln Avenue and 135th Street.

In the Unionport section of the Bronx Joseph Connelly has sold to Matthew Gaskin a plot 50 by 100 on the east side of Westchester Avenue, 25 feet west of Purdy Street.

Long Island.

John Greer has sold for Mrs. K. Anderson a four-story tenement house in Academy Street, 275 feet south of Broadway, Long Island City, to John Euigem, as an investment.

Brooklyn.

The Meister Builders, Incorporated, have purchased the northeast corner of Bath and Twenty-third Avenues, a three-story private dwelling, on a plot 96.9 by 97.3.

The Good Homes Building Company, Incorporated, has purchased through M. Wiley & Son the apartment house known as the Court Royale, Beverly Road, corner of East Nineteenth Street, at a consideration of $80,000.

Staten Island.

Cornelius G. Kolff has sold for Carl F. Grieshaber the stucco dwelling just erected on Washington Place, Westerleigh, to William M. Decker of Port Richmond.

New Yorker Buys $35,000 Scarsdale Estate.

Fish & Marvin have sold the Shreve residence at Scarsdale, Westchester County, to a New York client. The property adjoins the estate of John Carstensen, Vice President of the New York Central Railroad, and consists of a residence, several acres of land, and outbuildings. It was held at $35,000.

Westchester.

The Scarsdale Estates has sold a plot on Walworth Avenue, in the Greenacres section of Scarsdale, to F. Albert Hunt of New York, who plans to erect a Colonial dwelling.

Commercial Leases.

Cammann, Voorhees & Floyd have leased the building at 167 Front Street to L. H. Waterman & Co., to be occupied in conjunction with their Factory 4 at 163 Front and 40-44 Fletcher Streets. This is the fifth building that the same brokers have leased on Front and Water Streets in the last few weeks, all at increased rentals.

The American Jewelry Company, for twenty years located in the Church and Walker Street district, has leased for a term of years the entire store, basement and sub-basement, containing over 22,000 square feet at 677 Broadway. This is part of the old Broadway Central Hotel, and formerly occupied by a millinery concern. White & Goodman negotiated the lease.

The Cross & Brown Company leased the building, 100 by 100, at 829-835 Eleventh Avenue, to the Wire Wheel Corporation of America for a long term of years.

The Duross Company leased the P. G. Kemp Coal Yars at 790 to 794 Greenwich Street to William Farrell & Son for a term of ten years for Dr. Sylvester F. Morris.

Complete Hotel Plans.

Final plans for the Hamilton Apartment Hotel, to be erected at 141 to 153 West Seventy-third Street by L. K. Comstock, Edgar Ellinger, and Harry B. Davis were announced yesterday. The building has been considerably enlarged and modified from the original plans at an additional cost of about $200,000. As a result, the amount of the loan underwritten by S. W. Straus & Co. has been changed to $775,000.

$85,000 East Side Loan.

William H. Archibald, in conjunction with Lloyd N. Worth and John F. Bottomley, has placed a loan of $85,000 at 5 per cent. for three years on the two and four-story store and dwellings at 7 East Twenty-eighth Street and 8 and 10 East Twenty-ninth Street. The property runs through the block, and is twenty-five feet on Twenty-eighth Street and forty feet on Twenty-ninth Street, and adjoins St. Leo's Church.

Realty Notes.

Louis Pape is the buyer of the German Evangelical Reformed Bethany Church and dwelling at 235 and 237 East 109th Street, on a plot 38.9 by 100.

The Institutional Synagogue, tenants, have purchased from the Wellworth Property Company, 112 West 116th Street, a four-story building, 20 by 100.11, near Lenox Avenue.

SAYS PREFERENCE CLOGS RAILROADS

Freight Congestion Due Largely to Excessive Priority Orders, Harrison Asserts.

CABINET TAKES UP PROBLEM

Government Operation of Railways Only as a Last Resort, It Is Announced After Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—In a statement issued today Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads War Board, pointed out that the congestion on the railways due to war demands was largely confined to the East, and made the point that this congestion was traceable in great measure to unrestricted extension of the expedient of preference freight. Mr. Harrison's statement follows:

"The measures which the Railroads' War Board has adopted to improve transportation conditions in Eastern territory apparently have given many persons an erroneous impression regarding the transportation situation in the country as a whole.

"Reports from the West show that there is no serious congestion in that territory, and that the railroads are handling the traffic in as satisfactory a manner as could be expected in view of its very large volume. They are not able to furnish all the cars for which shippers ask, but this is largely due to the detention of cars in Eastern territory, owing to the congestion there, which special measures have been adopted to relieve.

"In the Southeast the railways, without serious trouble or delays, are handling the heaviest business ever known in that territory. They could handle a still larger business, and our committee anticipates that the Government authorities will adopt the recommendation it has made for immediate measures to transfer movement of foodstuffs and other export material to South Atlantic ports to as large a degree as compatible with the public interest as one important means of relieving the congestion in the East.

"Our further investigation of industries in the East emphasizes the fact that the congestion in that territory has been to a great extent brought about by the excessive use of preference orders for freight being handled for the Government or for concerns directly or indirectly engaged in work on Government contracts. The conditions referred to is not due to priority orders issued by the Government Priority Director, Judge Lovett, but to routine preference orders issued by many representatives of the various Government departments.

"The number of these routine preference orders has become so large that on some of the Eastern railways they are being applied to the greater part of the freight. The attempt to give expedited movement to an excessive amount of freight has increased congestion in yards by causing a large increase in switching movements.

"A constant flow of traffic concurrently produces the best transportation results. We are, therefore, emphasizing to representatives of the Government the desirability of reducing the number of preference orders, which, by causing attempts to give expedited movement to so large a volume of traffic, are slowing down the movement of all traffic and thereby defeating the very object sought. We are assured of the co-operation of representatives of the Government as respects this matter."

Discussed at Cabinet Meeting.

The pooling arrangement proposed by the Railroads' War Board continues a subject of intense interest and animated discussion. Railroad managers studying the acute transportation situation growing out of the congestion arising from the enormous war business say that the problem cannot be solved by a mere pooling of equipment. They hold that more radical reforms than those thus far discussed by the Railroads' War Board must be enforced.

The railroad problem was discussed at length at today's Cabinet meeting. Afterward it was said that Government operation of railroads during the war would be attempted only if it became certain that the roads themselves were unable to deal with the difficulties confronting them.

The general belief among Administration officials is that the pooling plan about to be inaugurated by the roads should have a thorough try-out and that if it fails the Government then should take a hand. There is no concealment, however, of some doubt that any pooling plan will work as well as it might so long as each road is compelled to concern itself with its individual profits.

Since railroad congestion and coal distribution are linked so closely, officials are watching a movement toward the pooling of coal shipments in the Middle West. If the plan works well, it will be extended, with Government encouragement, to other districts. Government requisitioning of coal and a general Government coal pool are considered likely next year. At present there is a disposition to let contracts run out before a Government pool is formed.

The railroad congestion is heavier each week. The roads are approaching a situation which will mean that they must place an embargo on non-essential freight or fail to furnish adequate service to the Government. The situation will be placed before President Wilson this week by a Cabinet member. The railroad managers hope the President will exert his influence with Congress for remedial legislation along broad and revolutionary lines. Such legislation is proposed for the war period only.

In the meantime the seven railroad Presidents and Vice Presidents appointed to consider the pooling of facilities will do what they can to alleviate the situation. As the next step a pooling of earnings is suggested. This can be effected only by the amending of the Anti-Pooling act. If the pooling should be carried to its logical conclusion the roads could be run by a single board.

Government officials and railroad managers cannot see that the situation would be bettered by Government ownership or Government control. The Presidents of all the railroads in the Eastern territory are willing to adopt any possible plan presented by the Government to relieve the congestion. The War Board which began its work here long before war was declared against Germany, has thus far accepted every plan originating with the Government.

President Wilson will be asked to consider the advisability of authorizing a list of non-essential freight. England and France adopted this plan, along with a 50 per cent. increase in passenger rates. This Government has hesitated to forbid the transportation of specified commodities because of the great losses it would entail upon industry and labor.

Several days ago the Railroads' War Board furnished to Judge Lovett, Director of Priority, and Dr. Garfield, Fuel Administrator, at their request, a list of 450 commodities whose transportation they declared could be dispensed with without any considerable inconvenience to the public; also a list of seventy-five other commodities which might be embargoed, but at the cost of inconvenience. Judge Lovett and Dr. Garfield have not as yet acted upon the proposal. Judge Lovett, while admitting the necessity of an embargo on non-essentials, said he would take no action until all the industries affected had been heard.

"We have no doubt, if non-essential commodities are eliminated," said Fairfax Harrison, "that the railways can transport all the commodities required by the Government in carrying on the war and by the people for their subsistence and comfort.

Further curtailment of passenger service is to be attempted. It is understood that the program includes consolidation of through passenger service, eliminating trains not well patronized. Special trains will not be run on branch roads, and passenger service will be reduced.

Proposes $100,000,000 to Buy Cars.

Senator Reed of Missouri, who appeared at the capital today, said he would advocate the passage of a bill at the next session of Congress to appropriate $100,000,000 for the purchase by the Government of freight cars to relieve the existing shortage.

"From all I have heard, the country is threatened with a food shortage unless cars are available to move food products," he said. "The railroads say they cannot supply the cars. At the last session of Congress Senator Hoke Smith offered a bill to provide $20,000,000 for the purchase of freight cars by the Government, but it was killed. If it had gone through, it is likely that the menace of today would not be so aggravated.

"There may be a question as to the ability of the Government to purchase all the needed cars now. It would entail building new cars, and it is hard to tell what the conditions might be in the car factories, owing to other demands of the war. But the Government ought to have the authority to do it. Sooner or later it will have to build the cars if the people are to get an adequate food supply."

No Reduction of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—The Pennsylvania Railroad will not reduce its passenger service unless a limitation is placed on the traffic as a war measure, according to a statement issued tonight by Samuel Rea, President of the company.

"Less passenger train service on the Eastern railroads, and especially on the Pennsylvania system, would be very desirable, but, until the situation develops further, and some limitation is placed on th etraffic as a war measure, it will be difficult to accomplish," says the statement. "Any traveler on this system can see for himself on day or night trains the extraordinary increase in the passenger travel, including the heavy family travel to and from camps, and to and from Washington on Government business. I doubt whether slower and longer trains of coaches carrying full loads would reduce the number of cars and trains or materially relieve the tracks and terminals. Therefore, at this time I can see no other course than to continue meeting the abnormal demand for passenger transportation to the best of our ability."

APPEALS TO BRITONS HERE.

No Escape from War Duty, General White Says.

"British and Canadian residents in the United States cannot escape their duty while their fellow-citizens in Great Britain or Canada are being drafted for service, and their neighbors in the United States who are citizens are being drafted here," said Brig. Gen. W. A. White, head of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, yesterday. "The mission has established recruiting depots all through the country to give Britishers and Canadians an opportunity to volunteer for service through these depots. Some 15,000 men have been enlisted and sent forward to the British and Canadian Armies."

Regarding the negotiations between Great Britain and the United States relative to the drafting of Britons and Canadians, General White explained that among the ten million men who registered for service in response to the President's call there were many Britons and Canadians who registered under their nationalities and as such are not subject to draft. In Great Britain and Canada there are also Americans of military age. The proposed conventions between the two countries will provide the regulations under which these men may be drafted for service in the countries of their residence by the Governments to which they owe allegiance.

"Pending the completion of the conventions, which it is expected Secretary Lansing will submit to Congress," he said, "a very active campaign is to be carried on all over the United States through the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission. This will give all Britons and Canadians an opportunity to volunteer for service instead of waiting to be drafted. The mission now has the names and addresses of the Britons and Canadians registered in the United States, and has made a special written appeal to them to come forward and offer their services."

Why

A USED PACKARD TWIN-SIX

returns you better value—

DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR

—than a new one

HERESY—you exclaim! Not for a minute. Won't it injure our new car business? Not if we know the American buyer. People who want new cars buy new cars. In times like the present they are demanding wearing qualities above everything. If a Packard Twin-Six wears so well that its second-hand value is relatively greater than its first value—that, we should say, would be about the strongest possible argument for the new Packard.

THERE is nothing new about this condition. New Packards have never been as good "buys" as Packards with a season or two of use—because the used Packard has exactly the same fundamental quality as the new one. All that's taken out of it is the wear, and the price reduction is altogether out of proportion to that. Why? Because that's the way the market rules. There is no sound reason for its ruling so but the used car buyer is just so much better off because it does.

A USED PACKARD TWIN-SIX is the very best automobile value on this planet. Its motor design is years ahead of the field. Its Packard distinction hasn't depreciated one iota. Its riding qualities are unimpaired. Wear? Why with reasonable care we don't know what its limit is. We have never seen a worn out Packard. When there is enough wear to loosen things up, Packard Service stands ready and able to take up the slack in the least expensive and most efficient way. Upkeep cost? You will be amazed to find how low it is.

A USED PACKARD TWIN-SIX is an investment for a lifetime if you will have it so. If you have but a moderate amount to spend for a motor car and a keen desire to get the worth of every cent it is the car of cars—the only car—for you.

WILSON ORDERS IMPORTS PLACED UNDER LICENSE

Proclamation Extending Embargo Provides New and Powerful Weapon Against Germany

CAN DIRECT WORLD TRADE

Enemy-Controlled Concerns in South America Placed at a Great Disadvantage.

EFFECT ON NEUTRALS ALSO

Can Be Forced to Close Trade in Nonessentials—Export Embargo Extended.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—By a proclamation issued tonight placing under license the import of many articles, President Wilson put into the hands of the War Trade Board a powerful weapon to be used against firms controlled by German capital.

Notable in the South American countries named in the proclamation is Venezuela, where German capital is in full command, and from which pro-German propaganda radiates in great volume. German-controlled firms in Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, and other countries also will be made to feel the full force of America's power to control its commercial relations.

In Venezuela German money dominates the commercial situation almost to the complete exclusion of money invested by nationals of other countries. With America placing a ban on its imports, this capital will be stagnant and powerless to develop its interests.

It is entirely probable that within a short time the terms of the import proclamation will be broadened to include many other articles, as it is the determination of the Administration, through the War Trade Board, to use its full powers. There is to be no middle course where the German-controlled firms are concerned.

Stern measures were adopted at this time, it was said, largely because of the attempts by German interests in many countries to stir up discontent and foment revolution. It is probable that in countries such as Venezuela the Government will go to the extreme of bringing about an isolation of the firms, and a complete disruption of all their foreign trade.

The proclamation issued tonight takes in European, as well as South American, countries, thus making it possible for the Government to cut off commercial relations with firms in the northern neutral countries of Europe and in Spain if it sees fit. The weapon thus supplied places this nation in almost supreme control.

Text of Import Proclamation.

The President's proclamation follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, Congress has enacted, and the President has on the 6th day of October, 1917, approved a law which contains the following provisions:

Whenever during the present war the President shall find that the public safety so requires and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to import into the United States from any country named in such proclamation any article or articles mentioned in such proclamation, except at such time or times, and under such regulations or orders, and subject to such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe, until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress. Provided, however, that no preference shall be given to the ports of one State over those of another.

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim to all whom it may concern that the public safety requires that the following articles, namely:

Antimony, antimony ore, or any chemical extracted therefrom; asbestos, beans of all kinds, balata, burlap, castor seed, castor oil, cotton, chrome, chrome ore, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; cocoanut oil, cobalt, cobalt ore, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; copra, industrial diamonds, all ferro-alloys, flax, gutta joolatong, gutta percha, gutta siak, hemp, hides and skins, jute, irridium, leather, manganese, manganese ore, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; mica, molybdenum, molybdenum ore, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; naxos emery and naxos emery ore, nickel, nickel ore, matte, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; sodium, potassium, or calcium nitrates, optical glass, palm oil, platinum, plumbago, pyrites, rice, rubber, raw, reclaimed, waste or scrap; scheelite, shellac, sisal, soya bean oil, spiegeleisen, sugars, tanning materials, tin in bars, blocks, pigs, or grain, or granulated; ton ore and tin concentrates, or any chemical extracted therefrom; titanium, titanium ore, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; tobacco, tungsten, tungsten ore, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; vanadium, vanadium ore, or any ferro-alloy or chemical extracted therefrom; wheat and wheat flour, wolframite, or wool.

Shall not, from and after the date of this proclamation, be imported into the United States or its territorial possessions from Ayssinia, Afganistan, Albania, Argentina, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, her colonies, possessions and protectorates; Bolivia, Brazil, Bulgaria, China, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, her colonies, possessions and protectorates; Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, France, her colonies, possessions and protectorates; Germany, her colonies, possessions and protectorates; Great Britain, her colonies, possessions and protectorates; Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Italy, her colonies, possessions, and protectorates; Japan, Liechtenstein, Liberia, Luxemboung, Mexico, Monaco, Montenegro, Morocco, Nepal, the Netherlands, her colonies, possessions, and protectorates; Nicaragua, Norway, Oman, Panama, Paraguay, Persia, Peru, Portugal, her colonies, possessions, and protectorates; Rumania, Russia, Salvador, San Marino, Serbia, Siam, Spain, her colonies, possessions, and protectorates; Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay, or Venezuela.

Budapest Socialists Clamor for Peace

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 28.—A great Socialist demonstration at Budapest on Sunda yin favor of an armistice and peace is reported by the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin. Declarations were made that democracy must employ all means to end the war, and that it is impossible to bring peace by force of arms. These statements led to demonstrations against the war and in favor of a general strike.

A resolution was passed opposing the aims of the Pan Germans and annexation of Poland and Livonia by Germany. The meeting voted in favor of holding an international labor conference at Stockholm.

ALIENISTS UPHOLD MRS. DE SAULLES

Dr. Wight Says She Was Mentally Irresponsible at the Time of the Killing.

HAD HALLUCINATIONS IN JAIL

Maid Testifies De Saulles Threatened His Wife Just Before She Shot Him.

The defense at the trial of Mrs. Blanca De Saulles at Mineola for the murder of her divorced husband, John Longer De Saulles, spent the day yesterday mainly in putting in medical and technical testimony to establish the defense of insanity.

An X-ray picture of her skull, her medical history since childhood, the observations of a general practitioner on her condition in Mineola Jail after the shooting, an elaborate report on the condition of her blood as studied under the microscope and treated chemically in the laboratory of a Professor of Clinical Microscopy, and a detailed account of the symptoms found by Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe, the alienist, were all placed before the jury. Justice Manning put in a busy day on the bench struggling with medical experts to induce them to strip their statements of technical language and talk to the jurors in plain English.

The entire case of the defense was finished with the exception of the testimony of Mme. Etrazuriz-Vergara, the mother of the defendant, who was reported extremely ill, after listening to the cross-examination of Mrs. De Saulles, and was not in condition to testify yesterday. Justice Manning, who had announced that he intended to hold night sessions and to keep court open on Thanksgiving Day, changed the program in order to enable the lawyers for the defense to construct their hypothetical question. This will contain approximately 20,000 words, and will embody every fact which the defense considers that it has established during the trial. Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe will be asked whether a person, to whom those facts relate, would have known the nature and quality of her act in killing another person. On his answer the defense will rest.

Mental Condition Due to Shock.

District Attorney Charles R. Weeks joined with the defense in asking for an adjournment over until Saturday, because he desired to have time to discuss with his experts the importance of the X-ray picture showing a depression in the defendant's skull and the relation of the disease of the thyroid glands to insanity as recognized in law.

The first medical opinion as to the cause of the woman's state of mind at the time of the shooting was given yesterday by Dr. J. Sherman Wight, who has been her physician since she was taken to the Mineola Jail. When he was asked what he believed to be the direct cause of her mental condition, he said:

"I think it was the mental shock caused by the words that she could not see her child again."

Dr. Wight showed the X-ray plate, which was illuminated by an electric projector. The skull was outlined in profile, an appreciable depression appearing on top of the head just back of the forehead. The depression, the physician said, was three-eighths of an inch deep and one and a half inches in diameter. He said that this condition caused encroachment and pressure on the brain. This was due, he said, to the fact that the fracture of the skull had not been properly treated and that the broken edges had not joined. The defense has introduced testimony to prove that the skull was twice broken in this place, once when she was a child in Chile in 1902 and again when she was thrown from an automobile in Chile in 1916, during her first separation from her husband.

Dr. Wight was called to see Mrs. De Saulles on Aug. 6, three days after the shooting, after the County Physician, Dr. Guy F. Cleghorn, had reported that her condition was serious. He described yesterday how he found her.

"She was as pale as a corpse," he said. "She appeared to take very little notice of her surroundings. Her color was unnatural; it was not ordinary paleness, but waxen. When I turned her face over, she put her tongue out and it was very much swollen. Her finger nails were brittle and her hair was very brittle. I noticed that there were puffs under her eyes.

"Her temperature was below normal. I could not find her pulse in the left wrist. Her heartbeat was slow and weak. She shrank when touched on the face, abdomen, and head. I found a scar on her head, which, when touched, caused her to shrink away and cry with pain."

Dr. Wight described elevations of the skin on her limbs and body, resembling bumps caused by blows, which he described as typical of a hypothyroid condition. He said that he tried to locate the thyroid gland, which is situated at the base of the throat and

COAL SHIPMENTS TO HAVE PRIORITY TO AVERT FAMINE

Garfield, Warned by Operators of Critical Situation, Asks Lovett for Order.

WAR INDUSTRIES MENACED

Steps to Relieve Shortage in New York Also Taken After Warning by Wiggin.

RADICAL ACTION ON FREIGHT

Railroad Pool Board Shuts Pittsburgh Gateway — Stops Iron and Steel for Exporting.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. — Acting on the declaration of the coal operators that the country would be faced with a coal famine which would cause acute suffering and shut down or curtail munition making and other war industries unless drastic action was taken immediately, Dr. H. A. Garfield, the Federal Fuel Administrator, today requested Robert S. Lovett, Director of Priority, to issue an order giving coal and coke right of way on the railroads over general freight.

The National Coal Association in a statement issued tonight declared that the entire country except the Northwest "is facing a fuel famine." The operators, it was asserted, were handicapped by lack of cars, and a famine could be averted only by an immediate priority order. They promised to produce coal at a rate never before believed possible if the transportation facilities were provided.

Coal under the priority desired would move over the railway lines with foodstuffs, shipments of which are subordinated to the transportation of actual war supplies. The order would provide, too, for priority rights for empty coal and coke cars, which would be returned to the mines and ovens as soon as empty. Priority for coal shipments, Fuel Administration officials believe, would go far toward loosening the congestion of coal cars at mines and terminals.

Northwest Now Supplied.

With the coal requirements of the Northwest to a degree taken care of, the Fuel Administration has turned its attention to the East. A formal order ending preferential coal shipments to the lakes was issued today by Mr. Lovett, to become effective Nov. 30. Twenty-eight railroads are affected by the order. Coal thus released will move to the Middle West and to the big industrial centres of the Eastern States.

For the present the Fuel Administration does not contemplate any general priority order moving coal in any particular direction, but it will give attention to specific cases and will see that coal is supplied to any community where the need is great. It will enforce strictly an order issued last week directing producers who are under contract to furnish New England points with coal to meet their contract in full.

Dr. Garfield and Judge Lovett have been hesitant concerning the advisability of a sweeping priority order for coal, because of the effect it might have upon other industries. Representatives of the Board of Directors of the National Coal Association told the Fuel Administrator in a long conference today that further delay would be fatal. He heard all of the arguments and then, turning to a stenographer, dictated the request to Judge Lovett. The operators immediately made preparations to place their mines on a 100 per cent. basis of production.

To Get Immediate Relief.

Dr. Garfield gave this statement to the press:

"In order to secure immediate relief in the transportation of coal and coke, Fuel Administrator Harry A. Garfield today requested Director of Priority R. S. Lovett to issue an order giving preference to all rail movements of coal, coke, and empty coal and coke cars.

"The order requested by the Fuel Administrator would require the railroads to place all shipments of coal and coke ahead of general freight. The Fuel Administration believes that only a general priority order insuring the prompt movement of coal or coke can relieve the present congestion of fuel traffic on the railroads.

"The plan to extend preference to empty cars returning to mines and coke ovens would operate to afford the greatest possible relief to coal and coke producers who have been hampered in keeping up their output by the shortage of cars.

"Fuel Administrator Garfield asked that the proposed order be made effective at the earliest moment possible, and that it be continued in force until further orders. This would enable the Fuel Administration to expedite the general distribution of the coal supply, and to handle the available coal stocks to the best possible advantage."

It is expected that Judge Lovett will issue his priority order within forty-eight hours. In a recent statement he said that he would not take further action unless requested to do so by the Fuel Administration, intimating that he would follow any course recommended by it.

It is understood that transportation of materials for the army and navy and of foodstuffs will not be radically affected by any order issued, but that there will be an immediate curtailment of the shipment of non-essential commodities. The priority order probably will remain effective at least for thirty days.

Steps to Supply New York.

One of the first efforts will be to give an adequate coal supply to New York

Three Northern Kings Meet in Christiania

CHRISTIANIA, Nov. 28. — King Gustav of Sweden and King Christian of Denmark have arrived here with their respective Premiers and Foreign Ministers. The monarchs will remain in Christiania until Saturday. The city is gorgeously decorated in honor of the visit of the sovereigns.

Announcement was made Nov. 16 that the Kings of Denmark and Sweden would visit King Haakon Nov. 28. A dispatch from Copenhagen Tuesday said the Associated Press correspondent had learned from a responsible source that the conference was arranged in consequence of an intimation from Germany that the growth of the anti-German sentiment in Norway was being followed with concern by Germany, and that it was feared Norway might be impelled, by public opinion or pressure on the allied side, to enter the world war, at least to the point of granting a naval base to England and the United States, in which event Germany would be called upon to seize a base in Denmark.

SUBMARINES TAKE INCREASED TOLL

British Losses Last Week, 14 Vessels of Over 1,600 Tons and 7 of Smaller Size.

NAVY TO MAN CARGO SHIPS

United States Reserves to be Drawn On to Provide Crews for Merchant Fleet.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Fourteen British merchantmen of 1,600 tons or over and seven of less than 1,600 tons were sunk by mines or submarines last week, according to the weekly Admiralty statement issued this evening. This is an increase of four vessels in the larger category over the number reported sunk in last week's report. The Admiralty statement follows:

Arrivals, 2,038; sailings, 2,122.
British merchantmen over 1,600 tons sunk by mine or submarine, including one previously, 14; under 1,600 tons, 7.
Fishing vessels sunk, none.
British merchantmen unsuccessfully attacked, including one previously, 8.

A dispatch from Rome says it was officially announced today that the Italian losses due to submarine attacks during the week ended November 25 were one steamer of more than 1,600 tons, one under that tonnage and one small sailing vessel.

Last week's Admiralty report announced the sinking of seventeen British merchant vessels—ten of 1,600 tons or more, and seven of less tonnage. The week previously only one craft of 1,600 ton or over and five of less tonnage were sent to the bottom. The week before that—the week ending Nov. 4—eight ships of the larger tonnage were sunk and four of the smaller. In the week ending Oct. 28 fourteen larger ships were sent to the bottom and four smaller.

NAVY TO OPERATE MERCHANT SHIPS

Reserve Will Be Drawn Upon to Provide Disciplined Crews to Meet U-Boat Peril.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Naval operation of all American merchant ships engaged in transatlantic service is planned by the Government to safeguard vessels traversing the submarine zone. The proposal has the approval of Secretaries Baker and Daniels, and will be adopted by the Shipping Board.

The plan is to operate the ships with naval reserves, enlisting into the service tho present officers and men of the merchant fleet. Those who do not wish to enlist will be shifted to the South American and Pacific trades. Officials believe the great majority are ready to enter the navy service.

Naval operation of the merchant fleet has been talked of ever since the United States went to war, but heretofore the Shipping Board has objected to naval crews for any vessels other than transports. Officials of the board, however, finally have been won over, and at a conference today with War and Navy Department officials they indorsed the plan as the best method of getting and keeping trained and disciplined crews. It will be formally adopted probably next week.

A greater part of the American merchant marine already is engaged in overseas service, and virtually all of the new ships coming from the ways will be put into the trade. It is estimated that some 15,000 merchant ship officers and seamen will be taken into the Naval Reserve service. Regulations will undergo adjustments designed to make enlistment easy.

The problem of pay for both officers and men has been solved by an arrangement under which owners of vessels would make up the difference between the navy pay and the present wage rate. Enlisted men in the Naval Reserve are paid about one-third of what ordinary seamen in the merchant service draw. Merchant fleet officers also are paid more than naval officers in the lower commissioned grades.

Both the Shipping Board and the Navy Department are conducting training schools, and under the plan the Shipping Board's school would be turned over to the Navy Department. Men applying for training first would be enlisted in the reserve and then training would be given to them. There is great difficulty now, it is said, in holding men trained in the Shipping Board's schools. Enlistment before training would solve this problem.

More than 100,000 officers and men, it is estimated, will be needed to man the great fleet of vessels American shipyards will turn out next year. The Navy Department already has trained nearly 50,000 men for the reserve service, and, although many of them now are in active service, several thousand are available for merchant crews.

One decided advantage of naval operation of the merchant fleet, pointed out tonight by officials is that in a pinch the merchant fleet could call on the regular navy for men. The intention, however, is to use as far as possible only men in the reserve service.

HOUSE CONSULTS PREMIERS

Lord Northcliffe Commends the Wisdom of President Wilson's Representative.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.
Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—There is great liveliness in Paris this morning. The Hotel Crillon is the centre of the conference activities, and Colonel House's suite is the centre of the centre.

When I went there at 9:30 the Colonel had already gone out in connection with the conference arrangements. Admiral Benson came with Admiral Sims, and shortly afterward Generals Bliss and Pershing appeared.

After the military men had left Lord Northcliffe came to see Colonel House and awaited his return, chatting meanwhile with Crosby, McCormick, and Cravath, who congratulated him upon his elevation to a Viscountcy.

As we stood talking the door of the adjoining suite opened and Lloyd George stepped out, smoking an after breakfast cigar, and hurried to the elevator. He might have been going to join Colonel House, Clemenceau, and Orlando in the Rue St. Dominique.

Northcliffe Trusts House's Wisdom.

Northcliffe walked in a drizzle to the foreign office across the Seine. He stopped a moment at Cleopatra's Needle in the Place de la Concorde, a spot which may be regarded as a focus of the allied world, and said:

"Even for Paris, where the history of civilized peoples has been so largely made, this is a great meeting."

He spoke with frank admiration of Colonel House.

"The rarest man of all is a wise man," he said, "and House is wise."

The Crillon is packed with allied leaders. You see men with world-famous names at every turn. Tomorrow's conference will be an interesting as well as a great event. The first meeting of the Supreme War Council will be held at Versailles Friday.

The feeling everywhere is that a most critical point in the war has been reached, and that the Allies have been fortunate in bringing together so many of their great leaders in this supreme hour. The man best qualified to speak for President Wilson and most acceptable to his European colleagues will meet the heads of the Allies at the conference table, and the presence there of Orlando, Lloyd George and Clemenceau will give authority and finality to the decisions reached.

Premiers Full of Energy.

Lloyd George, fresh from his triumphant vindication and what amounts to a mandate from the British people for an aggressive course, finds a like-minded colleague in Clemenceau. I had the privilege of visiting "The Tiger" at the War Office this morning and found him driving ahead with the hopeful energy of a man half his age. In Clemenceau and Lloyd George the Allies have a wonderful team.

Paris hopes that the three Premiers, with Colonel House, will stay in session a week or even more at Versailles, where they can give their whole minds to the war, freed from comparatively petty irritating local questions. With the fate of the whole civilized world hanging in the balance, English labor, French socialism, and all other factionalism ought to wait until the architects of the allied fortunes can work out a scheme of unity.

After the present meeting the Prime Ministers and civilian colleagues will go home, leaving the military men to hold daily sessions, reassembling once a month or oftener if called together.

ENVOYS CONFER INFORMALLY.

List of Representatives Who Will Attend Allied Council.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Delegates from other countries to the great interallied conference, which includes representatives from all the members of the coalition, great and small, are welcoming the presence here for the conference of the American delegation as making available fresh minds and fresh points of view in the consideration of old questions. The Americans are meeting everywhere with a most cordial feeling, and the desire is to listen to their suggestions and consider such measures as they may initiate.

When the mission arrived it was understood that only Colonel E. M. House, its Chairman; General Tasker H. Bliss,

Clemenceau, in Message to Americans, Says: "Solidarity and Discipline Will Give Us Peace"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—On the eve of the most momentous conference of nations in history, Premier Clemenceau found time to give THE NEW YORK TIMES a brief message to the American people.

His words are few—has he not risen to power on the declaration that "it is time for acts instead of speeches"?—but they convey the essence of the difference between the Allies and the Central Empires. The Premier said:

"Solidarity and discipline will give us peace, peace through victory, the just peace. With us there is no question of 'German organization,' under which the soul of man is smothered. We are free peoples. In full independence and by the untrammeled exercise of our reason we agree to all the sacrifices that are necessary.

"The public good—that is the central motive which inspires me. To that aim I am all the more devoted, because our public good is, as President Wilson has shown so strongly, the good of humanity."

As THE TIMES correspondent entered the War Office, Lloyd George was at the top of the steps greeting one of the members of the Italian Mission. The courtyard was full of high-powered automobiles, and in the corridors and on the staircase were throngs of frock-coated statesmen and high officers with glittering decorations. As I left the antechamber General Foch and the French Minister of Justice passed hurriedly through to the inner Cabinet.

ITALY NOW SECURE, SAYS GEN. MAURICE

British Official Sees the Crisis Passed, with Allied Aid at Hand.

GERMAN WEAKNESS SHOWN

Proved by Failure to Exploit Initial Successes—Italians Shell Foe's Northern Lines.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—"It is now time to say definitely that the crisis in Italy has passed," said Major-General F. B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations at the War Office, in an interview today.

Credit for this situation, he said, was due entirely to the efforts of the Italian army, adding:

"Anglo-French troops are now available in sufficient quantities to satisfy us that the situation is secure."

General Maurice pointed out that German inability to exploit the Italian disaster could be regarded as significant of Austro-German weakness.

"The results which the Germans attained in their first attack," he said, "were due solely to the successful propaganda among the ignorant soldiers of the uneducated peasant class. This success far exceeded any German expectation. But, having gained this success, it would be expected that the Germans would do all possible to exploit it. They have been able to do nothing beyong following up the Italian retirement. Even now there is no sign anywhere of the vast German reinforcements which it might naturally be expected Germany would rush up to strike a decisive blow at the enemy. Why? My only answer is they are not there because Germany is unable to send them. She is unable to exploit the opportunity offered."

Italians Bombard Enemy Lines.

ROME, Nov. 28.—"On the Asiago Plateau, in the Primolano Basin, at the north of Col della Berretta, and on the middle Piave," says today's Italian official statement, "our batteries in cooperation with bombardment flights have carried out concentrations of fire on enemy troops massed and in movement.

"Four enemy airplanes were brought down yesterday by our airmen."

BERLIN, Nov. 28, (via London.)—There is nothing to report from the Italian front, according to the War Office bulletins this afternoon and evening.

GARIBALDI SURE OF VICTORY.

Expresses Confidence That Italians Will Hold Mountain Lines.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 27, (Delayed,) (Associated Press.)—A visit made today to the fighting ground at Monte Tomba, Monte Monfenera, and other mountains in the fighting zone in the north, and then to the Piave line where it joins the mountain front, afforded opportunity to see this central point of the present huge struggle and obtain from officers at several division and brigade headquarters direct information in regard to the condition of affairs. The tour was made with a Staff Officer from headquarters, and covered about 100 miles, with stops at the main points of fighting.

General Garibaldi, commander of the famous Alpine Brigade, said the fighting had shown that the Italian troops could hold the line beyond any question. Speaking of the spirit of his men, he added:

"If the enemy ever does get past, owing to superior generalship or superior strength of guns, it will be only over the dead bodies of our troops, for they are determined never to yield."

Much Italian Artillery Coming Up.

The roads leading to the battlefront showed increasing masses of troops being brought up for concentration on the threatened lines. Much artillery was coming in. The men and horses seemed to be in good condition after the hard drive. Miles of infantry moved forward, the ranks showing fresh and youthful troops. They wore steel helmets and

DESPERATE FIGHT FOR CAMBRAI KEY

Fontaine Becomes Almost a No Man's Land Between Struggling Armies.

HOT FIRE ON BYNG'S LINES

German Big Guns Concentrate On Dominating Position in Bourlon Wood.

By PHILIP GIBBS.
Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 28.—This morning it was strangely quiet on the battle front around Bourlon Wood. Hardly a British gun was firing when I went up by Havrincourt and the enemy's artillery was almost silent. No noise of battle came through the heavy mist lying low over that black forest on the hill and shrouding the little ruined town of Fontaine Notre Dame on its right flank.

It was a sullen kind of peace after a day of the fiercest fighting, as if both sides were taking a breathing space.

If one could look into Fontaine Notre Dame close enough to see the wreckage that lies there after the battle it would be a tragic sight, but I think no man may look into it now and live after his view, neither an English soldier nor a German soldier, because the little narrow streets which are between its burnt and broken houses are swept by bullets from our machine guns in the south and from the German guns in the north. No human being could stay alive there for a second after showing himself in the village.

Once there was a fountain of pure water there, dedicated to Our Lady of Compassion, and Frenchpeasant women went there to touch the foreheads of their children with a few drops of it from their fingertips, believing in its healing virtues. Yesterday no Lady of Compassion was there to help our poor suffering men. There was no compassion of any kind. Men fought in the streets and in broken houses and behind walls and round about the ruins of the little Church of Notre Dame. Today there are only dead bodies among the ruins and the patter of machine gun bullets.

Tanks Again Aid Attack.

I have already given an outline of the battle yesterday, and there is not much to add to its essential facts, though there are some more details. The British fought with great heroism, and the Germans of the Forty-sixth Regiment, with the Ninth Grenadiers of the Third German Guards on the right, fought also with most stubborn courage, defending themselves and coming back in counter-attacks fiercely and hard. Some battalions of British Guards attacked Fontaine Notre Dame, and on the left were English troops who advanced upon Bourlon village at the northwestern end of Bourlon Wood. Before the attack the British line ran all around Bourlon Wood, dropping on the left toward Tadpole Copse, and on the right to the south of Fontaine and away down below La Folie Wood.

A successful advance would have swung up the whole line to include Bourlon village, and then struck southeast above the village of Fontaine. A glance at the map will show that the attack on Fontaine would have to be made from the south, and from Bourlon Wood on the west, and that was the disposition of the British troops when they advanced.

Before the battle the British artillery laid down a heavy barrage of high explosives and shrapnel in advance of the infantry and concentrated a violent fire on the enemy's rear positions and strong points. Behind these lines of shellfire the British troops went forward. They were assisted by a number of tanks both in the attack on Fontaine Notre Dame and on the left on Bourlon village.

Trouble Renewed in Petrograd and Several Persons Wounded

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 29.—The second edition of The Daily Mail this morning contains an apparently mutilated telegram from Petrograd, dated 4 o'clock yesterday, indicating that there has been a renewal of trouble there. It says that there has been some firing and that several persons have been wounded.

Maximilast troops have occupied the Petrograd State bank, the correspondent of The Daily Mail says in a previous dispatch. He adds:

"Scenes of political turmoil have now become epidemic here."

Allies Consider Warning Russia.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—"It is under consideration to issue, in conjunction with our allies, a reasoned statement for the guidance and warning of the Russians as to the serious results that are likely to follow if a separate peace is concluded," said Lord Robert Cecil, the Minister of Blockade, in the House of Commons today.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 28.—It is announced officially at the Smolny Institute, the headquarters of the Bolsheviki, that representatives of Ensign Krylenko, the Bolsheviki Commander in Chief, have crossed to the German side and entered into negotiations with the German military authorities.

Ensign Krylenko sent three representatives with instructions to request the German commander of the sector in which the crossing was effected to inquire of the German Commander in Chief whether it was agreeable to him that representatives be sent for immediate negotiations for an armistice on the fronts of all belligerent countries, and, in case his response was satisfactory, to ask him to fix a time and place for a conference of representatives of both sides.

The Krylenko emissaries crossed the German lines at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and were received by the German commander of the sector. A reply was promised at 8 o'clock. At the appointed time the Germans gave official consent to the conducting of negotiations. The conference was set for Dec. 2.

It is asserted here that the persons who conducted the German negotiations were authorized by their Government to do so. Pending the holding of the conference, Ensign Krylenko has issued an order to the army stopping fraternization and advising vigilance and caution.

The Russian Fifth Army announced yesterday that it purposed choosing parliamentarians to be sent to Germany. This is the second instance of an announcement of definite support of the Bolsheviki program by the military, the first being the Second Army, whose action was previously reported.

The removal of General Baluieff, Commander on the western front, is reported by the Revolutionary Committee at Minsk. He refused to negotiate an armistice with the Germans, and has been replaced by a Maximalist.

The Vetchera, formerly the Vetchernaya Vremya, commenting on the statement made by the allied military missions to General Dukhonin, former Commander-in-Chief of the Russian Army, who recently was deposed for refusing to obey the order to open armistice negotiations with the Germans, that any break in the London agreement by Russia would bring serious consequences, declares that the threat is not a mere form of speech, but that it exists and is a terrible one.

"From the moment the Allies break off relations," says the newspaper, "the transport will cease, as it already has ceased from the United States, and all the frontiers of our late allies will be closed to us."

The newspaper says it has been declared that Russia cannot exist during the coming year without imports, and concludes ironically as follows:

"Even 'friendly' Germany will not be in a position to supply us with necessities."

The Vetchera admits the impossibility of Russia carrying on the war, but says Russia should be so conducted as not to needlessly offend the Allies.

Announcement is made by the Maximalists that they are in control of Tashkent, capital of Russian Turkestan, after four days of fighting.

In response to representations that members of the Railway Union and their families were suffering from want of shoes, American Ambassador Francis, in speaking to the supply committees of the Ministry of Communications and of the northern railways, said that he was urging the immediate shipment of shoes contracted for in America.

Sixteen hundred cars of provisions and equipment, congested at Moscow, are being rushed to the front. It is reported that enormous quantities of foodstuffs have been discovered in Petrograd, where they were being hoarded by speculators.

MOST OF ARMY VIEWS TRUCE WITH RESERVE

Position of Dukhonin, Defiant Commander in Chief, Said to be Growing Stronger.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 27.—The question of Lenine's peace stands the centre of attention. Reports from headquarters state that the army, on the whole, regards the proposal with reserve. Only the Fifth Army has agreed to begin parleying with the Germans. The general Army Committee at headquarters refused to recognize Krylenko as Commander in Chief, and declared it would only admit him to headquarters if he came in a private capacity.

Krylenko went to Pskov, where he summoned to his presence General Cheremisoff, Commander of the Northern front. Cheremisoff refused to obey his summons and sent word to Krylenko that if he wished to see him he could come to staff quarters. Ensign Krylenko thereupon dismissed Cheremisoff from his post.

After making speeches to the soldiers in Pskov, the Bolshevist Commander in Chief went to the Fifth Army, where he again made speeches and had the commander of the army, General Boldyrev, arrested.

General Dukhonin's position is reported to be growing firmer and committees of various armies have declared they will suport him and the General Army Committee in the conflict with Krylenko.

The committee on the Rumanian front has telegraphed to Milrevcom and the Committee of Public Safety demanding that civil war shall cease and a coalition Socialist Government be formed, including all the Socialist parties.

On the whole, it may be said that the Bolshevist attempt to disintegrate the Russian army has as yet neither succeeded nor failed.

At a meeting held Sunday night by the Petrograd Cadets the following resolution was unanimously passed:

"Citizens of Petrograd, assembled at a meeting summoned by the Party of People's Freedom, enthusiastically acclaim the good news of the brilliant victory of the British Army and express firm confidence that all our loyal allies, realizing how criminal and baseless is the Bolshevist adventure, will regard with contempt the pretensions of the usurpers to speak in the name of Russia."

Comments in the Petrograd press vary according to party. The Moderate Socialist Den regards Trotzky's note as the inevitable consequence of the Bolshevist policy and gloomily prophesies that Russia is destined to become a second Turkey, the booty of predatory imperialists of all countries.

The Novaya Zhizn expresses great indignation and declares that the Allies take no account of the incalculable sacrifices of Russia in the war, and that their only aim is to crush the revolution which for eight months they tried to starve out by preventing the conclusion of peace. The Novaya Zhizn thinks that the fact that the Spanish Ambassador was the first to reply officially to Trotzky's note is a great diplomatic success for the Bolshevist Government, and indicates that Spain is prepared to take a prominent part in engineering the peace negotiations. The official organ of the People's Commissaries defies all threats and declares that revolutionary Russia is prepared to fight all the world.

Much more interesting is the unofficial conversation of Lenine and his assistant, Gleboff, with a delegation of the Forty-ninth Army Corps. Gleboff said: "The new Government is isolated and hangs in the air. As to the armistice, despite all efforts, the Government has not been able to secure practical results. We would be glad if we could get even a three days' armistice."

Gleboff further said that if the Constituent Assembly had a Cadet majority it would be dispersed.

Lenine said: "If the proletariat of other countries does not support us, nothing will come of our revolution. If the Allies do not comply with our wishes, we have powerful means of compelling them to obey. We can declare the State bankrupt and then all loans and other obligations of the Allies will be invalid. The Council of Commissaries has taken measures to inform the democracy of other countries through its agents who will work there. At the present moment we can only play la banque in the hope that something will come of it all."

In the Ministries officials still refuse to work. The Council of the People's Commissaries has dismissed the higher officials and threatened to dismiss all the rest if they do not resume work before a certain date. Many have been expelled from their flats in the Government quarters.

Yesterday the Bolshevist Minister of Finance, Menzhinsky, again made an attempt to obtain money from the State Bank. The officials refused to subscribe to a declaration of allegiance to the new Government. The higher officials were dismissed and Menzhinsky declared he would not scruple to override the statutes of the bank.

A thinly attended Congress of Peasant Deputies, which opened Sunday, was more like a Kilkenny fair than a political assembly. After two or three hours' screaming and brawling the President fell in a dead faint. Spiridonova ordered soldiers to destroy the literature of the Committee of Public Safety and arrest the committee. Another brawl began, in the course of which arms were brandished. Finally soldiers from the front declared that if the literature was destroyed they would smash the building and every one in it.

Chernoff appeared, and was called by some one a counter-revolutionary, but he secured command of the majority, and finally a resolution was adopted ignoring the Bolshevist Government and demanding the immediate formation of a coalition government representing all the Socialist parties.

A Russian official communication received here by wireless says an order has been issued to the Commander in Chief on every Russian front announcing that a "council of the People's Commissaries of the army and navy will convene a congress of the forces Dec. 2 in Petrograd with the purpose of organizing arrangements regarding food and supplies."

The order directs the election of delegates of Committees for Supplies of each division, who are to reach Petrograd Sunday. The order is signed by Podvolsky, Commissary for the Army and Navy.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Military Cadets and virtually all of the officers of the anti-Bolshevist troops in the Moscow district, according to the Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post, have gone to join General Kaledines, leader of the Cossacks, who is reported in control of most of southeastern Russia.

Many hundreds of officers from regiments stationed in the rear and numbers from the front and virtually all the officers of the Guard regiments, it is added, also have gone over to General Kaledines.

General F. B. Maurice, Director of Operations, said today that there had been no important movement of German troops from the Russian front.

SOCIALIST CONGRESS PLAN.

Vorwaerts Supports Idea of Reviving International Meeting.

LONDON, May 28.—Concerning the proposal of T. Stauning, leader of the Danish Socialist Party, for a conference of the Socialist Internationale next month to further a general peace, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Fredensborg, Denmark, says:

"The Vorwärts (of Berlin) saying that the German Socialists would support the proposed new international peace conference as warmly and energetically as they did the unsuccessful Stockholm conference, declares that the new conference will not be dependent on the issuance of passports by the Entente Powers. The conference, it adds, held only for International Socialists, cannot allow the Governments of States which are only apparently democratic to deprive them of the right to influence the peace question."

GERMANS DISTRUST LENINE.

Press Warns Against His Brand of Peace as a Greek Gift.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 28.—While indications are lacking in the current German comment as to what the response of the Central Powers to the Bolshevist peace proposals will be, the press utterances indicate that there are already many Germans who are convinced that Nikolai Lenine's doctrines would upset the political and social systems of all the nations of the world and bring a peace which would prove to be a Greek gift.

One of Germany's ablest writers on Russian affairs, Hans Vorst, writing in the Tageblatt of Berlin, raises a warning against the delusion that the Bolshevist peace program corresponds with the program of the Central Powers.

"No party in Germany," he says, "would be willing to subscribe to such a program. The Independent Socialists have no right to consider themselves representatives of the same ideas as Comrade Lenine, who continuously condemns them as opportunists."

Herr Vorst points out that the Bolshevist demand for the freedom of all nations, "regardless of their degree of civilization or geographical situation," involves the condemnation and overthrow of every nation's colonial policy. The Bolsheviki realize that their kind of peace is possible only after a social revolution in all countries, he adds, but they do not realize that it would also be impossible then.

The German Government, Herr Vorst continues, has taken the standpoint that it does not intend to interfere with the internal affairs of other countries, but Lenine, on the contrary, wishes to overturn the social structure of the whole world, and the peace negotiations are for him and his followers only a means to this end.

"Any Government," the writer goes on, "that thinks it can 'treat' with Lenine in the traditional manner is mistaken, for Lenine and his followers have no desire to represent any Russian interest, but solely the interest of the international proletariat."

Herr Vorst declares that the Bolshevist demand for an immediate truce is no easier to meet than to repeat Joshua's feat of stopping the sun and the moon.

"We must avoid growing excited until Russia's will for peace moves the Bolshevist government to adopt a program which is not predicated on a new order of things in the world, but which actually offers the possibility of a speedy and just peace," he concludes. "The solution would be for the Governments of the Central Powers to be able to meet the Bolshevist doctrines by presenting a comprehensive peace program of their own."

BERLIN PRESS STORIES OF AMERICAN CAPTIVES

Readers Are Told Our Soldiers Hadn't Any Idea Why They Were Fighting.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 28.—The German press is very fond of stories about prisoners taken by the Fatherland's soldiers. Generally these narratives inform the public that as a rule the prisoners have not the faintest idea for what they and their countrymen are fighting or why they are killing the peace-loving, democratic, amiable Germans, though just occasionally an odd Englishman will be found who says his countrymen are fighting because it is sport, or a Frenchman who has an idea that the war is about the fate of Alsace-Lorraine.

So it is with the stories of the first United States prisoners taken on the western front. According to the correspondent of the Weser Zeitung those Americans "wondered they were not shot on the spot as the French had told them they would be." The correspondent then goes on to deliver himself of the following nonsense:

"To the question why America carries on war against Germany they know no answer. The sinking of American ships by German U-boats sounded too feeble a reason. One thought we had handled Belgium too badly, and another believed that as France once helped America, America had now to help in France, but when we told them of England's financial debt to America, of the fears of the money lenders that they might lose millions and millions of dollars if England were defeated, the prisoners opened their eyes and mouths in astonishment, and then it began to dawn on them for what cause in reality they were hazarding body and life.

"One can feel for our soldiers who become enraged against this alien band which fights against us for no reason. Our men believe the French fight for glory and to wipe out the stain of 1870, that Britain struggles for mastery on the sea and to prove which of two giants is the stronger, but the American —our field-greys despise him and do not recognize him as a worthy opponent, even though he may fight bravely."

PLEDGES HOLLAND TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

Dutch Premier Says She Will Enter War Only in Self-Defense.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 28.—Premier Van Der Linden, in the budget debate on the Second Chamber today, said that the Government was entirely united upon its foreign policy and would continue to exercise the strictest neutrality, even should the consequences be other than hitherto thought. Its policy in international questions would not be regulated by fear, but by a desire not to slide toward war.

The Swedish Government, he added, had notified Holland that for the present it did not intend to call together envoys from neutral countries for a discussion of economic interests.

"We are shut off from the world and our rights are assailed," said Mynheer Van Der Linden. "Our Government has always held fast to what it considered right. Perhaps it has not always found where the right lay, but this neither has blemished its policy nor weakened its position. No belligerent has ever disputed our standpoint."

Subsequently the Premier said:

"If attacked we will defend ourselves without inquiring as to the proportionate strength of ourselves and our assailants, but save in self-defense we will not enter the war. We will not allow the misery and indescribable sufferings of the war to befall our country. Moreover, by our neutrality we are supporting the ideals of the future—the community of peoples which shall be the repudiation of war."

URGE ALLIES' INDULGENCE.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Secretary of State Lansing indicated today that no steps had been taken regarding a reply to the Bolshevist proposal for a general armistice, communicated several days ago through Ambassador Francis. The Government is waiting for official information about the relations of the Bolshevist leaders with German army officers and the reported crossing of the enemy lines to open peace negotiations, as well as for further developments in the tangled situation throughout Russia. In Russian circles here the advisability of replying informally to the communication, in a manner not to carry with it recognition of the Bolshevist administration, was urged.

What Russia most needs, they hold, is encouragement from the Allies to the elements opposed to the Bolsheviki. What can be done in this direction is expected to be the subject of consideration at the Paris interallied conference, at which Russian Ambassador Maklakoff will represent Russia. It is possible for the Allies to reach the Russian Army headquarters by wireless, and it is believed that both General Dukhonin, on the eastern front, and General Kaledines, the Cossack leader, are in communication.

Present Political Situation an Impasse—General Strike Developed Into a Revolution.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26, (Delayed.)—History is rushing at such breakneck pace in Eastern Europe that one grows breathless in pursuit. Things have happened during the last ten days in Finland, within 100 miles of Petrograd, which would in other conditions have marked an epoch, but now are mere details in the general flux of traditions, laws, manners, and politics. Finland is the most democratic country in the world, but not sufficiently democratic for its own Socialists. A new Diet, elected in place of the predominantly Socialist Diet, dissolved last August, has a small anti-Socialist majority. The first step of the Socialists was to demand immediate confirmation of the bills adopted by the last Diet, among which was the independence bill which led to dissolution by the Russian Government. The majority deferred consideration of the question. Thereupon the Socialists decided to apply force.

The upheaval in Petrograd favored their plans, and on Nov. 14 they declared a general strike throughout the country. They had organized a Red Guard of workmen who secured arms from the Russian garrison and fleet, and the strike became a revolution.

The Russian garrison committees declared for the Socialists, but in the conflict the bulk of the garrison held aloof. The middle classes organized a White Guard of students and others to support the police, but the Red Guard after seizing the Government buildings arrested a large number of officials, police and prominent citizens, and under pretense of searching for arms broke into houses and robbed and murdered throughout the country.

In frequent skirmishes between Red and White guards many were killed and wounded and a large number of peaceful citizens suffered. In the search for arms roving bands seized large sums of money and country estates. In Abo a revolutionary committee resolved to confiscate half a million marks in the local treasury, but were restrained.

The actual strike lasted four days and the Diet was compelled to yield. The semi-Socialist Agrarian Party went over to the Socialists and a majority was secured in favor of the immediate adoption of the Independence bill, which gives the Diet and Government elected by it supreme power within Finland, in place of the Russian authorities. The Senate or Government resigned and the Socialists wished to elect a Red Senate in its place, but since the majority of the Diet is strongly anti-Socialist such a Government would be wholly unconstitutional. Officials refused to work under such conditions, and at present the political situation is an impasse.

The Socialist leaders, having organized and armed roving bands of marauders, who now infest the country, disclaim responsibility for their acts of brutal violence. Russian authority in the country is now represented only by the garrison and fleet, who are hated by the peaceful population because of the assistance they gave to the Socialists. Governor General Nekrasoff left Helsingfors during the Bolshevist disturbances in Petrograd and has not returned since. Assistant Governor General Baron Korff had previously resigned. Garrison and fleet committees have gone through the farce of electing a sailor as Governor General. A number of imprisoned citizens has been released, but bands of Red Guard are still robbing and murdering in various parts of the country.

Stories illustrating the methods of the Reds are vividly told by the novelist Juhani. He writes:

"I did not actually see the murder of Bjon at Malm, near Helsingfors, but I feel as though I had been an eyewitness. Brigands of the Socialist revolutionary organization came to this house, led him out, and ordered him to come to the Malm Picture Palace, which they had seized and made their centre. Bjon was a Swede, and knew no Finnish. He hesitated to follow them, because he could not understand their object. Then they changed their minds, placed the old man against the wall of his own house, and paraded before him. Then they fired shots at him.

"The wife of the murdered man heard the shots. She ran out, and saw her husband lying with his face to the ground. She tried to carry the body away, but couldn't. She cried, 'Isn't there one man who will help me?' The murderers laughed, with that peculiarly Finnish, coarse, grating, laughter, the like of which I have never heard among any other people, and walked off. The wife stood weeping beside the corpse. Then a helper came. Who was he? A Russian soldier. Tender-hearted, gentle, Russian sovarishch (comrade) he helped Bjon's widow to carry the body into the house. The murdered man was a teacher in the elementary school.

"Another case was that of the master of an old estate at Hertonnaes. A quiet, kindly old man he was, sitting at lunch with his family, when in burst seven Red Guards shouting 'Hands up!' Bergbom, who was hard of hearing, seeing the intruders, asked, 'What are they saying?' In reply, he got a bullet in his forehead, and fell dead, blood spurting from the wound."

These instances are typical of scores which took place, and are still taking place all over Finland. All the Finnish parties claim the independence of their country, but there is a bitter outcry against such method of winning."

SAYS CZAR'S AGENTS SLEW 500,000 KIRGHIZ

Manchester Guardian Tells of Massacres in 1916 to Punish Central Asian Rebels.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Half a million members of the Kirghiz tribes were massacred by agents of the Czar in 1916, according to a correspondent of The Manchester Guardian who has been traveling in Central Russia. This was in punishment for a rebellion against military service by the Central Asian Moslems.

Two million Nomads, who have gradually been forced eastward by the acquisition of the grazing lands by the Czar's Ministers and others, who filled the lands with Ukranian peasants, took part in the rebellion. Civil war is still proceeding between the Nomads and the Russian peasants, according to the correspondent.

The territory inhabited by the Kirghiz is partly in European Russia, but chiefly in Russian Turkestan, in Asia. It embraces a large part of the steppes east of the Volga as far as the eastern end of Lake Balkash.

NEUTRAL ENVOYS CAUTIOUS.

Decide Merely to Acknowledge Trotzky's Armistice Note.

PETROGRAD, Tuesday, Nov. 27.—The diplomatic representatives of the neutral countries, after a conference, decided to reply to Leon Trotzky's notification respecting an armistice as a matter of courtesy, as they would reply to the representations of a private individual. They affirm, however, that their action must not be taken as recognition.

The allied embassies are maintaining a waiting attitude pending the meeting of the Constituent Assembly.

LONDON, Novt. 28.—In acknowledging the note of the Bolsheviki the Spanish representative at Petrograd said that he would do all in his power to contribute to peace, "for which the whole of humanity thirsts," a Reuter's dispatch from Petrograd reports.

DESPERATE FIGHT FOR CAMBRIA KEY

the tanks went before them slowly but very steadily and successfully over broken ground, breaking down tree stumps and undergrowth and firing rapidly with their guns. Groups of Germans were routed out from their hiding places and surrendered if they were not killed by the sweep of fire.

The line of tanks and of the following infantry was in an easterly curve on the western side of Bourlon Village, striking at the heart of it. On the extreme left, invisible at any distance, were six German machine guns, and they raked the British troops with a most harassing enfilade fire, so that they could not make much headway.

The British right battalions were screened from this, and were able to work up on the eastern edge of the village as far as the railway to the north of it, fighting all the way against groups of German guards with machine guns and rifles, so that there were many hand-to-hand encounters and a most bitter struggle. It was then, as I wrote yesterday, that they rescued the officers and men of the East Surreys, who had been isolated in the village, and had been holding out with great gallantry until help reached them.

Many of the German grenadiers were taken prisoners and I saw a large batch of them today as they came marching down under escort and stood staring through the barbed wire of their enclosure. They are a powerful body of men and put up a big, hard fight. So the situation remains today as far as I know in the neighborhood of Bourlon village.

Cambrai Impaired as a Base.

TUESDAY, Nov. 27.—There was hard fighting today in and about Bourlon Wood and village, westward by Moeuvres and eastward around the half-buried village of Fontaine Notre Dame. The Germans continue to bring up reinforcements and mass them near Cambrai, although they can no longer detrain them there, as the station is under the fire of the British guns. The old town itself has been evacuated by civilians and all but fighting troops and cleared of all material as hurriedly as possible.

Some very sharp orders must have arrived from the German High Command to the divisional Generals and regimental commanders holding the Cambrai area, for the capture of Bourlon Forest by the British menaces one of their most important lines of communications, apart from its threat to Cambrai. Desperate efforts are being made by the Third Guards Division and other new troops in this line to wrest back the high ground on which that great wood stands, famous through centuries of warfare as a strategical point. Last night, about 10 o'clock, another counter-attack was delivered against the British lines in the forest, but it does not seem to have broken through the forward defenses.

Hot Fight in Storm at Night.

From the British side raids were made into the village of Bourlon, on the northwest side of the wood, part of the object being to rescue some companies of East Surreys which had been cut off by previous counter-attacks and were holding out among the ruins of houses, surrounded by the enemy and without food or supplies. In the darkness of a bitter night, with a cruel wind blowing and rain turning to sleet and snow, the British worked forward into Bourlon Village and fought behind the cover of broken walls and through bombarded houses under bursts of machine gun and rifle fire.

I do not know yet any further details of this fighting, except that some of the East Surreys were rescued and brought back. It is believed that other men of the British force remain in the village, holding out to the last gasp until they may be relieved in some way by comrades, who will fight hard to get them.

Early this morning to the east of the forest of Bourlon, where Fontaine Notre Dame is smoldering into white ashes, except where some of its houses have been untouched, some of the British troops moved forward to harry the German garrison, which had come back in strength with many machine guns after the British withdrawal last Wednesday. The British, it seems, have forced their way into part of the village, in spite of the dreadful sweep of machine gun fire from neighboring houses and from La Folie Wood to the southeast.

Men and Horses Almost Frozen.

After a spell of mild weather, which favored the British operations in spite of rainy nights at the beginning of this battle near Cambrai, it turned bitterly cold yesterday, and men and horses have to suffer exposure to a savage and cutting wind on a wide stretch of open country where there is no shelter for man or beast. Yesterday it was real physical agony to endure that wind, which came over the bleak plains like the lash of a whip. Gunners and mule drivers who had been sitting in their saddles for hours had a frozen look as they kept their steel helmets slanted to the gale, while their poor, wet beasts trudged forward with heads bent.

The whole of the British army has moved beyond even a far view of ordinary comfort and standing habitations. The men have behind them first, the whole stretch of the Somme battlefields, where there is no wood except the dead wood of naked trunks, like gallows trees, and no villages, except rubbish heaps and graveyards, and where every road track is bordered by little, white crosses, where sleep the heroes of the Somme, in this wild waste of desolation, haunted by hidden horrors.

Like a Campaign in a Desert.

They have behind them the country of the German retreat, when, in the Spring of this year, the enemy stole away from Bapaume and Peronne, and from scores of villages beyond, after putting an explosive charge into every house, church, barn, pigsty, stable, chateau, factory, mill, dog kennel, and summerhouse, so that nothing is left but brickdust, ashes, broken timbers, twisted iron, gateways which lead into mansions no longer there, and doorways which open into houses all tumbled down, and the roofs of which have fallen, sometimes with all their tiles in place, to the level of earth. Here and there is a crucifix at a crossway.

Now the British troops are beyond the Hindenburg line, and the villages of Ribecourt, Marcoing, Graincourt, Flesquieres, and others which are in ruins, like all those ruins for twelve and fifteen miles behind, so that there are no shelters behind the lines of this fighting front into which the men can go for an hour, and no whole billets in which they can rest when they are relieved in the lines. They seem like men in the middle of a great desert, enormously far from the civilized world, enormously lonely, except for their own comradeship and their own playfulness, and the help of padres and other friendly souls of the church, and the Y. M. C. A., who put up tents and huts in this wilderness, and arrange a little entertainment of body and soul for men who otherwise would be parched for such things.

Entered Town Despite Heavy Fire.

After 6:30 o'clock this morning the struggle around Fontaine Notre Dame developed into a battle that was hard and bloody on both sides. The British went away behind a heavy barrage in which all the guns joined forces, and afterward the British batteries kept the country around Fontaine and Bourlon under a steady and violent fire.

The British pushed their way into the village of Fontaine itself, but were met by blasts of machine gun fire which came also on their right from La Folie Wood, which the enemy had strongly garrisoned after his first flight from the British cavalry patrols.

In spite of the ordeal, the British infantry gained the outskirts of the village, and, fighting from house to house and wall to wall under a continuous rifle and machine gun fire, cleared out the German garrison, and captured about 500 prisoners.

It seems that the whole of the village was seized by the British after something like three hours of most bitter fighting, but at this stage of the action the enemy threw in two new and fresh divisions against the whole of the Bourlon Wood-Fontaine line. Here and elsewhere odd units and exhausted divisions which the enemy brought into line to hold the gap made by the British surprise attack had been withdrawn and the line reorganized and put into a strong state of defense with storm troops ready for immediate counterattack.

The counterattack was met, and a new struggle began, with intense and terrible fighting at close quarters. It is still in progress as darkness approaches, and it appears from an early report of the action that the British have been forced to give ground and retire under severe pressure from some of the ruins in Fontaine which they gained in the early morning.

Neither Side Can Hold Town.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 28, (Associated Press.)—Fontaine Notre Dame was today virtually No Man's Land, over which swirled a never-ending deluge of machine-gun bullets from the ranks of the opposing forces drawn up on each side of this blood-drenched little hamlet.

A German counterattack with fresh corps which resulted in the British being pushed back through the hamlet gave the enemy a claim to the reoccupation of the place. But the Germans were unable to remain in Fontaine in force, so that, to all intents and purposes, they lost Fontaine, although the British did not gain it.

A heavy machine gun and rifle fire was proceeding today throughout this section.

SHELLING BOURLON WOOD.

German Guns Harass British in Position Commanding Cambrai.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Field Marshal Haig's day report today mentions German artillery activity in the region of Bourlon Wood, from which the British advance under General Byng is now shelling the German base at Cambrai, three and a half miles distant, but says no further infantry fighting has taken place.

Artillery activity is also reported east and northeast of Ypres, in the neighborhood of Passchendaele. This may presage a British or a German offensive there.

Field Marshal Haig's day report reads:

The German artillery was active last night in the region of Bourlon Wood. No further infantry fighting has taken place.

On the northern front, east and northeast of Ypres, hostile artillery activity continues.

The British official communication issued this evening says:

On the Cambrai battle front nothing of special interest occurred during the day.

Early this morning the enemy attempted two raids against our trenches in the neighborhood of Abion, south of Lens, but were repulsed in both cases.

On the Ypres front the enemy's artillery activity has continued. It has been heaviest east of Ypres. We have secured a few prisoners in patrol encounters.

Gunfire Violent, Berlin Says.

BERLIN, Nov. 28, (via London.)—Artillery fighting of the greatest violence is now in progress on the Flanders front in the region of Passchendaele, the scene of the recent heavy fighting, the War Office reports.

In the Cambrai area the Germans yesterday lost Bourlon and Fontaine Notre Dame for a time, but subsequently recaptured them. The statement says more than 200 prisoners and a number of machine guns were taken in the fighting there.

The text of the statement reads:

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht—In Flanders the artillery fire was lively from midday onward between Houthoist Wood and Zandvoorde. Near Passchendaele it increased in the evening to the greatest violence. On both sides of the Scarpe there was increased fighting activity.

On the battlefield near Cambrai a sharp artillery duel at daybreak heralded attacks which the British, with divisions freshly brought up, directed against Bourlon, Fontaine, and our adjoining positions. West of Bourlon the enemy's attacking waves and the tanks preceding them collapsed under our fire. Between Bourlon and Fontaine the enemy, after many fruitless assaults, penetrated our defense zone. Bourlon and Fontaine were temporarily lost.

The British troops, which were greatly thinned by desperate house-to-house fighting, encountered a counterthrust by our infantry. Brought up in an encircling movement and directed with spirit, our troops retook the villages in a magnificent assault and threw back the enemy into Bourlon Wood. More than 200 prisoners and numerous machine guns remained in our hands. The heavy artillery fire decreased with nightfall. Local infantry engagements continued into the night.

"GREAT SUCCESS" AT CAMBRAI.

Battle in Melting Pot, Says Maurice—German Trench "Hotels."

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Major-Gen. F. B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations at the War Office, said today in commenting on the situation on the western front:

"The battle of Cambrai is still in the melting pot. The attack was a great success. The British in this case had no definite objectives. We intended to get as far as we could, and I can tell you we established ourselves a deal further than Field Marshal Haig expected.

"The actual positions captured were very interesting, showing the tremendous amount of work put on the triple Hindenburg line by the German soldiers. Each line was defended by strong trenches, dugouts, tunnels, and a triple line of barbed wire, each line 50 to 60 yards in depth.

"The villages behind the lines had beneath them great chambers which it would be slander to call dugouts. They were more like hotels, fifty feet beneath the ground, and were provided with electricity, water supply, sewers, drying rooms, and kitchens. All the earth excavated from these places had been deposited inside the houses, so from air planes the villages appeared always perfectly normal. These underground villages were absolutely shellproof and bombproof."

General Maurice said that the British position in the Cambrai salient was one which would be of the greatest service in further operations against the Germans.

GERMAN TRIBUTE TO TANKS.

Cologne Paper's Correspondent Admits Their Success.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 28.—In a dispatch on "The Tank Battle of Cambrai," Herr Katsch, the war correspondent of the Cologne Volks Zeitung and other papers, says: "What the Entente so far has not been able to accomplish by artillery fire, that is to break through on our front, was achieved on the Cambrai front with the aid of the tanks.

"In very great numbers, (probably there were 400 of them,) those monsters went on in advance of the hostile infantry, smashing down all obstacles, breaking through our lines and so cutting off our front line from all communication with the rear that it was subjected to fire from both the tanks and infantry.

"The approach of the tanks through the mist and the smoke of bursting shells was difficult to observe, and it can be said that the enemy succeeded in achieving a surprise attack."

the Chief of Staff, and Admiral William S. Benson, Chief of Naval Operations, would attend the full sessions of the conference, but it may be that all the members of the mission will take part. This point, which is not yet determined, will depend upon what the makeup of the representations of the other countries will be.

Mathieu Sevastopoulo, who has been councillor of the Russian Embassy here throughout the successive changes in the embassy since the revolution, and who occupied that post previously under the old régime, will sit in the conference. M. Maklakoff, the new Ambassador, has not yet presented his credentials to President Poincaré, as he is waiting to see what happens in Russia, but he also will have a place in the conference as an observer. He has made an admirable personal impression upon the French and allied diplomats.

Colonel House had a long conference this morning with Premier Clemenceau and another later with David Lloyd George, the British Premier. He was a guest of James Hazen Hyde at dinner this evening.

The British Mission, all told, inclusive of clerks and other attachés, numbers 143 persons.

Six members of the British mission to the United States are also here, among them Earl Reading, Viscount Northcliffe, Sir Charles Gordon and Lieut. Col. Campbell Stuart.

That Japan is attaching considerable interest to the conference is indicated by the fact that, in addition to Viscount Chinda, Baron Matsui, Ambassador to France; Kumataro Houdo, Counsellor to the Embassy, and four other Japanese are watching the proceedings.

The conference will be held in the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—It was announced at the Chinese legation today that China would be represented at the interallied conference at Paris by the resident Chinese Minister in France, Mr. Hu Wei Teh, and by General Tamt Tsai Lieh, Vice Secretary of the General Staff of China, who has arrived in Paris.

COUNCIL FACES NEW PROBLEMS

Threat of Another German Offensive and the Russian Collapse Are to be Considered.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Informed opinion here is that the Interallied Council in Paris, from its inception, will find itself confronted with a set of problems as critical as any that have arisen in the whole course of the war. The necessity of that unity of plan and control which President Wilson emphasized as essential in order to achieve a just and permanent peace was never more evident. Apparently, there is no failure to appreciate the difficulties in the way of securing it.

Croakers are found chiefly in quarters habitually prone to pessimistic criticism, and it is noteworthy that the representation of the United States gives a flavor of optimism to others who held the belief that the supreme war council could only achieve its purpose by means of common good-will and mutual disinterestedness.

The air is full of rumors of German preparations for another strategic blow. Some of them have been industriously circulated from Germany with the obvious purpose of perplexing the Allies. Not all of them, however, can be dismissed on that ground. The opportunity which the Central Powers possess of rapid movement on interior lines and of utilizing not only men drawn from the eastern front, but material captured in the drive into Italy, represents a considerable factor in the strategic plans for the next phase of the war.

The theory that a large new army can be released from parts of the Russian front for operations in the West or elsewhere is broadly correct, for though it is true that the Russians, in spite of their internal difficulties, have detained a hundred or more German divisions on their front, a large portion of the eastern front has been serving the purposes of a rest cure for troops which have been through the fierce fighting in the west.

The situation would be rendered still more difficult by the conclusion of a separate peace by Russia. The Rumanian position in that event would become immediately impossible, and even with the continuance of the present conditions in Russia it is one that causes the gravest anxieties.

It is believed here that the Russian situation is bound to come to a head within three or four weeks. The mere difficulty of supplying the troops at the front is enough to create fresh developments in the near future. The sound elements in Russia are unfortunately widely scattered, and the problem of organizing them is one of extreme difficulty. There is at present little direct communication between North and South Russia, as telegraphs and railways have been interrupted in the central part of the country.

The chief hope lies with Kaledines, who is reported to be collecting large forces in the Don Valley, and with whom it is thought probable that Korniloff is now. Holding the chief coal mines of Russia, Kaledines possesses a card of great value, even though the Russian railways use wood to a large extent. Everything seems to depend on his power to rally the scattered loyal elements and the wisdom with which he uses his strategic and material advantages.

The plans concerted by the Allied Council will have to contemplate both the possibility of a separate peace being carried through by the Maximalists and the scarcely less ominous failure of the sound elements in Russia to obtain effective control. That opens a wide horizon that requires to be scanned for signs of enemy offensive action—Rumania on the east, France on the west, and in other fields of war a long line offering several vulnerable points.

Germany's rich harvest of war material gathered in Italy constitutes an enormous asset. The guns captured are not only a positive addition to the German artillery, but are a negative loss to the Allies of a great part of the present production of guns which is going on in Great Britain and France. It would be indiscreet to give the exact figures on this point, but there can be no objection to publishing in America what the British censorship has passed for publication here. A statesman said:

"We cannot help seeing without figures as to the Allies' gun output, that their losses of guns in Italy must, at least, represent a very large part of what can be produced over and above replacements in twelve months. Little secret has lately been made of the fact that the demand for guns has been especially hard to meet. The Admiralty wants a great number for arming merchantmen, the air service wants great numbers for anti-aircraft purposes, the armies, of course, always want them, and near ahead is the problem of equipping in this respect the coming American forces.

"Suddenly, to superadd to these tasks that of making good the loss of between 2,500 and 3,000 guns by the Italians may indeed seem to be the last straw. No doubt all needed guns will eventually be made, and the demands will be met, but it will take time."

Washington fully realizes, as I have reason to know, the seriousness of the situation in regard to the output of big guns, and at the recent conferences of the American mission in London that matter was thoroughly gone into, while other aspects of the same question are undoubtedly receiving attention at the American Commission's meetings with the French in Paris. The members of the American mission, before they left London, saw no reason to fear that all the difficulties would not be overcome, for those which came within their range were known and calculated for. Some of the problems which will confront the Supreme War Council when it sits are likely to be more difficult because much that must necessarily be unknown will have to be calculated for.

MRS. E. M. HOUSE MUCH SOUGHT AFTER ABROAD

Impressed by Women's War Work in Europe and Tells Them of Similar Labors Here.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov 28.—Mrs. E. M. House is almost as much sought after in Europe as the Colonel, and resembles her husband in avoiding show. Perhaps no other American woman ever occupied the position in Europe in which Mrs. House has been placed. She has met Kings, Premiers, Generals, Admirals, and their wives in their homes and on State occasions. Her impressions would be most interesting, and I tried to induce her to give some of them to THE NEW YORK TIMES, but she smiled and pointed to the Colonel as the only member of the family authorized to talk for publication.

"Won't you mention the one thing that has struck you most since coming to Europe?" I asked.

"What I have thought most about and spoken of most often to those I have met here is women's work in this war," Mrs. House replied. "And it's not alone in war-worn Europe that women are willing to make sacrifices. I've been glad to tell Europeans something about feminine activities at home.

"Europe, 3,000 miles away, can know but vaguely the extent to which our American women dedicated themselves. I know girls just out in society and who are turning away from social gayety and taking up war drudgery. Women bring their knitting to dinners and work between courses. These are not exceptional cases, but simply exemplify and are typical of an almost universal spirit. The will is there for every sacrifice; they only need to know what and how. In Europe also American women are in the thick of that war that must be waged behind, no less than on, the lines."

I endeavored to draw Mrs. House out on her impressions of people she had met, but she raised her hands deprecatingly.

Mrs. House stood the trip over splendidly, and enjoyed the experience. She shares the Colonel's philosophical outlook on life—the sporting view, if I may use that phrase in a high sense.

The Houses have the old-fashioned notion of family unity. They are much alike and inseparable companions. Wherever they go Mrs. House is remarked upon for her distinguished appearance, with her young face and snow-white hair. She is a member of the well-known Hunter family of Virginia, and is typically Southern in speech and manner.

BARRED ZONE NOW REACHES TO ALBANY

Every Shipping Pier in Southern District of New York Closed to Enemy Aliens.

GERMANS HURRY TO COMPLY

All Must Be Off the Manhattan Waterfront by 9 o'Clock This Morning.

The East River barred zone was extended yesterday to Seventy-seventh Street, while every pier in the southern district of New York at which any kind of shipping is handled was ruled as within the provisions of the new enemy alien regulations and from now on no German subject will be permitted to approach nearer than 100 yards of such piers. As the southern district of New York includes the Hudson River waterfronts as far as Albany, this means that Germans living or doing business within 100 yards of shipyards or piers in Yonkers, Ossining, Tarrytown, Peekskill, Haverstraw, Newburg, Beacon, and Poughkeepsie will have to move into unrestricted zones.

At 9 o'clock this morning the time limit given to enemy aliens to move out of the Manhattan waterfront zones will expire, and at that hour United States deputy marshals will begin a tour of the North and East River Zones to see that the orders have been obeyed. In a few instances German business firms have received extensions of time in which to find new quarters.

Reports received yesterday by Marshal McCarthy indicated that fully 75 per cent. of the Germans within the limits of the zones have already moved and that the remaining 25 per cent. are ready to vacate by the time set this morning. Marshal McCarthy estimated that between 4,000 and 5,000 enemy alien business men were in the barred zone when the President issued his proclamation last week.

For the first time since the United States entered the war armed troops were on duty in West Street yesterday patrolling the Chelsea and Southern Pacific piers. The section now guarded by soldiers extends from Little West Twelfth Street to Twenty-second Street, and takes in piers at which are docked the great transatlantic liners of the International Mercantile Marine, the Cunard Company and the French Line. The soldiers are coast artillerymen under command of Captain W. A. Heath, with First Lieut. R. E. Dupuy as second in command. The soldiers are quartered on Pier 48, in the Southern Pacific section.

That the soldiers will rigidly enforce the enemy alien regulations was quickly manifest. Every person was stopped as he or she entered the restricted zone, and they had to satisfy the soldiers that they were not enemy aliens before they were permitted to proceed. They were also required to prove that they had business in the zone.

The barbed-wire fences are to be erected in front of the principal piers on the North River tomorrow morning. In a few days other piers in addition to those already under guard will be placed in charge of army patrols. A list of Brooklyn piers which, in the opinion of the Department of Justice, should be under army guard was submitted to Brig. Gen. Ell Hogle yesterday.

The Brooklyn waterfront zone, Marshal James M. Power announced last night, extends from Fort Hamilton to Newtown Creek, near Long Island City, and takes in every important pier in that borough.

Customs officers went to a pier on the East River, near the Spanish Line docks, yesterday and arrested ten Germans found at work on the pier. The men were taken to the Federal Building, where they were questioned by Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox. The Germans said they had continued at work on the supposition that it was legal for them to remain in the barred zone until 9 o'clock this morning. Mr. Knox ordered them released, but told them that if they again appeared in the barred zone they would be arrested and interned.

Blackwell's Island authorities were informed by Marshal McCarthy that they will be required to immediately discharge all German subjects by noon today.

John Lloyd, who says he is an actor, and Edward W. Harrigan, who gave his business as a clerk, were arrested yesterday charged with impersonating agents of the United States Secret Service. Ernest Karl, who before the war was employed as a fireman on the Hamburg-American liner Vaterland, made the complaint. He said that Lloyd and Harrigan approached him Sunday night and told him that he was under arrest as an enemy alien. The "agents" agreed, he asserted, to put him on a steamer for South America provided he gave $300 to them.

Lloyd and Harrigan were held in $10,000 bail by Commissioner Hitchcock to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury.

Frederick Owens a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad engineer living at Elm Park, and George Metz, a German of Mariners Harbor, Richmond Borough, were arrested yesterday by Special Officer McDermott of the West New Brighton Police Station. He charged the men with making seditious utterances. He alleges that Owens stated that President Wilson was a tool for England, and that Metz also made defamatory remarks about the President. Both men denied the accusations.

SUE FOR ACCOUNTING OF WAR CONTRACTS

Receivers of Aetna Explosives Company Seek Explanation of Large Commissions.

By permission of Judge Mayer of the Federal District Court, the receivers of the Aetna Explosives Company, Inc., began suit yesterday to compel Arthur J. Moxham, and Frederick L. Belin, formerly President and Treasurer, respectively, of the company, to render an accounting of their management of the concern while they were in control of it. The company passed into the hands of the receivers, Benjamin B. Odell and George C. Holt, after an application had been filed by counsel for the Grasselli Chemical Company of Cleveland, a creditor, to the amount of $103,655 alleged to be due for merchandise.

It was explained in the application that the Aetna Company was organized on Nov. 28, 1914, and on Dec. 8, 1916, under an amended certificate of incorporation. Its authorized capital was $18,100,000. The application complained that Mr. Moxham had made contracts by which the company became liable to Edward W. Bassick for commissions amounting to several million dollars in connection with contracts made with the French Government, and that Mr. Moxham and Mr. Belin gave the company's notes for $753,234 in partial payment of the commissions. It was charged that the notes were made without authority.

Suits to compel payment were begun in the Federal courts by Mr. Bassick, by Herbert F. John, the Lenpier Trading Company and Delancy T. Smith, indorsers of some of the notes in order to force their payment. These suits are still pending. The total amount sued for is more than $3,955,000. The complaint filed by the receivers in the present suit says that the defendants, on Nov. 25, 1914, made a joint agreement to organize a company for the manufacture of explosives, and that all were to share equally in the profits. Thereafter an arrangement was made for the acquisition of the capital stock of the Aetna Company, the Keystone National Powder Company and the Miami Powder Company.

It is alleged in the complaint that the stock and bonds of the Aetna Company rapidly advanced in value, and that both Mr. Moxham and Mr. Belin sold back to the company at the advanced price securities which they had received as their share of the venture. It is charged that this transaction was also illegal. Besides asking for an accounting the receivers want the defendants to pay back the company the market value of the securities they still hold.

Since the receivers have been in control of the company it has prospered exceedingly. In June last the receivers made a report to the court saying that a profit of $259,000 had been made. This success has continued, and many large and profitable contracts have been made with the allied nations for explosives of various kind.

were getting ready to go into action. Many had little pink boxes in their hands which looked like packages of candy, but when they were opened it was not candy which was seen, but long, thin bullets which fit into the Italian rifles. Every cartridge belt was full of these pink boxes.

Passing the headquarters of the fourth army, which holds the vital line between the Brenta and Piave rivers, a staff officers of General Robilant, Commander of this army, summed up the general situation as "satisfactory," the reports showing that the enemy was being held.

While the pressure of the Austro-German forces is still strong, at the same time they seem to have been worn down by heavy losses and the unexpected strength of the resistance they have encountered. This staff officer estimated the enemy losses as fully two or three times those of the Italians, as the defensive lines have always afforded greater shelter.

Italians Refuse an Armistice.

Here it was learned also that the enemy had asked for an armistice to bury his dead, the request being refused by the Italians because of the Austrian attitude toward a similar request a few months ago. The Austrians had then proposed that during the armistice the Italian guards should be unarmed and the Austrian guards armed. This was indignantly refused, and the present proposal was rejected through lack of confidence in Austrian good faith.

As one approached the mountain battle zone the cannonading became very heavy, with machine-gun and rifle fire and a steady succession of aerial duels as Italian and Austrian machines flew over the opposing lines. A large enemy battle plane was accompanied by a line of chasers, which strung out like a flock of wild geese. Shrapnel burst all around them, but they got away, with a fleet of Caproni after them, one of the Austrians was brought down, although one had his engine hit, and he could be seen winging down in curves to a nearby hilltop, like an eagle seeking its aerie.

From a high point the view led out upon Monte Monfenera and Monte Tomba and the succession of low mountains flanking the Piave River, where the struggle is now centering. On Monte Monfenera the Austrian lines were clearly seen on one summit and the Italian lines on another. The latter were partly covered with snow.

The rumbling of the guns was continuous, with the crack of Italian batteries in concealed shelters behind shooting over the heads of the party. Above these summits reared the dominating crest of Monte Grappa, which is the final mountain barrier before the Venetian plains.

From this point the enemy's position seemed to be very near this plain and its great sweep of level country leading to the heart of Italy.

General Garibaldi accompanied the party to the extreme front line and personally pointed out some of the chief points of the severe fighting. It was his Alpine Brigade that threw back the Prussian Guard. Three of these regiments of Guards had been identified, he said, as the Eighth, Tenth, and Twelfth.

As the General had been the Chief of Staff of Madero in the Mexican War, he was asked how the present fighting compared with that in Mexico.

"That was much like hunting little birds compared with this," he replied.

The General said that the morale of his men was splendid, despite the terrific strain upon them, and that when they were told that the French and British were coming they begged to be allowed to stay in their present exposed positions.

"But there is one thing that will stimulate them more than anything else," added the General, "and that is some American regiments, preferably made up of Italians who have taken up residence in America. It would bring inspiration to the whole army."

REICHSTAG MEETS TODAY.

Coalition Parties Expected to Give Hertling a Vote of Confidence.

BERLIN, Nov. 28, (via London.)—The Reichstag will reassemble tomorrow afternoon. It is expected that Chancellor von Hertling's speech will deal exhaustively with the foreign and domestic policies of the nation, and that he will receive a vote of confidence from the coalition parties. The Reichstag Main Committee will not meet before the opening of the plenary sessions.

The Bundesrat's Committee on Foreign Affairs met with the Chancellor yesterday. Dr. Richard von Kuehlmann, the Foreign Secretary, discussed the foreign situation with the party leaders.

Dr. Karl Helfferich, former Vice-Chancellor, has received an offer of the chair of political science of Bonn University.

WAR TAX STAMPS READY.

Collector Edwards Gives Instructions for Cancellation.

Collector William H. Edwards of the Second or Wall Street Internal Revenue District yesterday gave out a statement calling attention to the fact that the war stamp taxes on many transactions will become effective on Saturday, and outlining the procedure to be followed in complying with the law. Specially designed adhesive stamps may be purchased at the office of the Second District, room 508, Custom House; office of the Third District, 1,150 Broadway, and at the headquarters of the First District in the Federal Building, Brooklyn. Stamps are also on sale at the branch office of the Fourteenth District, Bergen Building, Tremont and Arthur Avenues, the Bronx. In a short time documentary stamps will be on sale at Post Offices and at the various banks designated as United States depositaries.

The Collector said a proper cancellation of a stamp consisted of the following:

"Whenever an adhesive stamp is used for denoting any tax, the person or firm using or affixing same shall write or stamp, or cause to be written or stamped thereon, the initials of his or its name, and the date upon which the stamp is attached or used. If the stamp is of the value of 10 cents or over, three parallel incisions with a sharp instrument should also be made lengthwise so that the stamp may not again be used. Proper perforations are permissible in lieu of the incisions mentioned."

The Collector's statement enumerated the penalties provided for noncompliance with the law.

The stamp taxes effective Saturday cover the following documents and transactions: Bonds of indebtedness, debentures or certificates of indebtedness, bonds of indemnity and surety, capital stock issues, capital stock sales or transfers, produce sales on Exchanges or Boards of Trade, drafts or checks payable otherwise than at sight or on demand, promissory notes, instruments conveying funds, entrance or warehouse entry of goods at Custom Houses, withdrawals of merchandise from federal bonded warehouses, passage tickets, proxies and powers of attorney. Revenue stamps also will have to be affixed to parcel post packages on which the postage amounts to 25 cents or more.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—It was announced here tonight that Mrs. John Hays Hammond had resigned the Presidency of the Militia of Mercy in New York. Mrs. Hammond is now at her home here. Asked tonight as to the reason for her resignation, the following reply was given by Mrs. Hammond's private secretary: "Mrs. Hammond thanks you for your kindness, and says that her resignation is not due to her absence from New York, nor is it due to ill-health. Mrs. Hammond's health is very good. She prefers not to say anything more than this about her resignation."

COOKS PREPARE FEAST FOR PERSHING'S MEN

Thanksgiving Dinner Expected to be the Best Ever Served to Army on Foreign Soil.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Tuesday, Nov. 27, (Associated Press.)—Army cooks began today to prepare what probably will be the best dinner ever served for an army fighting on foreign soil. In every village in France where American troops are stationed the company cooks started to make cranberry sauce and to lay out great piles of plump turkey, sweet potatoes, and everything else that goes to make up a real Thanksgiving dinner.

There is not an American soldier who will be unable to eat all he wants, except for a few just arrived and some officers who are unlucky enough to be stationed in out-of-the-way places or living elsewhere than in camp. As many of these as possible have been invited to messes. Even the wood-cutting camps in the forests of France have had a share sent to them.

Tomorrow the big job of cooking dinner for the army will begin early. There was many a cook who turned in before his usual time tonight so as to get a good start. It was fully expected that there would be some mince pie casualties, and they were being looked forward to with pleasure.

Thanksgiving Day for the American forces will be one of resting, eating, and recovering. After the dinner settles there will be real American doings, such as football games, in which some American stars who are here will play.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Nov. 28, (Associated Press.)—The people of this town, in which is located the American General Headquarters, notice the preparations that are being made for Thanksgiving Day, have arranged entertainments for the Americans in and about the town tomorrow, together with a celebration in the Hôtel de Ville.

Similar celebrations and entertainments have been arranged by the French people in other towns where American troops are quartered.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A special telegraph wire connecting General Pershing's headquarters in France with the American military headquarters in London was installed today. The first message sent by General Pershing to Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador here, said:

"Greetings and best wishes from the American Army Headquarters in this, the first message over the military line to London."

PROPOSE MEDAL FOR VALOR.

American Officers in France Urge a New Decoration.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Nov. 28, (Associated Press.)—The ranking officers of the American Army in France have passed on to headquarters recommendations for some sort of a medal to be awarded for distinguished service.

It is suggested that the decoration be distributed in a manner similar to the French war cross, but for deeds of valor of less importance than those for which the French medal of honor is given.

SAYS POPE PLANS NO NEW PEACE PLEA

Desires Only a Just and Lasting Settlement, Cardinal Gasparri Asserts.

LAUDS CLERGY AS PATRIOTS

Denies They Helped Impair Italian Army's Morale — Condemns Peace Prayer Chains.

ROME, Nov. 27, (Delayed.)—The Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Gasparri, answering numerous criticisms regarding the Vatican's peace attitude, issued to the press today the following statement:

"The Holy Father is not preparing any new appeal looking toward peace. His earnest desire, many times manifested, for a just, Christian, and durable peace, is unchanged and cannot change. Who can crave anything else and call himself a Christian?

"To say that His Holiness favors, or has favored, or will favor an unjust, un-Christian and undurable peace is not only false, but also absurd. Any propaganda for such a peace, alleged to be conducted at the Vatican's inspiration, especially in certain nations, is the product of pure malice. A 'chain of prayer' has always been reprobated by the Holy See, and Bishops and priests in the United States of America, and elsewhere are warned against them, particularly those having any such propaganda behind them. Also, American Catholics and others are cautioned that such prayers are a species of superstition.

"The Catholic Church has always regarded true patriotism as a Christian duty and a Christian virtue, and still so teaches. The fact that the Italian Parliament has had warm eulogies for the clergy should be sufficient to refute the calumnies which irresponsible persons have circulated and are circulating in the foreign world. Malicious insinuations propagated in America and the tendency to attribute in great part to the Italian clergy responsibility for the recent situation must be denounced. In Italy a determined person is attributing the situation to the clergy.

"When the disruptive propaganda began to affect the morale of the Italian army, the clergy in general and also the army chaplains, following the instructions and the example of the Chaplain in Chief, labored to contract it and elevate the morale of the troops. More than once the army chaplains informed the Chaplain in Chief, who informed the supreme civil authorities, of the disruptive movement that was creeping in—and all that long before the publication of the Papal note appeared.

"The true causes of the recent Italian reverses are perfectly well understood in Italy, and the shoulders on which rests the responsibility for the reverses are well known, a responsibility which certainly does not touch Catholics, the clergy, and, least of all, the august person of the sovereign Pontiff.

"In one case the Holy See ordered the suppression of a newspaper containing imprudent observations.

"Finally, is it necessary to repeat that the Pontifical appeal, which some have ignorantly criticised, was addressed to the chiefs of the Governments for consideration in the official Chancelleries? The Governmental authorities first gave it to the press, and the public. The Holy See published and commented on it in the Osservatore Romano, the Vatican's official organ, only when the false interpretations of others, whether innocent or willful, made such action necessary."

MRS. HUMISTON'S WORK NOT BACKED BY BAKER

Secretary of War Says Her Activities Have Ended in a "Disgusting Trick."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Secretary Baker late this afternoon paid his respects to Mrs. Grace Humiston, whose agents, James C. Atkins and the so-called Adeline Francis, were arrested by the military police at Camp Upton last Sunday night, by issuing a statement in which he makes it plain that her investigations of camp surroundings have no official sanction.

Mr. Baker denies flatly that the army has been directed to co-operate with Mrs. Humiston in her investigations and asserts that, on the contrary, she was notified more than a week ago that her services as an investigator were declined by the War Department.

The statement issued by Secretary Baker read:

"I hesitate to say anything which would seem to dignify the activities and statements of Mrs. Grace Humiston in regard to the conditions at Camp Upton. She has been accorded altogether too much publicity, and the matter should be allowed to drop.

"Let me merely say that the army has not been directed to co-operate with her in her investigations.

"On the contrary, Mr. Fosdick, Chairman of the Commission on Training Camp Activities, at my request notified her by wire over a week ago that her proffered services as an investigator were declined.

"Whatever she does is on her own responsibility. What she has so far done seems to have begun in irresponsible slander upon the army and ended in a futile and disgusting trick."

Notwithstanding Secretary Baker's statement Mrs. Humiston continued last night to insist she was working in cooperation with Army officers from Governors Island in her investigations. She told of another case in which she alleged two girls were mistreated by soldiers at a camp near New York, but in this instance, as in the others, the authorities here have taken no action.

AMERICAN OFFICER GETS OUT OF GERMANY

Flight Lieutenant, Taken Prisoner on Western Front, Makes His Escape.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Patrick O'Brien, an American flight Lieutenant and native of Seattle, who had been flying with the British for a year and who was taken prisoner by the Germans two months ago, arrived in London today after escaping from a German prison camp.

The lieutenant had three narrow escapes from death. On one occasion he was nearly electrocuted on the wires on the Dutch frontier. On his arrival in London the Lieutenant went immediately to the American Embassy to arrange for his transfer from the British to the American Flying Corps.

Dismisses Langevin Indictment.

CHARGE ANARCHISTS PLOTTED FOOD RIOTS

Federal Agents Say Conspiracy Included General Seizure of the Supplies.

BOSTON CHOSEN AS CENTRE

Startling Evidence Withheld There Pending the Trial of Three Men Now on Bail.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 28.—Commissioner of Immigration White asserted today that literature seized at the headquarters of the Italian plotters under arrest here indicated that the men planned to seize foodstuffs in various parts of the United States. The alleged anarchistic society laid plans, White said, to make Boston the centre of food riots and, assisted by Industrial Workers of the World, to encourage general uprisings.

"The people will rise up and take the food where they find it," one of the seized pamphlets read, according to the authorities. "The gravity of the situation and the probability of an insurrection by the people cannot be concealed."

The Italian leaders of the intrigue told their followers, Federal officials said, that the State Government of Massachusetts feared an uprising and furnished the Boston police with machine guns and ammunition to quell it.

Other pamphlets found attacked the United States Food Administration, officials asserted, and ridiculed the efforts of the authorities to control food prices.

Plot Known in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Agents of the Department of Justice here confirmed tonight the disclosures in Seattle of the existence of an anarchistic plot to seize foodstuffs in various parts of the country. They also said that Boston was believed to have been selected as the centre of the intrigue. It was their opinion that the neighboring city of Lynn was the general headquarters of the conspirators, although the ringleaders maintained their homes elsewhere.

Evidence of a startling nature has been obtained, according to the Federal officials, but has been withheld from the public pending the trial of three Lynn men who were arrested six months ago charged with conspiring to counsel young men against the Selective Service act.

The defendants are Louis Galleano, proprietor of a small newspaper called The Chronicle, and John Eramo, and Carlo Valdorioci. They are out on substantial bail. A few days before the date set for the trial in October it was postponed on the ground that the Government had obtained additional important information. Federal agents said tonight that the evidence involved conspirators in various parts of the country, whose movements had been traced. Much of the information was obtained, it was said, from articles appearing in The Chronicle.

The belief was expressed that several persons now under arrest for violations of the draft law might be involved in the Lynn case.

In connection with the report from Seattle that Italian leaders had told their followers that Boston police had been furnished with machine guns to coell food riots, it was recalled that the State Public Safety Committee equipped the police several months ago with rapidfirers to safeguard the public interests when the National Guardsmen were called into Federal service.

To Patriotic Women

The American Red Cross, Atlantic Division, appeals for additional workers. It is absolutely necessary that before Christmas great quantities of sweaters, mufflers, helmets, socks, and other knitted articles be delivered to soldiers in the cantonments and army posts, and to sailors on American warships. In three days applications for 408,000 knitted garments and for surgical dressings have reached this division, and it is essential for the health and comfort of our men that there be no delay in manufacture or transmission. Surely there is no necessity to impress this on the patriotic and kind-hearted women of America. Think of your own boys without their simple comforts in this wintry season. We need 100 workers to meet the demand for surgical dressings and hospital garments, and free wool will be provided for responsible workers.

Applications may be made daily from 9:30 A. M. to 5:30 P. M. and on Saturday from 9:30 A. M. until 1 P. M.

SUES FOR SYNTHETIC GASOLINE FORMULA

Alleged That Enricht Withheld Ingredient from America, but Gave It to Germany.

B. F. YOAKUM TAKES ACTION

Asks Court to Seize Formula and Give Its Use to the United States and Our Allies.

The allegation that Louis Enricht, German-born chemist, has invented a marvelous, cheap substitute for gasoline and that, while refusing to allow this country or its allies to participate in the benefits of his discovery, he has agreed with the German Government not to disclose his secret during the war and has been "negotiating with spies and representatives of the German Government now in this country" for the sale of his patents to that country, is made in a summons, complaint, and bill of particulars filed against Enricht in the Nassau County Supreme Court at Mineola, L. I., yesterday, by the National Motor Power Company, incorporated.

The instigator of the legal proceedings is Benjamin F. Yoakum, well known railroad man and financier, who is a Farmingdale, L. I., neighbor of Enricht's and who with Enricht owns 51 per cent. of the stock of the plaintiff corporation.

Marvin W. Littleton, attorney for Mr. Yoakum and for the company, to whom Mr. Yoakum referred reporters, declared last night that investigators who watched Enricht after Mr. Yoakum became doubtful of the inventor's good faith, have established that the chemist dealt with Captain Franz von Papen, ex-Military Attaché of the German Embassy, and that he paid at least one visit to the commercial submarine Deutschland when that vessel was berthed in American waters. The lawyer asserted that so alarmed had Mr. Yoakum become over what he regarded as proof that Enricht was dealing with Germany that he (Yoakum) personally visited Attorney General Gregory two weeks ago and begged that official to seize Enricht's plant and secret papers for the benefit of the United States Government, to which Mr. Yoakum already had offered full benefit of the discovery for the period of the war.

Enricht's Laboratory Guarded.

Mr. Gregory was said to have been much impressed and to have been anxious to undertake a painstaking investigation. The essential slowness of such a procedure, Mr. Littleton explained, led Mr. Yoakum to institute proceedings on his own behalf yesterday. As the result of those proceedings the Mineola Sheriff has placed guards about Enricht's laboratory, a temporary restraining order has been issued by Supreme Court Justice Manning, a writ of replevin has been issued and the whole matter will be threshed out in the courts.

According to Mr. Yoakum's legal representative, discovery that Enricht was not acting in good faith followed the decision of the British Government, after full investigation, to buy Enricht's liquid for its army and navy in great quantities. "A British officer, a technical expert in such matters," Mr. Littleton said, "made exhaustive tests of Enricht's product, returned to England with a favorable report, and was sent back with authority to buy in large quantities. When the company called upon Enricht to go ahead with the work he confessed to us that one essential ingredient of the fluid had been withheld from the formula he had given us. He then handed us a signed statement in which he asserted that he would not go on with the project during the war. Then we started our investigation."

The attorney said that both he and Mr. Yoakum were convinced that Enricht either had an amazing invention which had withstood the most exacting scientific and technical scrutiny, or else he was a colossally clever deceiver and had succeeded in fooling even his own beckers and associates.

"We have grave fear," he continued, "that Enricht already has disclosed his secret to the German Government, and that the seeming plentifulness of gasoline in that country is due to the fact that they are manufacturing Enricht's liquid on a large scale. That was what led us to act suddenly in the interest of this country."

Named with Enricht in the papers filed yesterday were his wife, Anna; his son, Louis Enricht, Jr.; Harry Rosenbaum of Freeport, L. I., and the First National Bank of Farmingdale, L. I. The bank is included because it is alleged that in a vault in the institution, in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Enricht, is the complete formula for the liquid, including the missing secret ingredient. Mr. Littleton said last night that against Enricht's will Mr. Yoakum now has possession of a quantity of that secret ingredient, and that the work of identifying it probably will prove successful. He said that even without that ingredient the fuel seems to work perfectly in a hot engine. He denied a story attributed to Enricht that the inventor had been held up and the gasoline tanks of his automobile emptied.

In part, the bill of particulars sets forth that Enricht intends to disclose his secret to the enemies of this country; that he proposed, prior to April, 1917, to dispose of his secret formula to Germany for $1,500,000, and that on Nov. 12 last he agreed to let it be sold to the United States Government for $500,000 cash and $5,000,000 a year for fifteen years, on condition that the allies of this country should not share in the use of the secret.

"On a date unknown to the plaintiff," is one of the allegations of the motor power concern, "Enricht fraudulently and traitorously entered into an agreement with the German Government, through spies and representatives now in the United States, under which agreement, for a large sum of money, Enricht agreed to withhold from the plaintiff all information of this ingredient until the expiration of the war."

Ingredient Added Secretly.

It is recited in the papers that a series of tests of the Enricht discovery have been taking place before the Automobile Club of America. One ingredient has been added surreptitiously by Enricht to his preparation in these tests, it is said, and when it was discovered, on Oct. 12, he refused to disclose its nature. All that is known of the stuff to the plaintiff, according to the papers, is that it is a concentrate to which the ingredient and 128 parts of water are added.

The defendant has twenty days in which to reply in the proceedings brought against him yesterday, but the plaintiff's lawyer asserted last night that should the charges in the papers already filed lead the United States Government to intervene and investigate on its own account, every assistance would be rendered by those who are attacking Enricht.

Enricht first heralded his alleged discovery about two years ago. It was ridiculed, but the inventor persisted, and finally interested various responsible persons, such as Henry Ford and Mr. Yoakum. Mr. Ford's interest apparently ceased, but after tests under the auspices of the Automobile Club of America had failed to disclose any fake in Enricht's product, Mr. Yoakum backed him heavily, and the $10,000,000 Delaware corporation which now sues Enricht was formed. An investigation of Enricht's past during the controversy over his 2-cent a gallon substitute for gasoline, led to the disclosure that he once had been indicted and fined $500 in Chicago in connection with land deals in which the United States mails were used. He filed a petition in bankruptcy in this city in 1910, and previously was involved in similar proceedings in Chicago. About five years ago a party of Englishmen invested in a scheme of Enricht's for making artificial stone, but dropped the venture, asserting that the sample submitted by Enricht had been misrepresented. Enricht, who is 70 years old, last night characterized the legal proceedings against him as "absurd," declared he was a patriotic American citizen, and denied that he had illicit dealings with the German Government.

BOARD WILL PUBLISH FOOD PRICES DAILY

Federal Body Also Will Take Up Market Conditions and Cost Agreement Violations.

The Federal Food Board at a meeting last night decided to publish daily the wholesale and retail price of foodstuffs. General market conditions are also to be considered by the board. John Mitchell, Chairman of the board, announced that George L. Bennett of the Bronx, a market expert, who was a member of the Mayor's Market Commission in 1913, had been named to prepare the reports.

In discussing violations of food price agreements, Mr. Mitchell said that it was the small retailer who was causing trouble in the present situation. "I am reasonably certain," he said, "that there is a State law which covers the retailer who does a business of less than $100,000 a year. If we can get at him legally we will urge the public not to patronize him."

Mr. Mitchell also said that reports of violations will be investigated by the Food Board here, and if a violation is discovered the case will be sent to the Department of Justice at Washington.

"If a holder of a food license violates the laws, the complaint will go to Washington with a recommendation that his license be revoked," said Mr. Mitchell. "But the case will be weighed thoroughly before any drastic action is taken."

"The question will not be thrashed out in court," said Arthur Williams, Food Administrator, "but will be decided indirectly by the Food Board here."

Nathan Straus yesterday urged the city to sell milk below cost to sick children and the aged poor.

"My milk stations are selling milk to the poor at less than one-half of what it costs me," Mr. Straus said. "If I can do this, why cannot the city do it also? The city should reopen the fifty-nine stations where milk was sold at a low price last summer, now that there appears to be another shortage coming. Infant mortality in the various hospitals has risen far above last year's figures. The sale of pure milk at low cost would check this tragic increase in the death rate. The city should send investigators up-state to reopen the dairies which were closed last year."

Health Commissioner Emerson, when told of Mr. Straus's statement, said that the city was still operating its fifty-nine milk stations and selling Grade A milk to the poor at 12½ cents a quart. He added that the city was taking steps to sell milk to the needy as rapidly as possible.

George M. Rolph of the International Sugar Committee announced yesterday that Dr. William Marshall, Professor of Mathematics of Purdue University, at Lafayette, Ind., had been appointed Chief Statistician and Comptroller of the International Sugar Committee.

The United States committee to handle the West India sugar transportation problem will soon open an office in 111 Wall Street, where the International Committee is now quartered. The Chairman of the West India committee will be Joseph Hodgson, Freight Traffic Manager of the New York & Cuba Mail Steamship Company. Distribution of the 1918 sugar crop of the West Indies will be handled by the two committees, working with other committees of producers in the West Indies.

The United States War Trade Board at Washington notified Mr. Rolph yesterday that licenses to export sugar from the United States were to be granted only when the application of the exporter had been approved by Mr. Rolph's committee.

Introduction of an ordinance providing that coal, when sold to the poor in small amounts, be weighed by the dealer by avoirdupois weight, was decided upon yesterday at a meeting between Fuel Administrator Wiggin, City Markets Commissioner Moskowitz and other local fuel administration officials. It is the hope of the fuel administrators that such an ordinance will check weight frauds in the sale of coal to the poor.

SEE NEW SWINDLE IN FUND FOR 69TH

Swann Causes Arrest of Man Who Solicited Funds as Friend of Colonel Conley.

BROKER FURNISHED $1,000

Prosecutor Says Prisoner Is One of "100 Per Cent. Boys" Sought in Bazaar Inquiry.

A swindling scheme operated in the guise of a "benefit fund" for dependent families of members of the "Fighting Sixty-ninth" Regiment, in which the swindlers made use of the name of the former commander, Colonel Louis D. Conley, to get $1,000 for division among themselves, was disclosed yesterday in the arrest of M. J. Delahanty of 547 West 123d Street, made by the District Attorney's staff, on charges of grand larceny and forgery. The money was obtained from Walter J. M. Donovan, a broker at 80 Broadway, a friend of Colonel Conley.

When Delahunty was taken to the District Attorney's office he confessed to his part in the transaction, Assistant District Attorney Kiroe said. According to a subsequent statement made to the District Attorney, Delahunty had paid $150 of the proceeds of a $1,000 check to a bookmaker, and the remainder, $850, he divided with another bookmaker, who enabled him to get a third bookmaker to cash the check after he had forged Colonel Conley's name to it.

Mr. Donovan, who lives at 276 Riverside Drive, was called on the telephone at his office, on Oct. 2, and a person at the other end of the wire said, it was stated:

"I am representing Colonel Louis D. Conley of the Sixty-ninth Regiment. We are raising a fund for some of the relatives left behind by the fighting boys. We want you to help out the families of our boys with a check. Will you do it?"

Delahunty confessed, Mr. Swann said, that he made an appointment with Mr. Donovan and received from him a check for $1,000 made out in the name of Colonel Conley. The fraud was not discovered until the check was returned in the broker's bank vouchers. The officers and members of the Sixty-ninth, who are now in the Federal service, had not authorized anyone to solicit funds for any purpose.

Mr. Swann said he expected other arrests of Delahunty's accomplices. "These are some of the '100 per cent. boys' we have been after in this investigation of crook solicitors for fake bazaars," Mr. Swann said. The District Attorney added:

"We have obtained a list of names of two gangs of fakers who have been imposing on the public in the guise of patriotism or charity."

Mrs. Lillian Louise Daniels, who has an apartment at 600 Riverside Drive, was called to the District Attorney's office to explain why she was collecting funds for the War Babies' Cradle. Mrs. Daniels told Mr. Swann that she had been authorized to solicit money by a man who had disappeared. The District Attorney then informed her that a complaint had been made against unauthorized solicitors for the fund by Mrs. J. S. Bache and other well-known women, who said Mrs. Daniels had not been authorized to act for them. Mrs. Daniels admitted this, and last night she returned and gave Mr. Swann $450, the amount of her collections for the War Babies' Cradle.

While the Grand Jury was considering evidence presented yesterday concerning certain features of the Army and Navy Bazaar, it was intimated by Mr. Swann that a number of other cases would be presented for its consideration. He said a great many fraudulently obtained checks were believed to have resulted in thousands of dollars in loot to the dishonest profiteers of war bazaars.

Eugene Jess, alias Jesselman, convicted and awaiting sentence for obtaining charitable funds fraudulently, confessed yesterday to swindling contributors in the name of the American Red Cross, Mr. Swann said. According to Jess, he received many contributions in the form of checks. These he sent to an attorney, he asserts, who sent them back to the makers with a request that they be made out in the name of "Mrs. Maud Shanley," a dummy. This woman, Jess added, he had introduced to prospective contributors as a "prominent society woman," but in reality she was the wife of a Harlem saloonkeeper. This woman, who was arrested with Jess, and who gave a different name at that time, is now awaiting trial as his accomplice.

"Old Doc" Waterbury, who the District Attorney says is out on a suspended sentence, has been invited to call and tell what he is doing with money he is reported to be collecting for a book to teach French to soldiers. Waterbury and two others, Mr. Swann declared, are taking donations or subscriptions for these books, so that a copy costing $1.50 each may be sent free to a soldier in the name of the donor.

"We think a book of that kind should not cost more than 50 cents, and we want to know if the books are being sent according to the amount of money subscribed," said Mr. Swann.

Dr. George O. Hanlon, Superintendent of Bellevue Hospital, and Oliver H. Bartine, Superintendent of Flower Hospital, with the co-operation of others, have sent a letter to Governor Whitman, outlining the needs of the hospitals, and asking legislative action for their protection in soliciting funds and the suppression of dishonest operators of fake charity.

SWEARS MEANS KEPT MRS. KING A CAPTIVE

Chicago Hotel Man Testifies Woman Was Virtually a Prisoner There for 3 Months.

COURT BARS PART OF IT

Defense Makes Hard Fight to Exclude Testimony as to Motive for Crime.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. C., Nov. 28.—Attorneys for Gaston B. Means, who is on trial charged with the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King, are making a hard fight to bal kthe prosecution in its attempt to set up a motive for the crime.

The prosecution produced as a witness today Willard J. Rockefeller, manager of a Chicago hotel, and sought to prove b yhim that Mrs. King was a prisoner in the hotel last Summer and under guard of Means and others. But Judge Clie ruled that Rockefeller might relate only such conversations as occurred in the presence of Means.

While the question as to the admissibility of certain parts of Rockefeller's testimony was being considered by the court, the jury was excused and the witness told the court what he would swear to. Rockefeller said that Means, Mrs. Means, their baby and maid, Mrs. King, Mrs. Melvin, Mrs. King's sister, and Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. King's mother, and W. R. Patterson, Means's father-in-law, were at his hotel from April until som etime in July, and that throughout that time Mrs. King was virtually a prisoner. When Means was not with her or where he could observe her, Rockefeller said, a man named Henry Deitsh, known about the hotel as "Means's bodyguard," constantly had her under surveillance, and care was taken not to allow her to talk to anyone unless Means was present, if it could be avoided.

On one occasion, he said, he had an opportunity to talk with Mrs. King and did converse with her several minutes. Mrs. King told him, he said, that she was completely under the influence of Means, and that he had entire control of her affairs, but that in a few months she was going to get from under his control and take charge of her own business affairs.

Rockefeller said that when Means learned of this he was very angry, saying to him, "Do you know how many rooms I have got here?"

"Ten," the witness said he replied.

"And every one of them will be vacated if you speak to her again," the witness testified Means told him.

He also said Means told him that he was "preparing to spring a will that would surprise the whole United States."

"I don't want any one to talk to her," Rockefeller said Means told him.

Roy Smith, an Asheville chauffeur, told of having driven Means and a woman, whom he thought, after seeing her in court today, was Mrs. Melvin, from Asheville to Morganton, N. C. He understood, he said, that the couple wanted to catch a train to Chicago. Smith could not say exactly when this occurred, but it happened before the preliminary hearing, he asserted. He testified he heard Means say during the ride, "How do the ladies feel about it?" and some time later heard the woman say, "I think we got out just in time." Means and Mrs. Melvin went to Chicago when Mrs. King's body was taken.

At the opening of the testimony the line of cross-questioning by attorneys for the defense indicated that they would seek to prove that Mrs. King was killed by the accidental discharge of a pistol dropped on the ground.

The State's first witness was M. F. Richie, a hardware merchant, who sold the pistol to Gaston Means. Richie admitted that the weapon might have been discharged by being dropped on the ground, but that he had never heard of such a thing happening.

Dr. P. R. McFadden, a local physician, and James Simpson, an undertaker's assistant, testified that they saw no powder stains near the wound on the back of Mrs. King's head, although both admitted on cross-examination that blood around the wound might have prevented their noting powder stains. Dr. McFadden also described a fracture of the ankle which it is contended Mrs. King received about the time of her death. It might have been caused by her stepping on a root, he said.

Captain W. S. Bingham, who was with the automobile party on the evening of the tragedy, said that as far as he knew Gaston Means and Mrs. King were alone when the woman met death.

Bingham went down the road to kill a rabbit, and Afton Means also went off a short distance. It arso was brought out on cross-examination that Gaston Means had extended a general invitation to several women of his family and also to Mrs. King's sister to go on the trip, but they had another engagement.

During an argument over questions regarding Afton Means's actions, E. T. Cansler, of counsel for the defense, declared he wanted to show what Afton Means had said and done, because "I think the State will try to show Afton Means guilty of complicity with Gaston Means in the killing of Mrs. King."

C. W. Andrews, a hotel clerk of Salisbury, N. C., testified that a "G. B. Means" and a "Mrs. James C. King" had registered at the hotel where he is employed on the night of August 18. The defense sought to show that Means and Mrs. King had missed train connections there while en route to Concord, and drew from Andrews the statement that C. B. Ambrose, of the Federal Department of Justice, had questioned him regarding the affair.

THREE POWERS AGREED TO PROTECT PALESTINE

Anglo-Franco-Russian Plan Revealed in Documents Made Public by Lenine.

MANCHESTER, England, Nov. 28.—The Manchester Guardian's Petrograd correspondent says that among the secret diplomatic documents published by the Leninite régime was one setting forth an agreement between Russia, France, and Great Britain, under which Alexandretta (Asiatic Turkey) was to be a free port and Palestine a protectorate under Russia, France, and Great Britain. Great Britain was to receive the neutral zone in Persia, except Ispahan and Yezd, which were to go into the Russian sphere.

"Another document, signed by General Poliyanoff, the former Russian War Minister," the correspondent continues, "says that a Russo-Rumanian military and political convention was concluded in August, 1916, giving Rumania Bukowina, the Banat, (in Hungary, between Marcs and the Danube,) and Transylvania.

"In this document General Poliyanoff says that in the event of Rumania's success she will become a powerful country, with a population of 13,000,000; that she will hardly remain friendly to Russia on account of the Bessarabian question, and will lessen Russia's influence in the Balkans.

"'In view of this,' General Poliyanoff continued, 'the collapse of Greater Rumania is an idea not against the interests of Russia, and the present condition of Rumania must be used to strengthen those ties by which she is compulsorily bound to us.'"

ADVISERS NAMED ON WAR TAX ACT

Untermyer, Payne, and Ballantine Will Help Commissioner Frame Regulations.

TAX ON STOCK TRANSFERS

Rules Not Yet Completed and Tentative Instructions Drawn Up, Operative Dec. 1.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. — Samuel Untermyer of New York, John Barton Payne of Chicago, and A. A. Ballantine of Boston have been appointed legal advisers to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in connection with the War Revenue act. They will serve without compensation. Their duties will be performed mainly in connection with the formulation of administrative regulations for the execution of the act.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Daniel Roper announced tonight that, owing to the pressure on his bureau in the work of analyzing the War Revenue act and devising and promulgating the many instructions for the administrative procedure under the law, it had been impossible to complete the rules governing the collection of the tax imposed by Sub-Sections 4 and 5 of Section 807, which affect sales and transfers of stock.

The work of the bureau has resulted in a tentative draft of regulations, which will soon be acted upon by Secretary McAdoo. As the law becomes operative Dec. 1, it is not unlikely that serious inconvenience to business and to the Government may result from want of information as to what the Government may require in the administration of the law.

The law imposes a tax on the total face value of shares of stock at the rate of 2 cents for every $100 or fraction thereof, whether the face value is greater or less than $100. This ruling is explained by the Commissioner's tentative regulations as follows:

"Thus where the total face value of the shares or certificates of stock involved in any such transaction, (agreement to sell or memorandum of sale,) is less than $100, the amount of such tax shall be 2 cents; where the total face value exceeds $100, but is $200 or less, the amount of such tax shall be 4 cents, and on all fractions of $100 of face value the tax shall be 2 cents. In the case of shares having no par or face value the tax shall be 2 cents on each $100 or market value or fraction thereof involved in the transaction, unless the total amount of market value involved is less than $100, in which case the tax shall be 2 cents on each share."

Every person, partnership, corporation, or exchange engaged in the brokerage business and negotiating the sale, transfer, or delivery of stocks will be required to file a statement under oath on the first day of December, 1917, and the first day of July annually thereafter, in the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district where such person or concern is doing business, setting forth the facts of the concern's business.

The regulations describe a number of transactions that are not regarded as taxable, as follows:

"No tax will be imposed upon an agreement evidencing deposit of stock certificates as collateral security for money loaned thereon, which stock certificates are not actually sold or intended to be sold, nor to which there is any change of ownership or interest, nor upon stock certificates so deposited.

"Nor upon transfer from a customer to a broker for purposes of sale, nor upon transfer by a broker to a customer for whom he has purchased said stock, provided that the transfers shall be accompanied in each case by a certificate setting forth the facts.

"Nor to transfers or deliveries to a clearing house for the sole purpose of clearing or adjusting accounts between the members, where no beneficial interest is vested in said clearing house, and there has been no change of title or interest.

"There shall be no tax upon transactions in which stocks are borrowed by one member of an exchange from another under rulings of such exchange, prescribed for that purpose, nor upon the return of said stock to the lender.

"No bylaw or rule of any exchange or similar institution inconsistent with the provisions of the act or these regulations shall tend to exempt any transaction from liability to taxation.

"In case an exchange shall by appropriate rules require that all transactions of its members in shares of stock on the floor be promptly reported, to the end that the stamp tax thereon may be collected, and no clearances, or settlements, or trading in mere balances as between customers and members, or as between members themselves, shall be permitted, then such clearing association shall be deemed the agent of the members of such exchange, and the Clearing House sheets delivered by the members of the exchange to the Clearing House shall be held to be the bill or evidence of sale, and the Clearing House shall be authorized to affix the requisite stamps to the Clearing House sheet and cancel the same, and retain said sheets for the term of two years.

"Every Clearing House shall, on or before the fifteenth day of each month, and at any other time designated by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, render, in writing, a return for the preceding month, or for any other period that may be designated by the Commissioner, of all facts in their possession relating to any and all such transactions.

"All exchanges shall require their members, patrons, or others for whom transactions are cleared, to make full disclosure, and report on each business day of all non-cleared and non-clearable transactions of the preceding day, and shall require that all such shares of stock shall pay the tax on each and every transfer thereof that is not made through such exchange or other agency.

"Any officer designated by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall have authority to examine the books, papers, and records kept pursuant to these regulations, and require the production of any other books, records or papers necessary to determine any liability to the tax."

MRS. DE VERGARA SUED.

Litigant Attaches Property of Mrs. De Saulles's Mother.

Supreme Court Justice Donnelly granted an attachment for $6,000 yesterday against the property of Mrs. Blanca Errasuriz De Vergara, mother of Mrs. Blanca De Saulles, in a suit to recover this sum brought against Mme. De Vergara in behalf of William C. Dewey of 105 East Fifteenth Street for services rendered. The suit is brought in the name of William H. Lotty, to whom the claim has been assigned. The attachment was served on the Anglo-South American Bank of 60 Wall Street, in which it is said the defendant's funds are kept.

The petition for the attachment, granted on the ground that Mme. De Vergara is a non-resident, states that Dewey was engaged by the late John L. De Saulles and his mother-in-law in 1911 to assist in liquidating the affairs of the Sociedad Chilena de Fundaciones, a Chilean corporation, owning mining and smelting property in Chile. Dewey alleges that he worked on the proposition from February to July, 1916, and that as the result of his efforts the property was bought for 1,000,000 pesos, or $200,000, more than best previous offer for which Dewey the best previous offer, for which Dewey $6,000.

Dewey states that he had a talk with Mme. De Vergara in November, 1916, when she told him she had authorized De Saulles to engage him in the interest of her family, and that as she was going to Europe she would leave matters entirely in his hands. He names as defendants not only Mme. De Vergara but all her daughters with the exception of Mrs. De Saulles.

gan be located from the surface, but was in her case so withered that no sign of it could be found.

Says She Had Hallucinations.

On Aug. 10, when Dr. Wight visited her again, he said that she was suffering from hallucinations. At one time she asked him he said:

"Can my husband take the child away from me?"

He said that he then told her that her husband was dead, but that it made no impression on her. He explained how he had given her strychnine and other stimulants and had begun a course of treating her with thyroid extracts to increase the activity of that gland, after the completed diagnosis showed it to be the seat of the trouble. On cross-examination District Attorney Weeks asked:

"Will not sufficient doses of the thyroid extract cause hallucinations?"

"You have answered that question yourself."

"What do you mean?"

"When you say 'sufficient' to cause hallucinations. Anything will be caused by something sufficient to cause it."

"Will large doses of thyroid extract cause hallucinations?"

"Sometimes they do."

Mr. Weeks asked if the appearance in the X-ray picture of a broken bone jutting into the brain could not have been caused by the shadow of a vein. Dr. Wight said that veins did not produce shadows in X-ray pictures and that nothing but the bone itself could have made such a picture in an X-ray photograph.

When Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe was on the stand, Justice Manning sought for the benefit of the jurors to get a clear explanation of the mysterious thyroid glands. Dr. Jelliffe said that the glands, working too freely, caused excessive growths or activity of one kind or another, while inert glands resulted in a decrease of every kind of bodily activity and finally in death. He said:

"They are the cause of goitres among the people in Switzerland and other countries when they are overactive. You cannot live without these glands. When the Swiss found out that these were the cause of goitre, they began cutting out the glands. They found that in a few weeks the patient began to make quick, nervous, jerky gestures and to display other symptoms, many of them similar to those displayed by this patient. A few days later they would die. When it was followed that death regularly followed the loss of these glands, the Swiss physicians began to cut out part of them, and this was effective. We owe our knowledge of the functions of the gland largely to their research in cases of goitre."

Dr. Jelliffe said that, when he was called into the case he was called, not as an alienist, but as an expert on nervous diseases for a diagnose. He said that Dr. Wight gave him no information at all about the symptoms or history of the patients. He gave a list of symptoms which he found, most of them the same as those recited by Dr. Wight. But he added some others. He said:

"Her skin was cold and hard. When I pinched it it was like rubber. The pupils were sometimes dilated and sometimes contracted, but they responded very slowly when a match or candle was passed before them, which should in a normal person caused the pupils to narrow rapidly. The tongue was almost double its normal size.

"The skin of the hands was cold and hard, and of the same rubbery consistency. The back of the hands were rather puffy and swollen. When I touched the nerve trunks there was some soreness, showing a mild neuritis.

"I drew my thumbnail over the skin of her arm and a white trace appeared. This appears in the skin of a normal person and the white trace disappears in four or five seconds, but in her case it was succeeded by a red mark, which remained for half an hour, showing instability of the blood vessels.

In a Hypothyroid Condition.

Dr. Jelliffe added that she had colds in the head without any seeming cause which would have disappeared in three hours. He described numerous other symptoms. He said that her morbid physical characteristics all indicated a growing loss of function of the nervous system and of control over the muscles. It led him to believe, he said, that she was in a hypothyroid condition, and when he searched for the thyroid gland he could not find a sign of it. After that, he said, he advised Dr. Wight to treat her with the thyroid extract, which is made from the thyroid glands of animals.

Dr. Jelliffe said that he sought to make mental test of the young woman on this visit, but that she would refuse to answer him and would say: "Go away; don't bother me."

On Nov. 9 he said that he saw her again and found her much better. Most of the symptoms he had described had disappeared or been greatly improved under the thyroid extract treatment. To test her mind, he said that he talked of composers, painters, and novelists. He said:

"We had a delightful conversation. She was bright and attractive."

He said that the only mental symptom which he noticed was that she became easily fatigued. He said:

"I spoke in very long sentences, with a great number of clauses, after the German method, where you find the verb on the next page."

"Would she follow you?" asked Justice Manning.

"Up to a certain point, but she would ask me to stop and to talk in simpler sentences."

Dr. Jelliffe said that the depression on the skull had not changed, and that, when he touched it, she flinched and goose flesh appeared on her arms.

Dr. Louis C. Johnson of Long Island College Hospital told in great detail of the various tests of the blood and other organs which he had made for the purpose of discovering whether her condition was due to anaemia, kidney trouble, or disease of the thyroid glands. He said he found her kidneys normal, her blood in fair condition, except for evidences of thyroid trouble. Her pallor and other symptoms, he said, made her a "typical picture of a hypothyroid condition," and he advised at once that she should be treated for this. He agreed with the other physicians that thyroid disease affected the brain and eventually might cause complete insanity and death. He said that when he first saw her, Mrs. De Saulles was on the borderland of an extremely dangerous thyroid disease.

Suzanne Monteau, the maid, who accompanied Mrs. De Saulles to The Box on the night of the shooting, was one of the last witnesses. She added to the scene a new detail, by saying that, before Mrs. De Saulles shot, her husband raised his arm as if to strike her. She said that De Saulles had said:

"You can't have the boy now or ever."

An "Awful, Dreadful" Look.

She added that this statement was accompanied by an "awful, dreadful" look. She said that Marshall Ward, a friend of De Saulles, whose story of the shooting is very different from hers, had run upstairs just before the shooting took place, and could not have seen it.

"Was his back to her when she shot?"

"No; he was facing her. He was looking right at her. She shot him three times in front and, as he turned, shot him twice more."

The maid said that Mrs. De Saulles had told the chauffeur that she wanted him to take the short cut to The Box, and to make all possible speed. The maid said:

"She said she wanted to reach The Box before her husband got back from the club."

The maid raised her arm as if to give a blow, and declared that De Saulles had threatened his wife in similar fashion just before she shot him. She said that he was only about three feet from Mrs. De Saulles when she fired. She denied that her mistress had said afterward that she had killed De Saulles. Asked how Mrs. De Saulles behaved after the shooting, she said:

"She acted sort of mad."

On cross-examination she was asked if she meant to say that an athlete like De Saulles would have made no effort to protect himself, when the revolver was held only three feet from him.

"He only raised his arm," she said.

"Why did you go into the living room of the De Saulles house?"

"I went in to get the baby."

"Did you get the baby?"

"No." The maid was sobbing.

Mr. Weeks tried to get her to say that she did not enter the house at all, but she insisted that she walked into the hall and into the sitting room after her mistress.

Mrs. Annalla Errazuris, a rosy and athletic young woman, with bright black eyes, testified that she had been responsible for the first fracture of her sister's skull, because she had chased her about their house at Vina del Mar until Blanca tripped and fell heavily, her head striking against an andiron. The accident kept her in bed for several weeks, she said. She added:

"Blanca was never the same afterward. She could not keep up with the rest of us at games and play."

"Did you ever feel your sister's head after the accident?"

"Yes, there was a very tender spot there and a depression."

Miss Errazuris said that she had been present at a discussion, shortly after the marriage of De Saulles and Blanca, when the question of turning over the management of the entire estate to De Saulles was considered. She said that De Saulles wanted to have charge, not only of his wife's, but of his mother-in-law's property, and that he became very "ugly" when this was refused him. She was asked:

"After Blanca returned to Chile in 1915, did you notice any change in her?"

"She was greatly changed. She was emaciated and very pale."

She told of the accident in 1915, when her sister was thrown on her head from an automobile. She said that for a long time after the accident her sister's entire forehead was purple. Passing on to her arrival in this country in the Summer of 1916, while the divorce proceedings of Mrs. De Saulles were pending, she said that she had been shocked at the physical condition of her sister.

"She was so ashy white that I did not recognize her."

She said that she and her brother took Mrs. De Saulles to Scotland for her health at this time, but she did not improve greatly because of her worry over her child. When she returned to this country she became worse, the sister said, because of the fear that the affections of the boy were being won away from her. She said:

"The boy would come home late from his visits to his father, and would always be naughty. When we asked him why he was bad he said that 'Booby,' (the nurse hired by the father,) had told him to be bad with us."

She said that the boy had told him De Saulles also had encouraged him to misbehave. She said that the boy told repeatedly of being at gay parties where his father entertained "beautiful ladies."

Miss Errazuris said that in Chile women frequently carried revolvers. She said that she did herself. She identified the revolver with which Mrs. De Saulles had killed her husband, and handled it like an expert. She contradicted the testimony of Captain Jones, the Police Department expert, who said that it was necessary to use two motions in firing the revolver, that of pulling the trigger and that of pushing the safety catch on the handle. She said:

"You don't have to use two motions. Pulling the trigger presses the safety catch against the hand, and that is all that is necessary to fire it."

D. Stewart Iglehart of the firm of W. R. Grace & Co., who married a Chilean girl who had been a schoolgirl friend of Mrs. De Saulles, told of being asked over the telephone by Mrs. De Saulles on the night of Aug. 3 to accompany him on her trip to The Box. He said:

"She told me that she was very anxious about her boy, and that she was afraid that some accident might have happened to him, because he was kept so much over time. She said she had learned that the boy had been put to bed, and that the father would not return from the Meadow Brook Club until after 9 o'clock. She asked me to go with her to get the boy, but I said that it was too delicate a matter for me to intervene. I asked her to come over to dinner before she went, but she said she was in too much of a hurry, and had called a taxi, and would go right after the boy and bring him back."

The trial will be resumed on Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

VOTES TO DISMISS BROOKLYN TEACHER

Committee Says Miss Ross Gave "Advice Contrary to Spirit of the Draft."

SHE DENIES THE CHARGE

Resolution Adopted to Ban Teaching of Foreign Languages in the Elementary Schools.

The Elementary School Committee, of which Dr. Ira Wile is Chairman, will recommend to the Board of Education at its next meeting on Dec. 12 that Miss Fannie Ross, a teacher in Public School 88, Queens, living at 84 Pulaski Street, Brooklyn, be dismissed. Miss Ross was placed on trial before the committee on Tuesday, and yesterday she was found guilty of having given advice to people contrary to the spirit of the draft. It was charged that, while acting as a registrar in the State census, Miss Ross gave gratuitous advice outside the line of her duty to persons who asked for instruction in regard to the answering of questions.

The committee stood four to one for recommending the dismissal of Miss Ross. The committee's report was not made to the Board of Education yesterday, because, according to Dr. Wile, it was thought best to wait until some matters of policy had been cleared up by the hearing to be held on Monday before the High School Committee of the three De Witt Clinton High School teachers who have been suspended on charges.

The formal charge against Miss Ross was made by District Superintendent Edgar D. Shimer, on evidence furnished him by persons who swore as to the statements they heard Miss Ross make. Miss Ross denied the inferences drawn by those who heard her remarks. Miss Ross is the first teacher whose dismissal has been decided on by a school board committee. It is understood that the investigation into the loyalty of teachers in the elementary and high schools will continue, and that, as soon as any are found who have been guilty of disloyal or seditious utterances, they will be called up for trial.

Miss Ross entered the service of the Board of Education on Nov. 2, 1914, and had charge of a class of seven-year-old children. She was not charged with having made any disloyal statements in her class.

Teachers Charge Prejudice.

Herbert C. Smyth of 15 Wall Street, counsel to Thomas Mufson, A. Henry Schneer, and Samuel Schmalhausen, the three De Witt Clinton High School teachers, yesterday made an answer to the charges against his clients. He declares that they allege that John Whalen, Chairman of the High School Committee, has made certain statements "which show that he is prejudiced against the teachers and that he has prejudiced the case, and is, therefore, ineligible to participate in the trial." The answer was sent to Assistant Corporation Counsel Charles McIntyre, who is handling the case for the Board of Education.

Mr. Smyth said that before consenting to take the case he had taken great pains in several interviews to sift to the bottom any foundation for these charges.

"It was only because I became convinced that each one of them was a patriotic American, wrongly accused of dastardly insinuations, that I felt it my duty to attempt their defense and vindicate if possible their Americanism," he said.

Mr. Schmalhausen is accused of failing to criticise a letter written by one of his pupils attacking President Wilson in such a way that the pupil would be led to perceive the gross disloyalty involved. His attorney's reply is that his client was made aware of the letter two weeks after it had been written, and that he was handed the letter when Dr. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools, interviewed him. He further says that Schmalhausen made marginal notes indicating in no uncertain terms his utter disapproval of the views of the writer.

Boys' Vigilance Committees.

In some of the public schools in Brooklyn patriotic American boys have banded together as Vigilance Committees to punish any lad of their schools who insults the flag or otherwise shows disloyalty. A day or two ago a teacher in one of the primary schools discovered that a written paper was being passed from hand to hand among the children of the class. He found that the document contained the following declaration:

"To all the boys of the class who are loyal to the flag—We, the undersigned, loyally promise to beat a boy known by the name of ..... for the heinous offense of insulting the American flag. He was heard to say that he would wipe his nose on the American flag. It is an offense unpardonable. Henceforth, every day, except he be sick, he will have to pledge his allegiance to the American flag. If he doesn't, he will be beaten by the smallest boy in the class until he does. Hereto signed and loyally signatured."

The signers of the proclamation were prohibited from committing the threatened breach of the peace, and, with that, the principal of the school, viewing it as a case of youthful zeal outstripping judgment, considered the incident closed.

A loyalty pledge signed by the twenty-four District Superintendents of Schools was read yesterday at the meeting of the Board of Education.

Would Drop Foreign Languages.

The Committee on Study and Text Books, of which Professor Franklin H. Giddings is Chairman, adopted a resolution asking the Board of Superintendents to make a report to the Board of Education on the proposition of eliminating from the elementary schools the study of all languages other than English. While German was not singled out for elimination specifically, nevertheless, affirmative action on the resolution would bear most strongly against that language, for 90 per cent. of the pupils studying foreign languages in the elementary schools are studying German. The other languages are Italian, French, and Spanish.

Professor Giddings, speaking only for himself, said it was foolish to have any other language than English taught in the elementary schools.

"New York has such a miscellaneous population that it seems to me that in the elementary schools we ought to concentrate on the language that is the language of the country," he said. "Teaching foreign languages in the lower grade schools does not really amount to anything and entails a big bill."

President William G. Willcox of the Board of Education said he has been in favor of removing the study of foreign language from the elementary schools for a number of years. To eliminate the study of German in the elementary schools would leave fifty-two teachers of that subject without employment. The Board of Education expends $65,000 annually for teaching German in the lower grade schools.

A pledge of loyalty to the Government was unanimously adopted yesterday at a meeting of ninety-seven teachers of Bushwick High School.

The Board of Education decided yesterday that the daily sessions of classes above the second year in the elementary schools shall not be less than five hours nor more than six hours. In the time allowed for physical training will be included twenty minutes each day, or 100 minutes each school week, for going to and returning from school.

Principals of public schools were authorized to receive membership fees of 25 cents each from pupils who wish to become members of the Junior Red Cross. President Willcox announced that on next Monday the Federal Government would begin a thrift campaign by the issue of $5 war saving certificates and 25-cent war saving stamps.

SOCIALIST ALDERMEN ANNOUNCE PROGRAM

Declare Intention to Fight for Municipal Surface Lines, Lights, Ice, Milk, and Coal.

JOIN HANDS WITH TAMMANY

Program Calls for More Schools and Less Work and Fewer Hours for the Teachers.

The seven Socialist members of the new Board of Aldermen will go into office on Jan. 1 with a definite program and intention to work for socialistic measures which may be introduced in good faith by other members. The primary interest of the Socialist group, according to Algernon Lee, head of the Rand School of Social Science, who has been chosen Chairman of the delegation, is in the high cost of living and the school question. They will start a fight at once for municipalization of the trade in milk, and probably other articles of food, in coal, in drugs, and in ice. They will demand more school buildings and more teachers. They will favor municipal ownership of the surface car lines and of the electric lighting plants, if the scheme proposed for such a step should seem to be drawn with an eye to the interests of the city and not to afford undue profits to the private companies which would be bought out.

It is not the position of the Socialists that they must wait for the possibility of complete socialization of the City Government, or that they shall refuse to support measures of modified socialism if the Tammany majority attempts to carry out the pre-election promises of municipal ownership. "I knew that this program would cost money," said Mr. Lee. "Whether public utilities could be purchased and private distributing companies in the milk and ice trades, for instance, could be bought out without going beyond the city's constitutional debt limit is hard to say. It might be necessary to try to get State legislation authorizing certain extensions, and it might not. In any event there would have to be bond issues and increased taxes; but I believe the program would be worth it to the people on a purely financial basis because of the decrease in the cost of living that it would bring about. In any event, we do not promise municipal ownership, more schools, and lower taxes at the same time.

Will Decide Each Case Separately.

"It may be said that a delegation of seven members in a board of seventy-nine will not have much power. But we represent the Socialist vote, which was about one-fourth of the total cast in the city election. I think that fact will be borne in mind by the leaders of other parties in considering the Socialist measures proposed, as well as the fact which is generally accepted that Tammany put the municipal ownership plank into its platform because the leaders foresaw the drift to socialism.

"We are going to start in with our own proposals for the realization of our program. We recognize that it is very possible, if not probable, that the same things will be proposed by other parties. Our attitude toward these measures will depend on our judgment of the individual cases. Most certainly we are not going to refuse to support something that we regard as a proper step because it was proposed by somebody else, but we are going to scrutinize all other moves in the direction of municipal ownership, and shall make sure that they are workable schemes submitted in good faith. If they are put in by way of camouflage we feel pretty sure that the support of genuine measures of the same sort by a vigorous Socialist group will bring public opinion to demand genuine action.

"We want the city to take over the trade in food, coal, ice, medicines, and sickroom supplies. Many of these, such as the milk and coal distribution, are already pretty well centralized in private hands. We do not propose confiscation. We should probably favor buying up the existing private distributers at a fair valuation of the physical properties, and I don't think we should stand out against a certain additional sum by way of consolation to the men who are going out of business if this were found the most economical way to get the thing done. But this doesn't mean that we should favor a big price which would give unjust returns to the owners. In most of these businesses—milk especially—there is no great amount of fixed capital invested, and a fair physical valuation, with something additional, should not be a price that would bankrupt the city. If an economical price should not be agreed on the city should enter the field as a competitor, and because it would not be operating for profit it could quickly drive the private companies out of business.

Could Pay the Farmers More.

"The public would thus take on the function of middleman, and deal directly with the co-operative societies of farm producers in the milk business, which I take as an example. The possibility of doing away with the present enormous private profits would make it feasible to give the farmers more than they are getting now and reduce the cost to the consumer. And I feel pretty sure that if the cities go to the farmers with a proposal of this sort, while the farmers as individuals might be inclined to look at their own immediate maximum profit first of all, the organizations of farmers would act in a liberal human spirit, and would have intelligence enough to realize that it was better for their own interests not to play the hog.

"This view is not based on theory alone. I have had some opportunity to make observations among farmers of the State, and I feel pretty sure that this is the attitude they would take. This belief is further supported by the experience of dealings between co-operative organizations of farmers and municipal distributing agencies in the Scandinavian countries, especially in Denmark.

"In the coal business, of course, we should be dealing with large and wealthy corporations, but the possibility of elimination of the middleman's profit ought to make it possible to reach a satisfactory agreement even there.

"As to the municipalization of traction lines and lighting systems, we are in favor of the idea and shall support honest attempts to bring it about. But we are certainly going to be on the lookout for schemes which have for their chief purpose the enrichment of the present traction trust by giving it a chance to unload unprofitable lines at a big price.

"With regard to the school system, we feel that the present overcrowding of the school buildings and the school teachers must be relieved. The best element among the teachers is not asking for more money, though they need it, just as everybody else needs it. The most solid protest from the teaching body has been against the increased hours of work; the teachers claim that if their hours are prolonged it merely means that they cannot do as good work as they are doing now. There is no point in increasing the quantity of teaching per teacher and decreasing the quality.

"The best Socialist opinion, and this is particularly true in America, favors the policy of proceeding step by step and getting what you can when you can. This is our policy. We are going to propose these measures. If anybody else proposes them we shall make sure that there is no joker in the move, and if there is none we shall presumably give it our support. The Socialist Aldermen will follow the policy of Socialist Congressmen and Assemblymen in reporting from time to time to public meetings in their districts on the questions before them and their position on these questions."

WARNING AGAINST FORGER.

Used the Name of a Former Times Reporter to Victimize a Hotel.

The public is warned against a man falsely representing himself to be an employe of THE NEW YORK TIMES, who cashed a forged check last week for $50 at the Garden City Hotel. This man, who is described as being about six feet tall, of dark complexion, wearing heavy gold-rimmed glasses, presented a check on which he had forged the signature of Henry A. Uterhart, counsel for Mrs. Blanca De Saulles, who is on trial at Mineola, a short distance from Garden City. The forger signed himself "L. M. Brown," adopting the name of a former TIMES reporter, now an army officer attached to the headquarters of Major Gen. Bell.

CALL FOR INQUIRY INTO MITCHEL FUND

Legislature May Be Asked to Learn How $1,274,689 Was Spent on Campaign.

UNTERMYER OFFERS REMEDY

Wants Contributions Made Public Before Election and Limit Put on All Gifts.

A legislative investigation of the campaign expenditures incurred by the Fusion Committee in its abortive attempt to re-elect Mayor Mitchel is a distinct probability. This became known after Samuel Untermyer had made public a statement in which he described as "scandalous" the situation revealed by the financial statements of the various organizations behind Mayor Mitchel's candidacy and urged legislation to make such vast expenditures in future Mayoralty campaigns impossible.

The plea for a legislative investigation was first voiced at Albany on Tuesday by Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara, who was head of the legislative committee which investigated the Public Service Commissions. In the course of the investigation he had Mayor Mitchel as a witness and questioned him at length regarding the wire tapping episode, the dual subway contracts and other activities of his administration. Senator Thompson said he believed the statement filed with the Secretary of State by the Mitchel Fusion Committee did not cover all the expenditures made for the Mitchel campaign. This was before the City Publicity Committee had filed its statement acknowledging expenditures aggregating $415,165.

The demand for a legislative investigation was echoed in this city yesterday afternoon by a prominent Democrat who occupies a position of influence in the Senate. He declared that if the subject was brought up before the Legislature by some Republican, the Democrats would throw their united influence behind the proposition. Moreover, he expressed the opinion that if the Legislature should undertake to enact legislation along the lines suggested in the Untermyer statement, an investigation such as Senator Thompson suggested would be a necessary preliminary step to enable the lawmakers to ascertain the precise character and extent of the abuses against which a statutory check should be provided. The legislation suggested by Mr. Untermyer in his statement followed these lines:

1. That no loan be made or contribution be accepted within five days of an election, and that all loans and contributions be disclosed in detail before that time.
2. That no individual be permitted, directly or indirectly, to loan, expend, or contribute more than a given sum.
3. That every individual contributor of more than $500 be required to make a separate report under oath.
4. That it be made a crime for any person to contribute otherwise than directly and in his own name.

Mr. Untermyer in his statement pronounced the provisions in the present election law governing campaign contributions "puerile" and "mere makeshifts."

"The scandalous situation revealed by the returns of campaign expenses in the late municipal campaign calls for immediate attention at the hands of the Legislature," said Mr. Untermyer. "The expenditure of the stupendous sum of $1,300,000 by one political faction in the city election is disgraceful, and indefensible. It is a scandal of the first order which, in normal times, would focus public attention. No such sum could possibly have been used with honest intent. It is about ten times as much as was expended by its successful adversary, receiving double the number of votes, and about 140 times as much as was spent by the Socialist Party, which received about the same number of votes. Incidentally, the result is a great tribute to the intelligence and incorruptibility of our electorate.

"All three candidates covered the same field and there was no honest reason for such a glaring disparity in expenditures. Most national campaigns have cost each of the great parties less to cover the entire country, including the expenses of the enormous country-wide advertising, traveling expenses, for speakers scattered over the land and the other innumerable and inevitable burdens of such a campaign.

"Imagine the outcry that would have gone up from the press of this city if the Democratic organization had dared perpetrate such an outrage. Yet I have not come across a line of editorial criticism. If there is anything to be said by the way of defense, it will make interesting reading. Everything that Judge Hylan charged as to the malign forces behind the Fusion campaign has been more than justified by this partial, tardy, and amazing disclosure. If the facts had been made known before the election, as they should have been and would have been under the Federal law, the Fusion candidate might have himself comfortably counted his votes before the evening of the election was over.

"In that connection, it may be recalled that I directed special attention to this situation during the campaign, and suggested that the Democratic organization would disclose its contributions one week before election, provided the Fusion managers would do the same, but the challenge was consistently ignored."

The expenditures so far reported from Albany since the statements of campaign contributions and expenditures have been on file in the office of the Secretary of State, include the following disbursements by organizations enlisted in the Mitchel campaign:

Fusion Committee	$373,995
City Publicity Committee	415,165
Public Welfare Committee	57,500
City Democracy, Manhattan	75,750
City Democracy, Brooklyn	60,540
Mitchel League	13,424
Woman's Committee of One Hundred for Non-Partisan Government	13,251
Total	$1,209,625

In addition to this the Prendergast Committee, enlisted for the re-election of Controller William A. Prendergast, filed a statement of campaign expenditures aggregating $38,895, and a similar committee working for the election of Robert Adamson as President of the Board of Aldermen acknowledged expenditures of $29,090, bringing the total of Fusion expenditures, according to these statements, up to a grand total of $1,274,689 for the unsuccessful campaign made on behalf of the city candidates on the Fusion ticket, barring any duplication that may be involved through the disbursements by some of the lesser committees of funds received from the coffers of the Fusion Committee itself.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan was asked last night if he had any comment to make on the expenditures of those engaged in the attempt to re-elect his unsuccessful opponent on the Fusion ticket. "No," said Judge Hylan, "I do not care to make any statement. Let the dead rest."

Members of the Fusion Campaign Committee of 1917 refused yesterday to comment upon the statement of Samuel Untermyer regarding campaign expenses. William Hamlin Childs, who was Chairman of the Executive Committee, said:

"I have nothing to say regarding Mr. Untermyer's statement. Our own statement setting forth the campaign expenditures in detail speaks for itself."

Mayor Mitchel was not at the City Hall yesterday.

HYLAN GETS DELAY IN BUS HEARING

Board of Estimate Puts Matter Off Until Its Regular Meeting.

CONNOLLY OF QUEENS AIDS

Refuses Unanimous Consent and Fifth Avenue Company's Franchise Bid Is Held Up.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan, through a representative, took a hand yesterday in the proceedings before the Board of Estimate regarding the question of setting a date for a public hearing on the application of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company's bid for a franchise for additional motor bus routes. Mr. Hylan's representative was Cornelius M. Sheehan of Brooklyn, who said he appeared on behalf of the Mayor-elect. Frank Moss also appeared, but on his own account, so far as anyone else knew.

The meeting was one adjourned from last week, and was called to consider authorizing advertising, setting Dec. 28 for a public hearing on the Fifth Avenue Coach Company's bid for franchise extensions. Mr. Sheehan, Mr. Moss, and Borough Presidents Connolly of Queens and Van Name of Richmond, both Democrats, objected to the present board taking any action on the franchises whatever, and suggested that the matter be left to the incoming administration to deal with. As a result of their opposition, no action was taken yesterday, the matter being laid over until the regular meeting of the board, on Friday.

"I appear as the personal representative of the incoming Mayor," said Mr. Sheehan when the meeting got under way, with President Dowling of the Board of Aldermen presiding in the absence of Mayor Mitchel. "This meeting today is practically a secret one. The knowledge that it was to be held was not possessed by the public. When I went to the office of the Mayor today the man at the door said that he knew nothing of a public meeting to be held here today. I request that this matter be put over for ten days."

President Dowling denied that there was anything secret about the meeting, whereupon President Connolly said:

"It does look a little irregular to hold a special meeting today, when our regular meeting is only two days off." When Borough President Mathewson of the Bronx assured Mr. Connolly that the meeting was an adjourned one, and not at all special, the latter added: "Well, this matter cannot come up today without unanimous consent and I decline to give my consent. This meeting may be all right, but it does not look so."

The Fifth Avenue Coach Company, which is a subsidiary of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, had submitted a new bid for newly laid out routes. The New York Motor Bus Company, its rival, had been invited to bid on the new routes also, but declined to do so "at this time." During the last four years the New York Motor Bus Company has made half a dozen propositions to the Board of Estimate and its withdrawal yesterday came as a surprise. It was stated that the company took the action because of the unsettled condition in the labor field, the uncertainties as to the cost of material and the time deliveries could be made. Mr. Sheehan wanted to know why the present board should take up a matter four weeks before it went out of existence when for four years it had refused to consider it.

"Do you consider," he said, addressing Controller Prendergast, "that after the people on Nov. 6 elected a new administration by an overwhelming vote the matter should be taken up at this time?"

I want to say to you as the accredited representative of the Mayor-elect," replied the Controller, "that, while the people did, on Nov. 6, elect a new administration, it has no constitutional right to take up matters until Jan. 1, and that the present board has the right and power to finish matters under its control, and it is important for the new administration to attempt to dictate to the present administration."

"No one has sought to dictate to the present administration," retorted President Connolly.

Mr. Moss, who did not say whom he represented, thought the attitude of the New York Motor Bus Company was a peculiar one, and needed explanation.

"Perhaps the importance of this motor bus franchise is not realized," said Mr. Moss. "I believe the franchise is very large, and that the rights the Fifth Avenue Company seeks are a great deal more valuable than either this board or the public understands. I think that the Interborough, through its control of the Fifth Avenue Company, is attempting to get this franchise for itself, and I further think that the falling down of the opposition is not understood. This question has held over so long, it can go over still further. If the advertising starts today, it will mean that there is some plan of the Fifth Avenue people to obtain a franchise in these closing days of the present administration."

HYLAN'S PROTEST WINS.

Changes in Tenement House Department and Courts Deferred.

Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, Nov. 28.—The State Civil Service Commission has deferred action on a proposed change in the classification of 107 places in the Tenement House Department and Municipal and Court of Special Sessions, against which Mayor-elect John F. Hylan sent a strong protest to Governor Whitman and to Colonel Gorham Rice of the State Civil Service Commission.

Colonel Rice sent this answer to Judge Hylan:

"Your telegram protesting against a proposed change in classification of certain positions in the Tenement House Department of New York City was received late yesterday afternoon. While the principle of selection for merit and fitness ascertained by competitive examination, which examination should include for such positions consideration of training, experience, and personality, meet my entire approval, I am inclined to feel that the present is not an opportune time to change from exempt to competitive the positions in question.

"I, therefore, supported in commission meeting last evening the motion unanimously adopted, that action upon the proposed changes in classification should be deferred."

HYLAN ASKS FOR DELAY.

Opposes Action in New York Central's West Side Ordinances.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan sent a letter last night to Frank L. Dowling, President of the Board of Aldermen, and Borough Presidents Connolly of Queens and Van Name of Richmond, urging them to prevent action by the Board of Estimate at its regular meeting tomorrow on a special report from the Joint Conference Committee of the Board of Estimate and the Public Service Commission, recommending to the Aldermen the repeal of all ordinances affecting the New York Central traffic on its west side freight lines. Judge Hylan has received information to the effect that a majority of the board members are committed to the proposal. Approval of the report requires an unanimous vote of the board.

There was the usual crowd of patronage hunters at the headquarters of Judge Hylan in the Business Men's League suite at 30 East Forty-second Street yesterday. In the crowd were teachers who had come to make suggestions to the Mayor-elect with reference to prospective appointments for the new Board of Education. A delegation representing the Interborough Teachers' Association urged the appointment of Mrs. Grace Strachan Forsythe, who was prominent in the agitation at Albany for the so-called Teachers Equal Salary bill. Mrs. Forsythe is now a District Superintendent. Another delegation of woman teachers representing the Teachers' Retirement Association and the Teachers' Interests Association came to oppose the appointment of Mrs. Forsythe and to urge that Charles W. Roselle, a teacher, be named.

Sheriff Alfred E. Smith discussed with Judge Hylan the prospective meeting of the new Board of Estimate, scheduled for Saturday, at which the members of the new board are to confer with District Superintendents and Associate District Superintendents regarding ways and means of eliminating the so-called Gary system from schools where it has been established without inconvenience to the teaching staffs and the pupils. Judge Hylan said last night that he was not committed to any definite plan.

MRS. BRANNAN TELLS OF JAIL TREATMENT

Asserts That Women Pickets Were Roughly Handled at Occoquan.

DEMANDS REMOVAL OF FLAG

Believes That Attempt Was Made to Break Prisoners' Spirit by Torture of Fear.

Mrs. Eunice Dana Brannan, wife of John Winters Brannan, President of Bellevue and Allied Hospitals, sent out last night, through the National Woman's Party, of which she is acting Chairman for this State, a signed account of her experiences in Occoquan prison, where she was confined for her picketing activities. Mrs. Brannan was brought back to this city a few days ago by her husband, after she had been made ill, it was said, by her treatment in the prison. Mrs. Brannan attacked the administration of the prison; demanded that the American flag no longer should fly over it, and asserted that the pickets had been confined under trumped-up charges of obstructing traffic, when, in reality, they could have obtained their release at any time by promising to stop picketing.

Mrs. Brannan said that she and her companions had been cruelly treated, and that last July, when sixteen pickets had first been committed to the workhouse, the plan had been "to break us down by inflicting extraordinary humiliation upon us." This, Mrs. Brannan added, had failed to stop the picketing, and then, she alleges, "the plan of terrorizing us was conceived and carried out to a degree that has not yet been told."

Continuing Mrs. Brannan said: "The plan last July, when sixteen of us were first committed to the workhouse, was plainly to break us down by inflicting extraordinary humiliations upon us."

Mrs. Brannan added that she and her companions were deprived of every decency of personal life such as combs and tooth brushes, and that only one piece of soap was allowed all the inmates of the dormitory. The head matron, she said, had emphasized the danger of communicable diseases.

"The plan of humiliation failed to stop our peaceful legal picketing," Mrs. Brannan added. "On Nov. 10 forty-one women of the National Woman's Party picketed the White House gates. Then the plan of terrorizing us was conceived and carried out to a degree that has not yet been told. The scene that took place in the reception room of the workhouse on the night of Nov. 14 was of incredibly infamous cruelty. Nothing that we know of German frightfulness short of murdering and maiming noncombatants could exceed the brutality that was used toward us.

"I saw three men seize Miss Burns, twisting her arms behind her, and then two other men grasp her shoulders. There were six to ten guards in the room and many others collected on the porch—forty to fifty in all. These all rushed in. Instantly the room was in havoc. The guards fell upon us. I saw Miss Lincoln, a slight young girl, thrown to the floor. Mrs. Nolan, a delicate old lady of 73, was mastered by two men. The furniture was overturned and the room was a scene of havoc. The whole group of women were thrown, dragged and hurled out of the office, down the steps and across the road and field to the Administration Building, where another group of bullies was waiting for us. The women were thrown down roughly on benches. I was thrown with four others in a cell with a narrow bed and dirty blankets. The chair was immediately taken out.

"The cell door opposite was opened for a moment. I saw Miss Lincoln and spoke across to her, 'Are you all right?' Instantly the guard appeared. 'Stop that,' he yelled at me; 'not another word from your mouth or I will handcuff you and gag you and put you in a straitjacket if you say another word.' Not a woman attendant was in sight. We were absolutely in the power of a gang of prison thugs. It was a night of most extreme terror. The guards clanged the barred doors and opened them upon us at their will, gave us or denied us water, jeered at me when I asked for a pillow or more water. No food of any kind was offered to us. There is no question that this time our jailors made the attempt to break us down by the mental torture of fear.

"I noticed one of the guards had a billy in his hands. There were idle matrons in the dormatories that might readily have been sent to the prison to look after us and ensure decent respect for us as women.

"At 11 o'clock Thursday our group came out fainting and ill—in a state of exhaustion and shock and indescribable stunning of every faculty. Added to this was my anxiety as to the fate of my companions.

"On this same day half swooning, I fell upon my knees in the doctor's office, where I had gone to ask to be allowed to lie down. I was in terror of another attack by the guards every moment. I could not sleep for fears."

Mrs. Brannan took a walk on Friday in the woods near the prison while, she says, an attempt was made to terrorize the women with bloodhounds.

"On our way back," Mrs. Brannan continued, "we heard the baying of hounds in the woods very near us. The matron said: 'You must hurry up, the bloodhounds are lose.' Miss Findissen asked: 'Would they attack us?' 'That's just what they would do,' she answered, and hurried us on faster. The baying grew louder and nearer at times and then more distinct as the dogs rushed back and forth. They were very close to us when we finally reached the sewing room."

"An hour after this," she added, "our counsel, Mr. O'Brien, was able to effect an entrance to our prison and to see us alone—the first blessed evidence that our friends could at last reach and protect us."

In conclusion, Mrs. Brannan said:

"If proof is needed that the Administration is behind the attempt to suppress our campaign for the Federal suffrage amendment, it can be found in the following fact. When Mrs. Morey and three others were giving their names at the desk Whittaker said to them, 'If you will promise not to picket again, I will release you at once. I will take you back to Washington in my own car, you need not pay your fines.' Yet people say we were arrested for obstructing traffic!"

CAT-AND-MOUSE REMEDY FOR HUNGER-STRIKING

Release and Rearrest of Suffragist Pickets New Washington Policy—All Now Out of Jail.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The release from jail yesterday of militant suffragists who went on a hunger strike as a protest against their imprisonment for picketing the White House was due to a decision of the local authorities to prevent them from becoming martyrs through hunger-striking. The authorities have decided to give a trial to the English cat-and-mouse system of dealing with hunger-striking suffragists. Under this system prisoners who starve themselves will not be kept in prison until lack of food endangers their health. No effort will be made to feed them forcibly, but after starvation has produced weakness they will be compelled to leave the jail.

The Police Court Judge has authority to reduce sentences imposed by him, and he will issue commutations to all hunger-striking suffragists when they have shown signs of extreme hunger. If they return to picketing they will be arrested again and sentenced to serve terms in jail, but will be released when their refusal to take food has begun to affect them physically.

All the suffragists not released yesterday were freed from jail today. They were Miss Amy Jungling of New York, Mrs. George Scott of Montclair, N. J.; Miss Maud Jamieson of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. U. T. Roberston and Mrs. R. B. Quay of Salt Lake City, Miss Dorothy Day of New York, and Miss Ella Findelson of Lawrence, Mass. They will remain in Wshington over Thanksgiving. It was said at the headquarters of the National Woman's Party that many of them were too weak to travel. Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia and Miss Rose Winslow of New York, who were the most seriously affected by hunger-striking, are at Sibley Hospital.

Miss Alice Paul, Chairman of the Woman's Party, who was released from jail yesterday, said today: "The victory of our hunger strike is complete."

She added that the suffragists were prepared to picket again whenever it seemed advisable.

COLUMBIA PATRIOTS GREETED BY BUTLER

President Sends a Letter to the 2,000 University Members in Their Country's Service.

Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, yesterday sent a personal letter to each of the 2,000 university members now in national service, in which he expresses Columbia's "special word of greeting and encouragement for those of her brave and stalwart sons who have given themselves to the service of the nation." President Butler read the letter at the Thanksgiving service which took place yesterday noon in St. Paul's chapel. It follows:

"At this Christmas season, when the good cheer and good will that should mark it are so sadly absent from the lives and hearts of millions of human beings, Alma Mater has a special word of greeting and encouragement for those of her brave and stalwart sons who have given themselves to the service of the nation, even though their lives be the sacrifice. No contest in which you could possibly be engaged can equal this one in moral significance. Everything which distinguishes right from wrong in public conduct, everything which marks off principle from expediency in national life, everything which draws a line between liberty and despotism, everything which removes human opportunity from the grasping hand of cruel privilege, waits for its safety, and perhaps for its very existence, upon your success and that of the noble men of allied nations who are fighting by your side on land and sea.

"Keep a stout heart, no matter how long the waiting, how severe the trials, or how nearby the danger. Life will not be worth living for any of us unless you win this war. Be assured that you are to win, for the whole moral and patriotic force of America is behind you. Columbia, intensely proud of her share in this struggle and of her notable contribution of men and service to its successful conduct, sends you this word of good cheer and encouragement. When this war shall have been righteously won there will be peace on earth for all men of good will.

"Thanksgiving Day, 1917."

"La Traviata" Repeated.

"La Traviata," having been given once at a Saturday night performance at the Metropolitan Opera House, was repeated there last night for the Wednesday subscribers. The cast was the same as upon the former occasion. There was nobody in it who came within measurable distance of Miss Hempel, the Violetta, for distinction in singing, although Mr. De Luca was in excellent voice, and sang "Di Provenza" in good style. Mr. Moranzoni conducted.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Leonard Mudie, at present in Laurette Taylor's company at the Liberty, has been engaged for the role of Gaston in Ethel Barrymore's production of "The Lady of the Camellias."

The new program to be offered by the Washington Square Players at the Comedy next Monday will be the first all-American bill that the Players have produced. The plays will be "The Girl in the Coffin," by Theodore Dreiser; "Neighbors," by Zona Gale; "The Critic's Comedy," by Samuel Kaplan, and a pantomime entitled "Yum Cha-ab."

The role of Annie in "The Star Gazer" is being played by Jennetta Methven instead of Sidonie Espero, as announced.

There will be no holiday matinee of "The Masquerader" at the Booth today, a special performance being scheduled for tomorrow afternoon instead.

The three plays on the first program at the Greenwich Village Theatre have been indorsed by the Drama League.

E. Lyall Swete, the English producer who came to this country to stage "Chu Chin Chow," will remain here to make other productions.

The graduating class of the present Plattsburg camp to the number of 115 will attend tomorrow night's performance at the Winter Garden.

Soldiers and sailors will be admitted free of charge at the benefit performance at the Strand Theatre tomorrow morning for the Seaside Home for Crippled Children. The performance will begin at 10 o'clock.

Several additional features appropriate to Thanksgiving will be incorporated into "Cheer Up," at the Hippodrome, this afternoon.

LAYS THEATRE SLUMP TO FALSE ECONOMIES

Lee Shubert Says the Public Should Aid Capital in Supporting the Government.

The current theatrical depression is attributed to false economy is a statement issued yesterday by Lee Shubert. Mr. Shubert declares that the note of economy was first sounded by Washington and was then taken up by the newspapers to such an extent that the present condition has resulted. His statement said:

"There is a slump in the theatrical business, and it is due to the false issues that have been raised in Washington and our daily newspapers. While there is need for conservation of food, coal, and other supplies, there is no reason why legitimate industries should be paralyzed.

"The theatrical enterprise represents capital, and, without capital, the nation would be in a sorry plight. It is capital which supports the Liberty loans and capital contributes to charities and other patriotic movements. Capital supports labor and gives employment to the nation's workers. If the industries representing capital are crippled, the Government will soon feel their loss.

"Business should be kept at a high pressure. The public should be discouraged from hoarding its money. Money hoarded in banks does the Government no good. While people should economize in certain measures, it is false economy to cripple industries that are supporting the nation. The theatres give employment to thousands of men and women, assist in raising the nation's war loans, and should have the public's support.

"This country has never before had so much money. Men and women are earning higher salaries than ever, and this money should be kept in circulation. I am in favor of economizing in the conservation of foodstuffs and other vital resources, but I firmly believe the public should patronize the theatres, for in doing this they are not only enjoying excellent entertainment, but are assisting capital in supporting the Government in return."

Rudolph Reuter's Recital.

Rudolph Reuter, an American-born pianist prominent in Chicago, who made his first New York appearance last season, played yesterday in Aeolian Hall. He made his program on independent lines, his most important number being Schumann's "Etudes Symphoniques." He played Mendelssohn's prelude and fugue in E minor, a book of Brahms's last fantasies, and a number of smaller pieces of a variety of interest. One of them was Busoni's "Sonatina No. 2," in which the pianist composer has been thinking along lines suggested by Schönberg, which are not pleasing to the listener, however sincerely Mr. Reuter played the piece. "Avalanche" is a new composition by one of Mr. Reuter's pupils, Bernard Dieter.

Mr. Reuter has a vigorous and a generally finished style of playing and a feeling for delicate tonal color. His technical equipment was ample in most of what he played yesterday.

THANKSGIVING.

Those old Pilgrims and Puritans whose Thanksgiving has passed as an inheritance to easier times often had, from the material or secular point of view, small reason enough to give thanks. "Our mercies" were often outnumbered by "our chastisements." Sometimes the women and the children, and the men, were cut off by mysterious diseases, by the pitiless Winters, when COTTON MATHER's ink-stand froze by the fire in his library; by hardship, by the rough labors of winning a living from a thankless soil, by tomahawks of "the Bloody Salvages." They fought not merely the Tawnies and the French, but the powers of Satan, as real to many of them as the Governor or the Selectmen. Did not a rattlesnake, the fit incarnation of Old Scratch, coil up on the steps of an Arminian pulpit to hear congenial doctrine?

They fought the Devil and the climate. They had their ideal, harsh and intolerant as it looks to us. They kept Thanksgiving as a symbol of gratitude to "the Father of Mercies," for what He was pleased to send of good or ill, for a narrow and toilsome life, for the accomplishment of their "pilgrimage," in their own rigid way and for immortal hope.

It is a strange turning from seventeenth-century New England to MAZZINI, but when he said that "Duty is the common collective faith," he wrote the faith of that New England as well as what he hoped would be "the faith of the future." It is the substantial union of Americans in that common collective faith that makes this Thanksgiving, with all its sombre contrasts as compared with those of careless years, a day of thanks for "blessings" infinitely higher than those of the full granary and the paths that drop fatness.

We have not been content to stand aside in shameful prosperity while the world's fate was in the hands of braver men. After long tolerance of German assault upon our rights, we have drawn the sword for them, and not for them alone. Either free nations or the monstrous German State as a machine for conquest must go down. We have come to the defense of our own freedom, to the rescue of the freedom of the world. We have come slowly, steadily, with growing determination and force. Our sacrifices have hardly begun. They cannot be greater than the stern, enduring spirit of a peaceful people averse to war, but iron in its resolve that armed, offensive, warlike despotism shall be smashed.

A nation is essentially an ideal, an abstraction. Well, we have a concrete nation, an actual union, and it is fighting for no fattening of the bodies and pocket, but for a great ideal, for justice, liberty, democracy. We were divided, much more than we realized. Compartments of nationalities were forming. Before the resistless tide of common patriotism and duty they have been swept away. We are one people, helping one cause. Many in origins, one in duty. The noblest school of common citizenship, the great university of discipline, courage, labor, sobriety, thrift for the country's sake, is open. In the trenches and factories, on the farms, in millions of homes, this co-operative patriotism, this communicative education in Americanism, goes on. Equality of civic duty broadens from the draft into all occupations and the common consciousness.

A graver thought, a broadening of the mind, sobriety of habit, industry, self-sacrifice, a warmer heart, a kinder hand, have been bred of the war. See what a generosity, a self-denial, what thought and labor for others prevails. In those successive services, Roman Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, that are held in Y. M. C. A. "huts" may be seen something of that religious tolerance which is but an indication of the larger social outlook, the breaking down of accidental barriers of position, "class," the welding together of differences that common duty brings. What keen, tolerant philosophers, what haters of humbug, what judges of men by what they are and do, not what they look or pretend, will "our boys" be who come back to us!

The peril and the suffering lie before. We shall be purified and strengthened by them, as our allies have been. More and more we shall put away the vulgar and the trivial. We shall put on the proud mourning that testifies to the dignity of human nature, equal to the supreme test. We shall work and fight and endure and conquer.

That the victory is for no selfish, material end, that it will be the victory of liberty and democracy, the close, we hope, of war for offense and dominion; that Americans are one in purpose and in hope; that the meanest among us gets some tinge of the great patience, resolve, and heroism of the hour; that at last America is American—these things, amid all this darkling spectacle of human destiny, amid ruined nations and sorrow infinite, are cause for thanks. We have turned our backs to childish things. Duty and honor, courage and labor, are better masters than pleasure and moneymaking.

THE FUSION CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

How in the name of the original Prodigal Son and of all the wasters and wastrels who in the history of man on earth have sought to dispute his title to pre-eminence in profligacy did the Fusion Campaign Committees contrive to spend more than a million dollars in the attempt to re-elect Mayor MITCHEL? When it was first whispered about that their expenditure had reached that sum the story was rejected as incredible, monstrous. But the statements filed with the Secretary of State show that the Fusion Committee spent $573,995, the New York Publicity Committee $415,-165, the New York City and County Public Welfare Committee $57,590, the City Democracy $75,730, and the Brooklyn Branch of that organization $60,540, the Mitchel League $13,421, and the Woman's Committee for Non-partisan Government $13,251, a grand total of $1,209,695.

To say that it is scandalous tells only half the story. The amount is stupefying, since it exceeds the sum spent by the Presidential Campaign Committee of any party in 1912 in the whole country, and is more than half the sum spent by the Democrats in the Presidential campaign of 1916. But conjectures fall limp and helpless in the attempt to determine how the money was spent. The natural theory of the enemy that it must have been spent in buying votes will be instantly rejected, for pride, if not conviction, affirms the belief that Mayor MITCHEL's vote, a little less than 150,000, is the irreducible minimum part of New York's voting population that wants honest, efficient government and wants to keep Tammany out of power. What were these activities of the Campaign Committees, so enormously costly and pitifully ineffective? The conclusion is forced upon us that money was spent in every foolish way that anybody about the Committee Headquarters could suggest, that methods of reaching or influencing the minds of voters, arousing their interest and guiding their decisions, were adopted that showed little intelligence or skill in the adaptation of means to the end. Probably we must attribute the waste and poor result to the enthusiasm and untrained judgment of amateur talent. The morality of the methods of the campaigners of the old time cannot be too sternly censured, for they were thoroughly bad, but they were not often open to the reproach of being both wicked and futile. ZACHARIAH CHANDLER's opinion of this performance would be interesting.

The Fusion Committees would have deserved blame, they would have received it, had they spent $1,000,000 even in the successful effort to elect a Mayor of New York City. Now they incur the censure alike of the moralist and the practical politician. Little has been said about it, but it has been perfectly evident since the election that the campaign managers had no real knowledge of what was going on. They did not know what the voters were thinking about, what they were going to do; they could not read the political signs and portents that should have been the subject of their attentive daily study. New York City had determined to go in Governor Kentish fashion against Fusion, reform, clean administration, decency in the city government, and it emphatically did that very thing. They are not to be blamed for the result. The electorate of the city came to the test and for reasons now very well understood it failed miserably. If the Fusion Committees had spent a billion they could not have averted the disaster. The chief cause for astonishment is that with their opportunities they did not earlier perceive the uselessness of their campaign methods and stop the extravagant outlay. If there is any moral at all in such a sorry business, it is that big campaign funds will not change the resolve of the voters when they have made up their minds.

MORAL AND MATERIAL BLESSINGS OF THE WAR YEAR.

According to official calculation, the farm products of the year total the amount which was thought inconceivable when it was mentioned as the sum of our war expenditures for the year. No land ever before produced twenty-one billions of farm values. These are taken at the "prices paid to producers Nov. 1." The increase over last year is equal to the total of the two Liberty Loans. The total is "more than the combined value of any two previous years."

It is Providential that these blessings are heaped upon a people worthy of them. It would have been a curse to the world if such power had been placed in the hands of a nation whose rulers have been ravagers and tormentors of humanity. As it is, America has the will and the moral elevation to place this unexampled treasure at the service of the world in its greatest crisis in history.

Comparable with the total of our annual increase has been our generosity. We have loaned to our allies, or put at their disposal, more money than we owed when our national debt for the establishment of national unity was at its maximum. Our manhood has submitted to the ultimate test of conscription for world service in better temper than it submitted to the summons for national service two generations ago. Our wealthiest have been foremost in reckoning profits as naught while the German threat persists. Our womenfolk have surpassed themselves in service and tenderness. Rejoicing over material prosperity is not so fit a text for the day as the use we make of it. No nation was ever richer than we, no nation ever better deserved wealth, because no nation ever was so lavish in a good cause.

The reason for saying these things is to arouse the country to what lies before it. There will be other years when less wealth is showered upon us. There will be years in which we must share the bread which now we are parting with for full price. Already our vanguard on foreign soil numbers more men than stood in the ranks at the decisive battle which enabled our nation to live. But we must expect greater Gettysburgs and greater Waterloos with ourselves antagonists against a greater enemy of the world than NAPOLEON. Such thoughts should subdue exultation over present conditions and prepare us for further service and sacrifice, which shall leave the world in no doubt what manner of men and women are we.

GOVERNMENT HELP TO RAILWAYS.

In what degree the troubles of the railways would be removed by Government operation may be judged from the fact that the troubles of the railways are so largely due to the Government's management of its own business. The congestion of the railways is not due to the exhaustion of the railways' capacity, but to the neglect of the Government to use them to best advantage. In six months this year the railways have moved more freight than in any entire year before 1907, when the last great congestion occurred. Since then the railways have had 350,000 cars idle at one time, showing ample provision for the future, barring such conditions as could not be foreseen, like the war. The Government has imposed upon a larger ordinary business than was ever known the movement of more than a million troops, and 150,000 carloads of freight for the cantonments. This alone requires for maintenance 75,000 carloads a month, and there is still to be reckoned the business in connection with the building of more ships than the whole world built in any year before the war.

All this is made preferred traffic, and there is collision of priority orders. No one competent to judge will say that the railways have broken down under the strain. The facts show that the railways have accomplished all but a miracle, and are now the world's most efficient transportation machine. The achievements of this year are equal to the addition of 5,000 locomotives and 360,000 cars at a time when they were unprocurable and were of priceless worth. Somewhere there must be a limit, but Government operation may be at least deferred until the railways have reached it.

There is nothing strange about the Government's demands that its traffic shall be moved first. All shippers want that. The farmers did not like Mr. HILL's methods of railroading because he would move freight only in trainloads, and would not back an engine and car up to each farmer's barn at demand. Government operation would not do that for the Government. Everything cannot be moved first, and the job of deciding what shall fill the first cars does not belong to the railways at all. It is easier to make priority decisions than to fulfill them, but the trouble is more in the decision than in the movement. The Priority Board, with a railway man at the head, does not issue these conflicting orders. They are issued in routine by various departments of Government and on business in widely separated sections. These orders put the traffic on the roads, and the business is not taken off the railroads' hands at destination. Priority orders focus in the East, where most business is moving, with the same effect as if a dozen men were trying to pass through the same narrow doorway. It can pass them all, but they must take their turn.

The roads in other sections have least of this business and are making most money. The Eastern roads have most of this business, great congestion, and are making little money or none. In their argument for an increase of rates they told the Interstate Commission that their business would increase $161,000,000 this year, and their expenses $219,000,000. Yet the Commission seems to think that the roads ought to get their profits and upkeep from the increase of business. To the railways it looks as though their net would decrease 28 per cent. on the present volume, and would decrease more with more business of that sort. Government management is no remedy for such conditions, unless it means taxes for railway relief. The shippers have reached a frame of mind where they are willing to pay any rates just in time to learn that it is not a question of rates at all now, and that the business of some of them is not wanted on any terms. It would have been better for all if they had been sensible sooner. Then nobody would have had to be sorry, and the country would not face the danger of Government meddling with a machine of greatest delicacy and efficiency.

A WINTER OFFENSIVE.

A Winter offensive by the British and French on the Western front is said to have been decided on. The weather will be an important factor. In Flanders during a rainy season, such as occurs when the wind blows frequently from the northeast, the mud is so deep and sticky that the movement of big guns is impracticable, and even infantry find the surface of the soil heavy going. A Winter offensive on the line Ypres-Dixmude-Nieuport cannot be contemplated with any faith in favorable conditions; the British soldier has his opinion of water-logged Flanders, and it inspires masterpieces of profanity.

Even in Picardy, a rolling country, mild Winters bring too much rain to suit an enterprising commander. Underlying the surface is a stratum of mixed chalk and clay; when well soaked it has a glutinous quality where anything once stuck is extricated with difficulty. But in dry, cold weather Picardy, in which are Cambrai and St. Quentin, is a fine country to campaign in. Further southeast, where the French line takes a swing into the Vosges country, the Winters are likely to be severe, and deep snows must sometimes be reckoned with.

If Marshal HAIG should be blessed this season with the kind of weather in Picardy that fell to his lot in the midwinter of 1917, January and February, a constant hammering at the Hindenburg line would be practicable, and he would have no great trouble with his transport. Artillery, ammunition, and rations could be moved forward at the heels of his infantry. Last Winter, after the ground hardened, he gave the Germans little rest, and before March their retreat to the "Hindenburg line" began. Unfortunately for his plans, "the Summer of 1916," says Professor RAOUL of the University of Grenoble, "was unusually damp and rainy, and the Autumn simply abominable." That is why the four months' battle of the Somme stopped short of complete victory, although great things were achieved. The glue of the Picardy valleys gave the demoralized Germans a respite in November. But early in January HAIG started his battering ram again in the Arras sector. On Jan. 6, to the southeast of that place, he broke through their works on a front of 2,000 yards and reached the third line of trenches. HAIG's airmen darted about like swallows. Four days later the British made 1,500 yards east and northeast of Beaumont Hamel, and by the end of January all of the high ground was in HAIG's possession, and he had crossed the Beaucourt valley. In that month 1,228 prisoners were taken.

In February the Serre spur was occupied, the summit of Sailly-Saillisel ridge carried, and works on the left bank of the Ancre, near Grandcourt, taken. On the 24th airmen reported that the Germans were retiring. The British actually walked into positions at Pys, Miraumont, and Serre. The fact was the enemy's line on the north side of the Ancre had been turned. In February the British added 2,133 prisoners to their tally. Their offensive was pressed in March. Chaulnes and Bapaume were captured on the 17th, and the next day Péronne and Mont St. Quentin. Even when bad weather set in on the 20th, the British cleared the enemy out of fourteen villages in their advance south of Arras. April found them advancing against the line St. Quentin-Cambrai-Douai, the French co-operating so effectively on the south that they cut the La Fère-St. Quentin - Cambrai - Valenciennes Railroad, a supply line to the enemy's works on the Aisne. In fact, all through midwinter and the early Spring the French were hardly less active and successful than the British. Their vigorous campaign lasted well into April.

With as good luck in weather, the Allies in the Winter of 1917-18 should be able to keep in countenance the military experts in Washington who predict that the offensive will go on with accelerated vigor, and outrun the achievement of January-April of the present year, which blazed the way for the battle of Arras and the Champagne offensive of General PETAIN.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

American Tact Displayed.

That real information can occasionally be elicited from prisoners of war by their captors is a fact, of course, but always their statements must be received with caution and interpreted in full appreciation, first, of the captive's natural inclination to better his own condition by saying what he knows will be pleasant hearing, and, second, his equally natural inclination to give to the enemy as little of real and valuable information as possible. These two motives are in direct conflict, and in different degrees, according to the prisoner's intelligence and character, he yields to the one or the other or effects a compromise between them.

The Germans have thought it worth while to send out, and the British have forwarded to us, the real or pretended remarks made by the first Americans taken on the western front in answer to inquiries why the United States went into the war. Well-informed Germans, if any there be, need no information on that point, but it is probable enough that the officers into whose hands these men fell would ask such questions, and not improbable that the Americans would answer about as reported.

One of them, the dispatch stated, mentioned the submarine warfare as the decisive reason, another referred to the treatment of Belgium as thought by us to have been "rather bad," while a third declared that we were helping France out of gratitude to LAFAYETTE. All of this the Germans evidently liked, but none of it made them at all wiser than they were before. Our men, therefore, can be credited with having performed well the difficult task of seeming to be frank and obliging, when in reality they were reticent, and though the answers as they stand would win no prizes over here as full presentation of the American position, they will not be held on that account to prove either the ignorance or the stupidity of those who made them.

Perhaps what the whole incident makes more clearly manifest than anything else is that the Germans are thinking it judicious to treat our men, when prisoners, not with a special severity, but with a special kindness. The reasons for that are not hard to discover, and certainly love is not one of them.

His Mistake a Lesson in Reprisals.

In the "contributors' column" of the December Atlantic a curious story is told—a story sent to the editor of that magazine by a Belgian officer, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology now in his own army after seeing service with the Canadian forces. He tells of the constant harassing by aerial raiders of the Channel ports near where he is stationed, and of one such attack that was a really notable achievement.

"As a rule," he writes, "no military damage is done and the casualties are mostly civilian, and that makes the horrible part of it. * * * However, sometimes mistakes happen. Lately, by moonlight, a German 'plane saw a column of troops on the road; he successfully dropped two bombs, killing twenty-nine men and wounding forty-one. It was a fine shot, all the more so that the column of troops were German prisoners being led back from work." And the editor's correspondent adds quietly: "The British gave them a nice military funeral, with all their German prisoners made to attend."

The advocates of "reprisals in kind" may well ponder this episode. It is not at all likely that the aviators of the Allies could ever be any more nearly sure than was the German in this case that the target at which they aimed was of military importance, and therefore legitimately to be destroyed if inanimate or killed if living. The emotions of the prisoners who attended the funeral of their countrymen, victims of a mistake that was most horrible, from their point of view, can be imagined. Equally easy is it to imagine the emotions of the civilian inhabitants of the French or Belgian city, as they, too, watched the ceremony and compared it with others that had marked the burial of women and children who had met a like fate in previous raids.

Presumably the German airman, on returning to his camp, made a proud report of his achievement, and probably he received for it another decoration or title. He had done his best to earn it.

New Rules for New Conditions.

There is no obvious or easily conceivable reason why the Lodge bill, permitting American soldiers taking part in the European war to accept medals and other marks of distinction offered to them by foreign Governments, should not become law. It has already passed the Senate and is now on the House calendar.

Our long-standing prohibition of such acceptances originated and persisted because of conditions entirely unlike those now existing. Its motive was partly the American dislike of titles and of putting a few men permanently in a class by themselves. Partly it arose from a feeling that service to another country, by which alone such distinctions could be earned, was or might be open to suspicion as disservice to this country. Now the unexpected has happened. Americans are fighting side by side with foreign soldiers on foreign soil, and what they do is as much for our allies as for ourselves.

When the Allies are moved to recognize by bestowing a cross or a ribbon the debts thus incurred, to take is as honorable as to give, and none of the ancient jealousies and antagonisms will be excited in any American minds that have advanced with the times and realize that the proprieties of yesterday may be the absurdities or the discourtesies of today.

There is no doubt that men, and American men not less than others, do value highly these marks of appreciation and respect. And well they may. The intrinsic worthlessness of them makes them the more precious. Among ourselves we long ago departed from the stern disapproval of the fathers when confronted by honorific insignia in their opinion incompatible with the equality of man to man they sought to establish. Equality now has for us a meaning different from what it had in the revolted Colonies, and we have come to know that alliances are not always and necessarily "entangling."

ART NOTES.

An unfortunate error was made in sending out the notices of the lectures to be given at the Brooklyn Museum during the exhibition there of the Brooklyn Society of Etchers. The dates of the lectures were transposed and the society asks the aid of the newspapers in correcting the mistake. The following is the correct announcement: On Dec. 8 a lecture on "Some Classic Etchings" will be given by William M. Ivins, Jr. On Dec. 15 a demonstration lecture on "Various Etching Processes" will be given by M. Paul Roche. While the latter will interest the comparatively small group of people who seek information concerning the technical side of etching, a very large number of persons are concerned with the more general subject, and it would be a pity if any of these were to miss what is certain to be a brilliant as well as a learned talk.

HOMES FOR SHIPBUILDERS.

Federal Aid Called For as a Necessary War Measure.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Public opinion should be aroused to an important question now pending before the Government, that of providing adequately for the housing of the new employes of shipyards, munition factories, etc., which are now being developed in different parts of the country where adequate housing facilities are not available.

The Council of National Defense, through a sub-committee, has reported favorably on the matter of the Government undertaking the building of such houses; but action by the President and Congress is necessary, and they should be made to feel that public opinion will be behind the Government in undertaking the radical policy of carrying on such work, hitherto always handled by private capital.

At Newburg, N. Y., where the writer, as President of the Newburg Shipyards, Inc., is engaged in building steel ships for the Government, there is an acute shortage of houses. In the next two months we shall require 2,000 more employes to man properly our shipyard, and there is not a vacant house in Newburg in which to put them. The same conditions, or worse, are present at many other shipyards and munition factories, and represent a very serious problem to the proper conduct of the industries.

The work that private capital is doing to build these houses should be supplemented by prompt Government aid. England met a similar situation last year by appropriating $50,000,000 for Government housing projects. At least $100,000,000 is needed immediately in America for the same purpose, and public opinion should urge action by the President and Congress. Entirely apart from its humanitarian aspects, this will be a war measure of the utmost importance.

Teachers' Loyalty Declarations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The teachers of this school, desiring to counteract the popular impression that many of the high schools are centres of sedition, have without exception, and of their own volition, signed the accompanying statement of loyalty:

Whereas, This nation, now engaged in war, requires for its welfare the unified effort and steadfast loyalty of all its citizens, we, teachers of the Girls' High School, recognizing the responsibility of our position as guiders of the youth of the nation and molders of public opinion, do hereby affirm our unswerving devotion to the democratic principles and ideals involved in the prosecution of the war against Germany and our whole-hearted support of our Government in this great world crisis.

WILLIAM L. FELTER,
Principal Girls' High School.
Brooklyn, Nov. 27, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a communication sent from the Boys' High School recently concerning the declarations of loyalty circulated by teachers of this school, the statement was made that Michael Kurz, a teacher of this school, was the only member of the Faculty who refused to sign any of the three declarations. It is only fair to Mr. Kurz to state that he was willing to sign the first and second parts of the declaration, and he has since done so, but takes exception to the last. The failure to sign in the first instance was due to a misunderstanding.

Farmers Lack Help, Not Patriotism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent editorial you gently chide the farmer. You suggest that he needs something of the quickening spirit of patriotism. "Already," you say, "we hear that disappointment with the results of this year's crops will curtail the acreage of planting and sowing," and you add, "That is a false note in the general harmony of striving."

If there is a prospect of reduced acreage in crops next year, which I cannot deny, it is lack of help and not lack of patriotism that is the difficulty. The farmer's help has been gradually drained away from him during the last few months.

At this moment, with snow flying, there is all through this section unfinished farm work. There are potatoes yet undug. Two weeks ago there were field beans not pulled and others still lying on the ground that should have been housed a month earlier. There are fields of corn unhusked that will remain in the field and take no little damage through the Winter. Corn stalks, worth half as much as hay for cattle feed, are left in the field unbound because labor cannot be had to put them into the barn. Young apple trees are left with grass growing about their roots, with the great hazard of their destruction by mice. What is perhaps more to the point, there are everywhere pieces of ground in grass or sod that should have been surely plowed this fall for next year's crops.

The plain truth is, there is unaccomplished work on nearly every farm; in fact, it has become a matter of selection as to which needed work may be best left undone, for want of labor to do it.

Thus it is, I think, in the Eastern States. As for the Western States, I spent the Summer in North Dakota, where I am farming, and can state from close acquaintance with the subject that but for the half to total failure of crops in Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota there would not have been men enough to take off the crops and plow the land back for next crop.

The prospect for a shortage of farm labor for the coming season is alarming and is worthy the most serious consideration.

Without attempting to discuss the remedy, I may say that it must largely lie in the release of man-power from unnecessary business, including municipal undertakings of every kind that can wait.

THANKSGIVING, 1917.

Our fathers' God, to Thee we come
A nation veiled—in sore distress—
To thank Thee for our harvest-home,
Our fields of plenty, Thou didst bless.

Hold this our land, so fair and dear,
Upon the path our fathers planned.
Thy justice rule—Thy truth be clear
In honor rooted let her stand.

We thank Thee for her noble sons,
Whose courage, bravery and pride,
Defying steel and storm of guns,
Bring them in millions to her side.

They battle for her liberty,
So ready with the awful price
(On land, in air, or on the sea)
Of their young lives as sacrifice.

We thank Thee for her womanhood,
The mothers, daughters, sisters, wives,
Who "do their bit" in hero mood,
While o'er their hearts the war-god drives.

We thank Thee for our leader brave
Who holds aloft the Stripes and Stars,
And bids us help the world to save
For Righteousness—and from all wars.

Our fathers' God, to Thee we pray,
In faith and hope we lean on Thee.
"Let Thou our strength be as our day"—
Guide Thou our land to victory!

CABINET MEMBERS VOICE THEIR THANKS

Send Messages to the Country and Its Defenders on Their Spirit of Unity.

ALL FORESEE VICTORY

Secretary Lane Declares He Gives Thanks Because We are a Nation Unashamed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Official Bulletin, which is published by the Committee on Public Information, prints in its issue tonight Thanksgiving sentiments from all the members of the Cabinet except the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of Commerce.

Acting Secretary Sweet of the Department of Commerce contributes in place of Secretary Redfield. Every page of the bulletin contains one of these expressions. Secretary Wilson telegraphed his from San Francisco, while Secretary McAdoo placed his on the wire in New York. The editor of the bulletin did not fail to let his readers know that the publication was receiving special dispatches.

At the top of the first page of the bulletin over an extract from President Wilson's Thanksgiving proclamation, which precedes the title head, is the following in large type:

"Cheering Thanksgiving Messages to Americans at Home and Fighting Forces Abroad from the President's Cabinet are in this issue."

Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, contributes the following:

"If we measured our national blessings by the materialistic standard of physical comfort and prosperity, which has been in recent years so potent in our thought as a people, the observance of Thanksgiving Day this year might seem almost a mockery, for we are engaged in the most destructive and terrible war of all times. But a new conception of national blessings has come to the American people, a conception in which the spiritual is exalted above the material, in which the life of the nation is placed above the life of the individual. No greater blessing could have come to the republic than this awakening to the fact that patriotism is more to be prized than wealth and that the loyal service and self-sacrifice of a people are the only sure protectors of national existence.

"When we consider that thousands of stalwart young Americans, inspired by love of country and by a deep sense of duty, are today in the trenches or near the battlefront in France, and that thousands upon thousands of others are in the camps in this country making ready to do their part in the struggle against the enemy which menaces our liberty and the liberty of all mankind, we ought to be grateful to the Supreme Being that so splendid a spirit of devotion animates our citizens and stands guard over our national life.

"Who ever feared that, as a people, we had given ourselves over to selfish materialism need no longer fear. Material interests are submerged beneath the tide of patriotism which has swept over this land, and which has found its fullest expression in the indomitable spirit of those who have gone forth to fight for their country wherever duty calls.

"This is a time when we as a nation should give thanks to the Almighty for having revealed to us the spiritual blessings which are ours. He has blessed us with knowledge that the soul of the nation has been put to the test and has not been found wanting; that the people of this great land are united and patriotic, and that they have consecrated themselves to unselfish service with a supreme faith in the righteousness of their cause and in the God Who rules the destinies of nations."

Glorious Service to Mankind.

William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, sends the following:

"For the first time in more than fifty years Thanksgiving Day finds America at war. In this chaos of civilization the power of America was needed to tip the scales in favor of freedom and democracy as against the enslavement of the world, which would inevitably follow the triumph of military despotism.

"Terrible as war is, and fearful as are the sacrifices it entails, nothing is comparable to freedom and liberty. For thousands of years suffering humanity has been striving for the goal of freedom and democracy. Today that goal has been only partially won. It never can be secured until the last remaining stronghold of military despotism in the world is destroyed.

"Germany, under the Kaiser, not content with threatening the civilization of Europe, finally sought to destroy America. For more than two years, while we were scrupulously observing our treaty obligations with Germany, the Kaiser was secretly plotting against our security and subtly undermining America's vital rights. Not alone was the safety of democratic institutions in America challenged by the Kaiser's aggressions, but the very life of our people, and the ideals for which we have always stood, were imperiled. We had to fight to save ourselves and to secure the national integrity. In accomplishing that we are bound to destroy Kaiserism. When we shall have performed this great service to humanity and the world we shall have liberated it from the fear of future wars, and we shall have brought immeasurably nearer the day when Christ's divine message, 'Peace on earth, good-will toward men,' will be realized.

"Grim and terrible as is the task before us, let us thank God on this Thanksgiving Day, in nineteen seventeen, that noble America, faithful to her traditions, the undaunted champion of democracy, has been called to perform this great and glorious service to mankind."

Baker Cheers the Army.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, writes:

"I am glad to take advantage of the opportunity which the Official Bulletin gives to send a word of appreciation and good cheer from the men of the War Department who are in this country to the men who are now in France.

"We are striving our hardest to send them, promptly and plentifully, the material things they need as they take their stand by the side of the gallant men who, for so long, have been holding the battle front for a world that shall look forward and not look backward.

"But we know that vitally important as equipment may be, the fight will be won by the stout hearts of men, and the message from our hearts to their hearts is one of confidence and trust.

"'Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just.'"

"Freedom for Humanity."

Thomas W. Gregory, Attorney General, says:

"Nearly a century and a half ago our forefathers, hungry and poorly fed, clothed, disciplined, and armed, gave, when needed, their all to try whether liberty could live undefiled by license; whether, after all that wise men had said, free self-government could exist. They dreamed and labored, and real freedom and free institutions were born. Today you battle that these may not die, but may live on and reach untold millions who now live under the blight of despotism. Be thankful on this day of thanksgiving that yours is the high honor to save freedom for humanity. If you do this your children, and your children's children, will bless and revere you; you will be known among the great ones of history until freedom is blotted from the world; succeeding generations will envy you. Be men, strong, brave, courageous, willing and able to preserve what your fathers won."

Albert S. Burleson, Postmaster General, wrote:

"Our Thanksgiving holiday is like many other good things—of New England origin. It came into national use during the civil war. The people of the United States in the celebration of this festival now have special cause for returning thanks to the Almighty Ruler of the universe for the many blessings He has showered upon us. While Europe, Asia, and Africa are ravaged by war, no foe has invaded our country, our cities have not been destroyed, and our people go about their business and live in peace, in plenty, and in security.

"After every honorable effort had been exhausted to avoid it we were thrust into the world's war. In the van of allied nations we have entered into the contest. We have met the crisis unselfishly, patriotically, and nobly. Our sons, true to the traditions, ideals, and standards of their heroic fathers, are mustering on the battlefields of Europe.

"Upon us has been imposed the burden of supporting the unoffending, struggling allied nations of Europe in this momentous contest. We are the granary of the world, the arsenal of our friends, and the banker of every nation which on its own soil and in its own homes fronts the cruel, remorseless foe who seeks their destruction and the subjugation of the world. In this holy war we fight to preserve liberty, democracy, the laws of nations, the usages of civilized warfare, and the blessings of Christianity.

"The people of the United States have at last awakened to national consciousness. Sectional lines, policies, and differences which in our previous history hindered and plagued us have forever disappeared. The past is behind us. Its animosities have been buried with it. They will never be invoked hereafter save by noisy disappointed politicians and traitors. This beneficent result justifies our sacrifice and to the Divine Author of all things should be returned our grateful thanks."

"Spirit of Bunker Hill."

Franklin Lane, Secretary of Interior, contributes this sentiment:

"I cannot give thanks for war, nor for the method that men make war, nor for the turning of the minds of men from things constructive to things destructive; but I can give thanks that this is a nation unashamed; that the spirit of Bunker Hill and Santiago is still quick and aggressive; that men are willing to die that liberty and justice may live; that we are not to see free peoples of the earth humiliated or crushed; and that fear is not to master the world."

"United in Devotion to Freedom."

William B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor, sent the following from San Francisco:

"I have traveled through the most diverse parts of the country and come in contact with every variety of our citizenship—the rich and the poor, those who have sprung from old English stock, as well as naturalized citizens who have come to us from the different lands of Europe, including the Central Powers. In the midst of all this diversity of place and people, behind all differences, I find a common and complete devotion to this country and an unquestioning devotion to the aims of freedom and democracy which are the purposes of this country behind the war.

"The ultimate sacrifice is made by those at the battle front, and readiness to make that sacrifice arouses the gratitude of the whole country. Those at the front must be supported by those at home in farm, field, mine, and factory.

"The whole nation must dedicate itself, and as the issue between freedom and authority is clearly drawn I find evidences on all hands that the whole nation is rising to its responsibility and dedicating all its resources, material as well as spiritual, to the successful prosecution of the war, and to the realization of those ideals for which we have entered upon it."

From Secretary Daniels.

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, says:

"We are thankful to have discovered what some doubted before the war.

"1. That we have many youthful Nathan Hales in this generation who regret that they have only one life to give for their country.

"2. That the spirit of 'Don't give up the ship' actuating men in the navy today gives us many Lawrences, who meet death with little thought of self, but deep concern for their country.

"3. That the people of the United States are justified in their faith in the soldiers and sailors and marines who are of the same stuff as the men whose courage made Bunker Hill and King Mountain and Yorktown and Lake Champlain meccas of patriotism.

"4. That all America is mobilized and all true Americans have highly resolved to make every sacrifice that may be demanded for the sway of liberty and freedom in the world, where neither the autocracy of crowned heads nor entrenched privilege can deny the right of all men to govern themselves.

"5. That men and women hold fast to the faith of the fathers and that this faith enables them to count not their lives dear unto themselves, but girds them with endurance and willingness to cheerfully make the fullest surrender to secure the only peace that can abide—the peace based on justice between men and between nations.

"6. That out of the tragedies of war blossom the flowers of generosity, love, and brotherhood, ennobling national ideals and consecrating national character.

"7. That a spiritual vision has come to our countrymen enabling them to see that American valor is adding a new glory to our humanity so we can behold the better days, which will be ushered in only by those who, hating war and coveting no foot of land, battle in the spirit of him of whom Tennyson sung:

* * * He needs must fight
To make true peace his own.
He needs must combat might with might
Or might will rule alone.

PAYNE ESTATE $32,000,000.

Ex-Standard Oil Officer Had No Stock in Company at His Death.

The estate of Colonel Oliver Hazard Payne, which was estimated at $90,000,-000 at the time of his death, on June 27 last, was appraised yesterday at $32,-367,174. The report disclosed that, although Colonel Payne was for many years an officer of the Standard Oil Company, at the time of his death he did not own a share of stock of any company affiliated with the Standard Oil Company. The bulk of his securities, valued at more than $20,000,000, was in stock of the American Tobacco Company and its subsidiaries.

The share left to Payne Whitney, the favorite nephew of Colonel Payne, was appraised at $3,951,427, of which $3,714,-043 was a sixth interest in the residuary estate. Harry Payne Whitney, also a nephew, got only the Turner painting, "Corpus Christi Procession, Place of St. Marks," appraised at $125,000. Payne Whitney received only one-tenth of the estate of his father, the late William C. Whitney, while Harry Payne Whitney received half the estate, $21,-000,000. Colonel Payne's large bequest to Payne Whitney was said to be due to the latter's attitude toward the remarriage of his father after the death of the first Mrs. William C. Whitney, sister of Colonel Payne.

The largest bequest under Colonel Payne's will went to his nephew, Harry Payne Bingham, who gets a total of $7,465,735, including a direct bequest of $2,000,000, a sixth of the residue, and collection of art objects and paintings. Two nieces, Elizabeth B. Blossom and Frances Bolton, and William Bingham, III, a nephew, all of Cleveland, each get a sixth of the residue, and one-sixth is divided between Dorothy Wyndham Paget and Olive Cecelia Paget of London, children of Colonel Payne's niece, Mrs. Almeric Hugh Paget. Colonel Payne left nothing to his niece, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, who got three-tenths of the estate of William C. Whitney, her father. Lewis Cass Ledyard received $100,000, and an equal sum went to Henrietta L. Morris and Mabel Weddell, cousins.

The charitable bequests aggregated $7,000,000, of which $1,000,000 went to Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland; Yale University, and the New York Public Library, and $500,000 each to Cornell University and Phillips Academy. Bequests of $200,000 each were left to St. Vincent's Hospital and the Jewish Orphan Asylum of Cleveland, and Hamilton College. Twenty-one employes in Colonel Payne's homes at West Park, Esopus, and in New York, received from $7,000 to $1,000 each, according to the length of time of their employment.

MARION CLEVELAND, BRIDE IN PRINCETON

Daughter of Late President Married to Wm. S. Dell of New York by Dr. Hibben.

MISS KRECH WEDS AVIATOR

Her Marriage to Oliver B. James Held in St. Bartholomew's—Post-Gilbert Nuptial.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 28.—Miss Marion Cleveland, daughter of the late President Grover Cleveland and Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and William Stanley Dell, son of William M. Dell of New York City, were married at noon today by Dr. John Grier Hibben, President of Princeton University. The ceremony was performed at Westland, the Princeton home of the bride, and was witnessed by only the immediate relatives and a few close friends of the couple. Miss Esther Cleveland, elder sister of the bride, is in France engaged in relief work for the blind French soldiers.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Princeton, class of 1916, and has been engaged in newspaper work. Until recently he was with the ambulance service in France, and was decorated with the French Cross of the Legion of Honor. Since his return he has attempted to enlist in the army, the navy, and the Marine Corps successively, and has been refused because of a defect in vision.

The couple will make their residence in New York temporarily.

Those attending the wedding were Richard F. Cleveland and Francis G. Cleveland, brothers of the bride; Mrs. Helen Sadman, her great-aunt; William M. AMERICAN INHERITS A TITLE.

Frank C. Cooper Also Hears He Gets a $500,000 Fortune.

Frank C. Cooper, head of the information bureau in the District Attorney's office, was at work in the Criminal Court Building yesterday when he found a letter in his mail notifying him of his succession to an English baronetcy and that he had inherited an estate estimated to be worth $500,000. For the first time, too, he learned as he read the missive of the death of his brother, Sir Horace Cooper, which occurred six weeks ago in Devonshire, England. The letter was sent by attorneys for the estate.

"I am an American citizen, so I will have to pass up the title," announced Cooper. He did not believe the estate was as large as claimed under the old valuation. There were mortgages on some parts of it, he thought, and war conditions and taxes may have reduced its worth and income.

The only son of Sir Horace Cooper was killed at the battle of the Somme, which brings the title and estate to the New York man, who has a younger brother, Major Charles Cooper, Governor of the Western Soldiers' Home in London. Frank Cooper was a newspaper man when former District Attorney Jerome appointed him to his present position.

JEWISH RELIEF DAY CROWDS HERO LAND

Record-Breaking Audience Sees Spectacle in Which 300 Took Part.

TRIBUTE BY LORD READING.

Brig. Gen. White Reads Cable Message from Lord Chief Justice of England.

Jewish Relief Day at Hero Land was marked by the largest attendance last night since the big war benefit bazaar opened Saturday, and the crowd was said to be the largest ever in Grand Central Palace. The program last night was marked by a spectacular production, "On the Road to Victory," in which more than 300 persons, including many well-known actors and actresses, took part. The affair was under the direction of Mrs. Jacob H. Schiff. Many dinner parties were given in the five restaurants, which form a feature of Hero Land. Among those present was former President William H. Taft. In the midst of the big spectacle in Great Hall, Brig. Gen. W. A. White, head of the British Recruiting Mission, mounted the big stage built over the skating rink, and read a cablegram from Lord Reading, in which he said, "Hero Land should help the cause of liberty and justice, and has my entire sympathy."

"The message I have just read," said General White, "is from a man himself a Jew, the Lord Chief Justice of England. The Jewish race have found in Britain a country where they have been able to enjoy the privileges of citizenship and liberty for which the allied nations are now fighting. The Jews have proved themselves worthy of that liberty. America, like Britain, has given liberty to the Jew. The world knows that America is repaid by that same spirit of loyalty, devotion, and patriotism which Britain has received from the Jewish race."

Felix M. Warburg, Chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee of American Funds for Jewish War Relief, in reviewing the work in America for Jewish relief said in part:

"Our Jews have collected since the beginning of the war about $12,000,000. They have spent nearly $3,000,000 in Russia, $3,000,000 for the Russian population in Poland, more than $1,000,000 in Palestine, nearly $2,000,000 in Russian Galicia, nearly $500,000 in Turkey, and appropriate amounts in Greece, Serbia, Rumania, Tunis, Algiers, Morocco, Switzerland, France, and Spain—wherever refugees have been in sore straits."

The big spectacle last night was designed by Miss Margaret S. Crawford under the Entertainment Committee, consisting of Mrs. Schiff, Miss Irene Lewisohn, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. I. N. Spiegelberg, M. H. Hanson, Mrs. Eugene Lewis, Mrs. Otto Lowengard, Miss Harriet B. Lowenstein, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. Sidney C. Borg, and Daniel Frohman.

In the program in the afternoon Elsie Janis, Cosmo Hamilton, Olive Wyndham, Laura Hope Crews, Charles Cherry, Holbrook Blinn, Helen Gray, and others took part. Two acts from "Miss 1917," at the Century Theatre, were presented. Some of those who occupied boxes or attended dinner parties last night were:

Mr. and Mrs. James Speyer, Miss Julie Lentilhon, Miss Louise Edgar, Mrs Walter E. Maynard, Miss Harriet B. Lowenstein, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Mrs. J. D. M. Cardoza, Mrs. William Astor Chanler, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mrs. Samuel Porter Hopkins, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Miss Elsa Maxwell, the Italian Consul General and Mme. Dike, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Stern, Mrs. Theodore Bernstein, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Abraham Bijur, Mrs. Abram I. Stralem, Mrs. Oscar S. Straus, and Mrs. Israel Unterberg.

One of the attractive features of the bazaar is the Russian street, in which Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of the Senator, tells fortunes in a booth just around the corner from the entrance. Mrs. Lewis is a palmist of accomplishment, having made a study of the art for a number of years, during which she visited Spain, Morocco, Switzerland and Hungary to study under the world's greatest palmists. She has also taken courses in palmistry at schools in London and Paris. Surrounded by cigarette girls, Russian orchestras, vocalists and other diversions, she took time enough last night to tell a reporter how many sins of omission and commission were shown in his calloused palms, and told him it was yet possible for him to reform the lines of his hands.

This will be Navy Day at Hero Land.

CLASHES OF NOTABLE INTEREST MARK DESCENT OF CURTAIN ON GRIDIRON SEASON

HOLIDAY MENU HAS MANY CHOICE BITS

Annual Penn-Cornell Game Listed at Philadelphia Today and Pitt Will Meet Penn State.

SERVICE FRAYS RULE HERE

Soldier Elevens to Play at Polo Grounds and Ebbets Field—Georgia Tech vs. Auburn.

The Pennsylvania-Cornell game, which has been a Thanksgiving Day fixture of the Eastern gridiron for twenty-five years, will be played at Franklin Field in Philadelphia this afternoon, with Penn an overwhelming favorite. No college eleven this reason lost more of its veteran football material than Cornell, and Dr. Sharpe has had to get along as best he could with green material and, as a result, Cornell has had one of the most disastrous seasons in her gridiron history. Cornell has been beaten this year by Williams, Colgate, Michigan, and Fordham, so when they meet the Quakers today they have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Cornell's novice eleven has greater possibilities than it has shown this year, and, if Penn expects a walkover, the Cornell followers figure that the Quakers are in for a surprise, because Cornell is certain to play a whole lot better than in any other game of the season. Penn has a good defensive eleven this year, but has shown nothing wonderful in the way of an attack, and has been defeated by two of the leading eleven of the year, Georgia Tech and Pittsburgh.

There have been so many surprises on the Eastern gridiron that it has not been safe to predict victories or defeats. It seems impossible, however, that Penn could slump badly enough to fall down before Cornell, and, if ever a team seemed certain of victory, Penn does today. It is not likely, however, that the Quakers will win by any overwhelming score, as Cornell may be depended upon to go down fighting hard.

Over a stretch of twenty-four years, Pennsylvania has won nineteen games, while Cornell has won only four, one game, that of 1906, resulting in a 0-to-0 tie. From 1893, when the two institutions began football relations, until 1901, Cornell defeated Pennsylvania only once, in 1901. In 1913, 1914, and 1915 Cornell won easily, while last season Penn downed the Ithacans, 23 to 3.

Panthers Face Penn State.

The undefeated Pittsburgh eleven will play its annual game with Penn State in Pittsburgh, but there is little danger that Glenn Warner's well-drilled machine will suffer a reverse. Penn State is not as strong as it has been in former years, while Pitt has the advantage of retaining several veterans.

A contest which commands much attention is the Georgia Tech-Auburn game at Atlanta. This will be without doubt the stiffest opposition that the Golden Tornado has had this year. The Georgia Tech eleven has swamped all its opponents by such overwhelming scores that it stands out as the strongest team ever developed in the South. Mike Donahue, the Auburn coach, has pointed his eleven for this game, and although the eleven was defeated by Davidson, the team came back and downed Vanderbilt, and then surprised the football world by holding Ohio State, the Western champions, to a scoreless tie.

Today's game will be the twentieth meeting between the elevens of the institutions, and Auburn has a great advantage in games won. Auburn has won sixteen games, while Georgia Tech has won only three. Georgia Tech won last season 31 to 7. If Tech wins today, it will be the third successive season without a defeat. Another Southern clasic today is the Vanderbilt-University of the South game at Nashville.

Syracuse, an eleven which rose from its defeat by Pittsburgh to be one of the strongest elevens of the East, will invade the West again today and play Nebraska at Lincoln. If Syracuse wins this game, the Salt City team will have a record of which it can justly be proud. Washington and Jefferson will play Washington and Lee at Richmond, and this game should furnish one of the most interesting battles of the year.

Service Games Here.

New York's turkey day football will be furnished by the service elevens and high school teams, and there is a program of gridiron events here today which will receive a lot of attention. At the Polo Grounds the Mineola Aviation Corps will play the Pelham Bay Naval Reserve eleven. The proceeds of this game will go to the Athletic Equipment Fund, which is one of the most meritorious charities which have been inaugurated for the camps. The New York A. C. has offered a prize for the camp which scores the greatest number of points in a sham battle which will precede the game.

This part of the program will begin at 1 o'clock. When the Naval Reserves reach the Brush Stadium, they will line up in battle array, and the aviators will invade the Polo Grounds with a full squadron of airplanes. On each of these teams are a number of former college players, and the contest should be well worth seeing.

The lineup will be as follows:

Naval Reserves.	Position.	Aviators.
Johnston, Dart	L. E.	Louck, W. & J.
Griffith, Dart	L. T.	Hazeltine, Cal.
Cox, Penn State	L. G.	Thompson, Yale.
Todarello, Holy C.	C.	Lawson, Wes.
Holden, Dart	R. G.	Wales, Rens.
Dickinson, Prince	R. T.	Redfield, Yale
Tabor, Penn	R. E.	Cronin, George
Miller, Penn State	Q. B.	Watkins, Colgate
Peacock, Colgate	L. H. B.	Roberts, Vir.
O'Boyle, George	R. H. B.	Clarke, Haver.
Donnelly, Dart	F. B.	Lowrey, Ind.

Over at Ebbets Field there will be another service game at 10 A. M. between Fort Hancock and Fort Hamilton. The proceeds of this game will also be used toward athletic equipment for the soldiers. Both elevens have strong lineups, and several former college players will be in the game. Al Journeay, the former Penn centre, has coached Hancock.

At Boston, Cupid Black's Newport Naval Reserve eleven, which was defeated last week by Rutgers, will play the Camp Devens team. Percy Haughton, who coached Devens is sure his team will beat the Newport array of stars.

The Camp Upton team will play Fordham at Fordham Field in another game, which should draw a large crowd.

USAACS MOTOR TO GAME.

Trucks and Ambulances Carry 1,000 Men to See Georgetown Contest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The advance guard of more than 1,000 men of the Army Ambulance Corps of Allentown, Penn., is in the capital today after making a 200-mile trip in motor trucks to see their all-star eleven clash with Georgetown University at American League Park tomorrow. Fifty-two motor trucks, forty ambulances, and ten field kitchens brought the rooters.

The ambulance team, comprising college stars from all sections, will meet strong opposition in Georgetown, which this season has defeated Springfield, Lehigh, Fordham, and Washington and Lee.

CORNELL ON WAY TO GAME.

No Demonstration by Students as Eleven Departs for Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The Cornell football squad of thirty-seven men left here near midnight tonight for Philadelphia to play Pennsylvania in the last game of the season on Franklin Field tomorrow. There was no student demonstration of any kind when the team left, and only a few hundred undergraduates made the trip to Philadelphia to support the team from the stands.

A feature of the team's departure is the mystery surrounding the reported changes in the lineup which Dr. Sharpe is contemplating. Although he said today that the team would be made up much the same as in the Fordham game, the undergraduate body is looking for a number of important changes, either at the very outset or before the play has gone very far.

Sharpe said that he would probably use Spiegelberg and Eisenbrandt at right end and Colvin at left end; Harris, left tackle; Herriman, right tackle; Swanson and Strauss, guards; S. Trowbridge, centre, and Nethercott, Hoffman, Cross, and Pendleton in the backfield. While practically all these men are certain to play, they may appear in different positions than those mentioned according to reports in circulation this evening.

Dr. Sharpe said his men were in good shape and spirits, and he hoped they would play the sort of game they had proved in practice they could play.

SCHOOL ELEVENS TO CLASH.

Four Gridiron Contests Scheduled in Brooklyn Today.

The Brooklyn scholastic football season will come to a close today with a series of four games. Erasmus Hall High School, winner of this year's championship, will oppose the strong Poly Prep eleven in a game at Washington Park in the afternoon, and the same gridiron will be the scene in the morning of a game between Fordham Prep and Brooklyn Prep. This latter contest will practically decide the Manhattan-Brooklyn private schools' championship. At Ebbets Field a double-header will be held in which the opposing teams will be Manual Training High School vs. Boys' High School, runnersup for the season's gridiron title, and New Utrecht vs. Commercial High School.

The Flushing High School eleven, champion of Long Island, left yesterday for Binghamton, N. Y., where it will oppose the strong Central High School team. Flushing is decidedly weak in comparison to the team of earlier in the season, because of injuries to some of the best players, and its chances against the up-State foe are regarded as dubious. The players are themselves confident, however, that they can defeat the Binghamton team if given favorable weather for the game. Last year the contest was played in mud which was ankle-deep.

Usaacs Will Play on Coast.

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 28.—Arrangements were completed here today for the Allentown, Penn., Ambulance Corps football team to represent the East against the Mare Island marines for the West in the New Year's game announced as a feature of the annual tournament of roses. The ambulance team is composed of strong university players.

ASTE'S EYELID IS IN VAN AT FINISH

Captures Dominion Purse After Battle with Orlando of Havana at Bowie.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 28.—A. L. Aste's Eyelid captured the Dominion Purse for two-year-olds, which was the feature of the card today. Only seven youngsters went to the post, and both the winner and Orlando of Havana were so well played that they started nearly equal favorites. Eyelid had M. Rowan in the saddle and he handled the filly well in the scurry over six and a half furlongs. The two favorites fought it out most of the way and Eyelid gained the decision by a small margin.

One of the largest fields of the day turned out for the fifth race at a mile and seventy yards, which was open only to horses foaled in Canada. W. Bennett's Amphion, which ran second to Silk Bird in a similar race last week, was the choice of the players. Rowan had the task of guiding Amphion and he cleverly landed him a winner from J. E. Fletcher's Garish Sun, one of the outsiders.

W. Durnan's Swift Fox, which in his previous races has shown a disposition to quit before the end of six furlongs, developed unexpected stamina in the fourth race at a mile and twenty yards. Though the pace was fairly fast, Swift Fox kept well up with the leaders and came away in the stretch to gain the verdict from Widow Bedotte.

TWO RACE MEETINGS OPEN.

Season at New Orleans and Havana Will Start Today.

Winter racing will begin today at New Orleans and at Havana, the New Orleans meeting being scheduled for twenty-eight days, while the sport in Cuba will run for 100 days and provide opportunities for owners to win purses almost until the opening of the Spring season in Kentucky. After the close of the Jefferson Parish Fair races at New Orleans, on Dec. 31, this noted racing centre will have another meeting at the Fair Grounds, which will begin on Jan. 1 and continue until Feb. 12, and will contain thirty-seven racing days. Racing at Juarez appears to have been abandoned for this Winter on account of passport difficulties, but there is a chance that this trouble may be overcome at Tiajuana by issuing identification cards similar to those in use on the Canadian border in the Summer.

The New Orleans meeting will start with bright prospects, as nearly 800 horses are quartered at the local tracks. Arrivals from Bowie, which will close the Eastern season tomorrow, are expected to bring the total above the 1,000 mark. Herman Conkling, who has charge of the jockeys' engagements, reports that more riders are on hand and that they constitute a better class than at any time since racing was revived in Louisiana. The stewards of the meeting are Joseph A. Murphy, E. C. Smith and Carter Hall, while A. B. Dade will do the starting.

Racing in Havana also promises to be better than ever, as the many prominent stables have shipped to Cuba for the long campaign. Christopher J. Fitzgerald will again be the presiding steward and he will have as associates H. D. Brown and Charles H. Lansdale. James Milton will be the starter.

Bowlers Will Aid In War.

Representatives from various bowling organizations will meet at the White Elephant Bowling Alleys next Tuesday to discuss plans for aiding in the war work along similar lines to those adopted by other sport-governing bodies. It is proposed to make the undertaking national in character, and it will be decided at the meeting what war object will be made the beneficiary.

OWNERS HESITATE TO SIGN PLAYERS

Uncertainty of Baseball Situation Causes Delay in Sending Out Contracts.

Because of the uncertainty of baseball conditions the major league clubs have made no effort to sign their players for next season, and most of the clubs will wait until the time limit set by the constitution, Feb. 1, before sending out the contracts. This state of affairs is unprecedented in baseball, because in other years the club owners were anxious to get their players signed up as soon as possible after the season closed.

The club owners are anxious to wait as long as possible because they want to wait to see just what effect war conditions are going to have on baseball affairs. This action of hesitancy on the part of the club owners also indicates that there is going to be a great change in the salaries which the players are to receive next season.

The few players who have long-term contracts will probably get their high salaries next year, but none of the other players will. The day of the contract with the bonus clause is probably over. Yesterday, in discussing the bonus feature of the contracts of the past, President Tener of the National League said: "I see no reason why a baseball player should be offered a bonus. In the first place, when he signs his contract he pledges himself to keep himself in condition and give his very best efforts. Now if he signs a contract to give his best, why should there also be a provision for a bonus which calls for an extra amount if he does unusually well?"

President Tener stated plainly that he was not in favor of the bonus clause in contracts, and in voicing this opinion he has evidently first sounded the club owners of his league on the subject.

Branch Rickey, President of the St. Louis Cardinals, is the first of the club owners to announce the stand which all the owners will probably take on the contract question. "I haven't signed any players yet and I don't want to sign any until I have to. If baseball law did not require me to send them out by Feb. 1 I would not put one in the mails until March 1 at the earliest. We want to wait and see what conditions are going to be next season before signing any contracts.

"There is no reason for baseball men," he continued, "to camouflage their position. It is only natural that there should be a strong tendency toward retrenchment. Every one knows that the war has hurt baseball and will continue to hurt it as it has all other business. Baseball must prepare for the struggle. Club owners and stockholders must not suffer too heavily if the game is to survive. Naturally the payrolls will have to be smaller than they were in 1917."

President H. N. Hempstead of the Giants is now working on a plan to minimize the inconvenience of the war tax at the Polo Grounds next season. The use of pennies at the ticket offices is sure to create no end of confusion and he is trying to devise a scale of prices which will give convenience to the greatest number of Polo Ground patrons.

According to the plan which Mr. Hempstead now has in mind the 25-cent bleacher seats will be raised to 30 cents in order to do away with the pennies. There are very few of these 25-cent bleacher seats, and the major leagues are making an effort each season to cut them out entirely. In other cities outside of New York and Brooklyn, however, the bleachers seats are numerous and a big protest would surely go up if the 25-cent pasteboards were boosted to 30 cents.

Mr. Hempstead's plan on the 75-cent seats, which is the most popular ticket of admission at the Polo Grounds, is to sell them for 80 cents instead of 83 cents, the club making up the difference in the tax on these tickets. On the $1 and $1.50 tickets of course there would be no need of changing the prices as the tax would be 10 and 15 cents on these tickets. Mr. Hempstead expects that there will be objection to any arrangement which is made, but one will be adopted which will be most satisfactory to his patrons.

JANOWSKI EARNS DECISION.

French Chess Champion Defeats Jaffe in Long Game.

David Janowski, the French chess champion, scored another victory yesterday in his match with Charles Jaffe at the rooms of the New York City Chess Club, where he won the eighth game, after a contest lasting 72 moves. Janowski opened with a Queen's Gambit Declined, but Jaffe held his own well until the ending, in which Janowski had two bishops against a knight and a bishop. The French master was able to win a pawn, which gave him the victory. Of the eight games contested, Janowski has won four, Jaffe one, and three were drawn.

COCHRAN INCREASES LEAD.

Chicago Billiardist Has an Advantage of 1,400 to 650 Over Mayer.

Welker Cochran continued to play superlative billiards in the continuation of his 2,500-point, 18.2 match against Joseph Mayer at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday. The Chicago expert is now leading his rival from Philadelphia as a result of the five blocks of the match by a score of 1,400 to 650. Yesterday afternoon Mayer was defeated by a score of 250 to 127, and in the evening he was vanquished even more decisively, the score being 300 to 113. Cochran in the afternoon averaged an even 25 and in the evening 27 3-11. Mayer's averages were low in both instances, the afternoon match giving him 14 1-9 and the evening contest 11 3-10.

In both the afternoon and evening games Cochran compiled runs that mounted beyond the hundred mark. Mayer was placed at a hopeless disadvantage at the outset of the day's play when Cochran, by a pretty exhibition of billiard technique, gathered in a cluster of 139 points. Mayer could not get the ivories rolling to his liking and never even threatened the lead of his rival. Cochran almost duplicated his afternoon performance in the evening game. The only difference was that this time his high run came in the second inning instead of the first.

WILL HOLD TEAM MATCHES.

Squash Tennis Events Will Begin Next Week.

There will be no diminution in squash tennis activities because of the war, according to present plans. It was announced yesterday by A. W. Riley, President of the National Squash Tennis Association, that the interclub team matches, which have been a feature of the Winter season heretofore, would again be played in both A and B classes. The events will be started next week, the Class B matches being held on Tuesday and the Class A on Thursday. The schedule, however, has not yet been arranged owing to uncertainty as to the playing of one or two teams.

According to the announcement, the teams in the Class A division will be Columbia, Yale, and Harvard and two combination teams, one composed of Heights Casino and Crescent Athletic Club men, and the other of the players from the Princeton Club and the Squash Club. In Class B, Columbia, Yale, and Harvard will compete, also the Heights Casino-Crescent Athletic Club team and one from the New York A. C.

All of the clubs have lost heavily of their leading players because of the war, but it was thought beter to hold the team matches with the players available competing than to sacrifice this fixture of the squash tennis season.

VANDERBILT HORSES SOLD.

150 Go for Song—A Pair of Wheelers Now to Draw Butcher's Wagon.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Nov. 28.—Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt sold 150 of the thoroughbred horses of the stable of the late Alfred G. Vanderbilt at auction today at Erskine Park. Horses that cost the late Mr. Vanderbilt thousands of dollars for his coach and for horse shows were knocked down at astonishingly low prices. One pair, Middletown Belle and Essex, brown and bay mares, which had been driven as wheelers on the Vanderbilt coach and are said to have cost $10,000 sold separately, one for $70 and the other for $100, to Peter Cassidy of Sheffield, a butcher, who will use the pair on his butcher's cart. Pedigreed young horses sold as low as $50 each. Mrs. Vanderbilt sold the horses because of want of room to Winter them, retaining eighteen of the best of her stable for her use.

Cancel Bouts at Broadway S. C.

There will be no boxing exhibitions held at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn this afternoon. John P. Dunn, for the club management, announced last night that it had been decided to cancel the scheduled Thanksgiving Day show. The officials of the club are now awaiting a decision on the test case based on the club membership plan, which will be rendered in the Gates Avenue Court by Magistrate Howard Nash tomorrow.

Leonard Knocks Out Kirk.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 28.—Benny Leonard, lightweight champion boxer of the world, knocked out Frank (Sailor) Kirk of Denver in the first round of their scheduled ten-round bout at Stock Yards Stadium.

TRIUMPH FOR HYDE IN SQUASH TOURNEY

Defeats A. W. Riley in Final Round of Fall Event with Score 15-18, 15-9, 15-5, 15-12.

Playing squash tennis of invincible quality, Fillmore Van S. Hyde of the Harvard Club won the annual Fall tournament at the Squash Club yesterday afternoon when he defeated A. W. Riley of the Princeton Club and Squash Club in the final round with the score 15—18, 15—9, 15—5, 15—12. In an exhibition match for the benefit of the Red Cross, which, followed the playing of the amateur event, Walter A. Kinsella, holder of the world's professional championship, defeated James Mullins, professional, at the Racquet and Tennis Club at 3—15, 15—12, 18—15. Kinsella allowed his opponent eight aces.

After defeating Mullins, Kinsella played a second exhibition match against James Reid, professional, at the Crescent A. C., and scored a victory in straight games at 15—9, 17—15. Kinsella allowed his opponent five aces.

The match between Riley and Hyde was brilliantly fought and showed the latter at his best. Riley was no mean opponent. He struggled with determination against the play of his antagonist, and at times even overshadowed the skill exhibited by Hyde. As the score indicates, the best work done by Riley was in the first set. He caught the full power of his game quicker than did Hyde, and carried off the honors by a spirited bit of play that roused the applause of the gallery.

It was evident thus early in the contest, however, that he would be sorely pressed to hold the upper hand. Under the sting of that first reversal Hyde opened an attack that was resourceful as well as powerful. He bit his racquet into the ball viciously, and it fairly sang through the court, yet he did not depend alone on speed to overcome his rival. Now and then he interposed a soft shot, or even a series of them, and Riley was baffled by the change of pace. It was not until the score had reached 7 all that Hyde forged to the front in decisive fashion. The rallies were long sustained, but he managed to get a point now and then while Riley was held at bay, and the game went to 14—7 in favor of the Harvard Club player. Riley stayed the defeat momentarily while he was gathering in two points, but it was beyond his power to halt Hyde's victory.

Hyde never for a moment let up in his play during the third game; if anything he played even faster than before. His shots to the back corners were often productive of an ace, and he was adept in drawing Riley out of position and then passing him with a shot that raced far out of reach of the Princeton Club expert. This game went to Hyde with the score 15—5, and seemed to indicate that Riley's aggressiveness and skill was fast waning.

The fourth game, however, showed the contrary to be true. Riley at no time in the contest made so many brilliant shots as he did during this period, but the difficulty lay in that Hyde was able to match his every effort. The players alternated in the lead, with never more than two points separating them until the final aces accrued to Hyde's standard and gave him the victory. How close was the contest is indicated by the fact that the score was even at 4 all, at 6 all, at 8 all, and again at 12 all. When Riley brought it even at the latter point there was thought to be a chance of his pulling the game out to his credit. But Hyde never for a moment was disconcerted. Three brilliant placement shots decided the issue, every one coming after a long and spirited rally.

Building the Pullman Car

THE strength of the Pullman Car represents one of the best forms of insurance the traveler can buy.

For seven years every car built by the Pullman Company for its service has been of steel.

During this period a large proportion of the older, but still modern cars, have also been rebuilt to almost equal strength.

This has been accomplished by rebuilding with steel under frames, steel vestibules and steel sheathing on the sides.

In addition to the factor of safety, fifty years of experience in designing and building cars has brought about an almost unheard of development in travel convenience and luxury.

The modern Pullman is fully equipped with the most up-to-date steam heating, electric lighting and plumbing.

It offers a degree of safety, innumerable luxuries and a personal service that have established a world-wide reputation.

PUT ELECTRIC LINES ON A WAR BASIS

Association Will Co-operate with Steam Roads in Passenger and Freight Handling.

41,000 MILES ARE AFFECTED

Congestion at Piers Acute Because of Inferior Quality of Labor—Embargo to be Stringent.

The American Electric Railway Association announced yesterday from its offices at 8 West Fortieth Street the creation of a War Board to operate the electric railways of the country, especially suburban and interurban lines, during the war in co-operation with the steam roads. The Railroads' War Board, in charge of the war operation of the steam lines, has suggested that the electric lines can do much good in supplementing the transportation service of the steam lines by extending their freight hauling, especially in the carrying of food from farms to cities.

The steam roads have also announced an approaching material further curtailment of passenger trains, and it is the intention of the electric railways to replace the service of curtailed local trains. The steam roads have supplied the Government with a list of some 400 or 500 nonessential commodities for embargo, and the electric lines believe they will be able to handle some of this business.

There are 41,000 miles of electric railway in the United States, of which 14,000 is interurban. It is this latter of which the greatest use will be made in increasing the transportation facilities of the Government. It is the purpose of the managers of the electric roads to arrange with the steam roads a system of interchange of traffic, and it is understood that the steam roads are ready and willing to enter into such an agreement. To test the ability of the electric roads several days ago two carloads of goods were shipped from New York to Boston on short notice.

C. Loomis Allen, ex-President of the American Electric Railway Association, has been named Director of the War Board. The other members are T. N. McCarter, President of the Public Service Railway Company of New Jersey, Chairman; A. W. Brady, President of the Union Traction Company of Indiana; P. H. Gadsden, President of the Charleston Consolidated Railway and Lighting Company, Charleston, S. C.; Britton I. Budd, President of the Chicago, North Shore & Milwaukee Railroad, Chicago; Lucius L. Storrs, President of the Connecticut Company, New Haven, Conn.

Objects of Electric War Board.

The object of the War Board is stated as follows:

To co-ordinate the facilities of the electric railways of the country and to place them at the command of the Government and of industry.

To represent the electric railways in the important activities of governmental departments and the various boards and committees appointed to conduct the nation's affairs during the war.

In announcing the creation of the War Board, Mr. Allen issued a statement on behalf of the electric railways, in which he said:

The Council of National Defense has wisely decided to call into conference representatives of all forms of transportation for the purpose of co-ordinating their facilities. The success of our armies and the continuance of our industries depend upon the nation's ability to provide transportation. The problems involved may be solved if team work between the various interests can be brought about. Besides our steam railroads, electric roads, waterways and motor trucks can all be used for the transportation of materials and men.

It is not a case of the electric railways competing for business with the steam lines, with waterways, or motor trucks—it is rather a case of supplementing the service which these others perform. If the work is to be done successfully, it will mean not only the fullest co-operation between the various transportation interests, but the equal co-operation on the part of the public.

For instance, electric railways in some cases parallel and in many cases serve the same territory as steam roads. It is entirely possible to so arrange schedules as to allow electric lines to take over much of the local work of the steam roads and so release equipment for through service.

It is possible also in many cases to arrange for interchange of traffic between electric lines, which are now in the main operated independently of each other, thus avoiding congestion in steam road terminals and enabling quick shipments.

The steam roads have furnished to the Priority Boards and to the fuel administration a list of some 450 commodities, which they declare to be non-essential and upon which it is proposed to place an embargo. It is entirely possible that arrangement can be made to transport some of these commodities by electric railways.

An important function, which electric lines, both urban and interurban, can perform in conjunction with the Food Administration, is in the collection and distribution of food products, first in the country—from the farmer; and second, in the city—between the wholesaler and the retailer. Extensive experiments are now being carried on with a container system, which, if successful, will enable goods in quantities as high as five tons to be carried directly from the producer to the store where it is sold, to the consumer.

Electric railways are among the largest users of coal and the largest employers of labor. Coal and labor are, with food, the things which above all else must be conserved, in the interest of the nation. We are willing and anxious to do our part, and the effort of every electric railway manager of the country is being exerted to effect economy. In this effort we can, I believe, look for the co-operation of the regulatory commissions, both State and local, and of the public itself. Unnecessary service causes waste of fuel and waste of labor. It means that just so much less of each will be available for other essential war-winning purposes.

The board has placed its services entirely at the disposal of the Government. The Council of National Defense will name a representative on the board in order to bring the two bodies into direct touch. The board proposes to co-operate in every way in the solution of what is today the greatest problem facing industrial America—that of transportation, and it believes that it can count upon the aid and assistance of the public, without which little can be done.

Great Freight Tieup at Pier.

Although most of the freight-carrying railroad and steamship lines with terminals in this city have recently tried temporarily to lighten their congestion problems by declaring embargoes on some classes of freight, freight superintendents along the waterfront said yesterday that they were in the throes of a tieup greater and more complete than any in the city's history.

Thousands of packed freight cars are jammed in the railroad yards of Hoboken and Jersey City, the superintendents said, but they cannot be emptied because experienced labor is lacking. During the last year most of the professional freight handlers of the large transportation line terminals have either been drafted or have left to obtain better than their 25-cents-an-hour wage in high-paying munition factories. The result is that, for the last few months, freight superintendents have been depending entirely on what they call "scrub" labor. About 325 men are now employed to do the work which, before the war, 150 professional freight handlers did for the same 25-cent-an-hour wages.

Until the recent Federal rule forbidding Teutons near the docks, there were many instances in which Austrian laborers deliberately broke open and spoiled crates of munitions and goods consigned to the Allies, pier superintendents said. The robbing of cases of dry goods by the new "scrub" labor is a nightly occurrence, it was asserted.

Board to Pass on Freight Permits.

In an effort to clarify the situation caused by excessive requests for priority routing for their shipments, the American Railway Association announced yesterday that in accordance with a request by the Railroads' War Board, embargo modification permits for the governments of America's allies would be handled through a traffic executive office of the association at 165 Broadway.

Fairfax Harrison, Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, said that much of the congestion in the Eastern territory was caused by an excessive number of priority orders.

"The number of these routine preference orders has become so great," he said, "that on some of the Eastern railways they are being applied to the greater part of the freight. The attempt to give expedited movement to an excessive amount of freight has caused congestion in yards by causing a large increase in switching movements."

Mr. Harrison did not refer to the priority orders issued by Judge Lovett for the United States Government, but to routine preference orders issued by representatives of Government departments or others enjoying the privilege of using the priority permits.

In announcing its plan to relieve congestion by opening a clearing house for embargo exception permits, the American Railway Association said in a statement:

"From now on, when permits are desired for traffic consigned to Controller Johannet for account of the French Government, General Tozzi for account of the Italian Government, Connop Guthrie for account of the British Government, or C. G. Medzikhovsky for account of the Russian Government, the application will be made direct to the Traffic Executive, who in turn through the Embargo Permit Department will make application to the railroad company. This means that the railroads no longer will be burdened with thousands of duplicate requests, but will receive only one request on each shipment from the Traffic Executive.

"It is expected that this centralization of authority will not only increase the efficiency of the various railroad embargo offices, but will tend to relieve to a great extent the already over-burdened railroad and commercial telegraph systems."

WOOL MARKET IS STRONG.

Mills Buying Lower Grades for Government Purposes.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Transactions in the Boston wool market have not been very large in volume during the last week. The market, although quiet, has remained strong. All good combing wools, which are scarce, are held at extremely high figures. Many mills are buying the lower grades of stock to be used for Government purposes. There is some demand for all grades of wool, particularly fine Cape scoured.

"Greater activity in the cotton goods market has been seen during the last week. It is felt that the market will continue its upward trend until fundamental conditions are different than those at present. There has been very large buying of heavyweight fabrics largely through the result of the elimination of heavy fabrics on account of Government purchasing."

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, Congress has enacted, and the President has on the fifteenth day of June, 1917, approved a law which contains the following provisions:

Done in the District of Columbia this twenty-eighth of November in the year of Our Lord One thousand nine hundred and seventeen and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-second.

[Seal]

WOODROW WILSON.

By the President: Robert Lansing, Secretary of State.

In connection with the second proclamation, issued today, the President made the following statement:

"The purpose and effect of this proclamation are to supplement the proclamation of Aug. 27, 1917, by subjecting to export control certain additional commodities whose conservation is essential to the policy of devoting all the resources of this country to the most vigorous prosecution of the war. Our foreign trade in these commodities will be affected only to the extent that control of their exportation by license is demanded by the duty of providing for our domestic needs and the needs of the nations at war with the Imperial German Government."

Can Control World Trade.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Assumption of control over imports gives the Government another powerful weapon which will be used to its fullest extent in the economic war on Germany. It adds greatly to America's commercial power, already the greatest of any nation, and puts this country in a position during the war almost to direct the trade of the world. If minded to use it in that way, the United States could let it serve as the heaviest kind of pressure on neutral traders suspected of using American goods to supply Germany. Controlling both exports and imports the Government is in a position, too, to demand of other nations the kind of supplies it needs in prosecution of the war.

One of the chief advantages of import control is that it gives the Government a larger measure of supervision over shipping. If tonnage vitally needed for war purposes is being used to transport to this country commodities regarded as nonessential the Government can decline to issue import licenses and thus divert the tonnage to essential trades.

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Those Big Bags Again.

Those big knitting bags the women are carrying popped up again yesterday in a talk a Times man had with a store executive. Regarding their tendencies to promote petty shoplifting, the executive in question put himself by the side of the one who recently characterized this kind of talk as "rank nonsense." He continued: "I expect to see the big bags save the stores trouble and save both the stores and the public money this holiday season by making it easy for customers to carry small packages with them. It stands to reason that if a woman has bought half a dozen articles which she can easily tuck into her bag she is going to think better of carrying them with her than if she had to 'tote' them in her hands. I think my contention is already proved in part by the comparatively fewer deliveries being made of late, considering the time of the year it is."

Looking Forward to 1918.

More than one member of the local cutting-up trade is looking forward to the coming of 1918 in the hope that it will dispel the bad luck that has followed the trade throughout the greater part of the year. While some houses appear to have done well it is said that they represent the minority. In more than one-quarter the assertion has been made that the current year, taken as a whole, has been one of the most disappointing in a long time. That the Spring season was far from being what it might have been is no secret, nor is the fact unknown that Fall business has been of a similar calibre. The change in the silhouette for next Spring, bringing into vogue again the narrow skirt, is expected to "warm things up" again.

Australian Embargo Modified.

This statement has been issued by E. T. Hall, the official representative in this city of the Commonwealth of Australia: "On Aug. 10 last the Government of the Commonwealth prohibited the importation, except by permission, of ale, beer, stout and cider, portable spirits, perfumed spirits and bay rum, biscuits, confectionery, eggs, fur apparel, perfumery, jewelry, imitation jewelry and imitation precious stones, and bodies for motor vehicles. I have just received a cablegram stating that any of the above goods—except ale, beer, stout and cider, portable spirits, and motor bodies—will be admitted if a firm order was lodged with the manufacturer on or before Aug. 10 last, and the importer is committed to payment."

Toy Demand Is Normal.

Activity in the toy departments of the large retail stores is said to be not in the least below normal. Predictions made earlier in the year that the wave of economy that is sweeping over the country, and the higher prices prevailing in many instances, would seriously curtail business in these lines do not seem to be materializing. "We are selling articles for $40 this year," said the head of a large store devoted almost exclusively to toys, "which last year sold at $25, and we are selling just as many as we did. The holiday season this Fall is a little late, due to the lateness of Thanksgiving, but I am perfectly confident that our turnover this year will be every bit as good as last in spite of all predictions to the contrary."

Detachable Fur Collars Take.

One of the most widely sought novelties introduced this season is the detachable fur collar for men's overcoats. Though as a rule these pieces are offered in conjunction with the coat on which they are shown, it is said they can be made to fit any heavy coat with a wide collar. According to reports from the trade coats with this feature have proved to be one of the best sellers of the season, because in mild weather, as an authority in the trade points out, they can be worn without the fur collar.

Gray Goods Trade Upset.

Not even in the panic days of ten years ago was the local gray goods trade in a more upset condition than at the present time, though the uncertainty that existed then was of a widely different nature. The result is that both buyers and sellers are feeling their way. Even at that a good volume of business is passing, and yesterday's trading was no exception to the rule. Business, for delivery in December and also through the first quarter of next year, was done on 39-inch 68-72s at 13¾ and 13⅛ cents, respectively, while similar sales of 38½-inch 64-60s, 60-52s, and 60-48s were reported at 11¾, 10¾, and 10⅝ cents, respectively. Other business of a more or less scattered nature was also done in printcloths and, in cases where buyers and sellers could agree as to price, a nice volume of medium-weight sheetings was sold. There was no apparent diminution of the call for sateens and twills, which are rising steadily in sympathy with the general market. Spot printcloth prices, which were uneven, closed at about these levels:

Men's Olive Drab Suede Gloves.

In men's gloves, one of the most popular numbers of the season up to now has been the olive drab suede gloves, according to reports from the local trade. In some cases they are taken plain, in others the black clocks on the back are preferred. Though demand has been fairly active all Fall, the approach of the holiday season seems to be increasing sales, and many of the large stores in this city feel that when the year is ended the last quarter will be found to have been one of the best in many years. Gray suede also is said to be well taken, and, in fact, suede in all shades seems to be the leader this year.

Good Prospects for Spring Ties.

Local manufacturers of men's neckwear report that the prospects for the Spring trade are very good. With the bugaboo of the draft no longer an unknown factor, buyers do not feel the hesitancy and uncertainty so disastrous to normal buying, and are said to be inquiring already for Spring lines. Several manufacturers are getting up attractive samples in washable crêpes and cotton de Joinville for the 1918 season. In these washable lines panel effects and Jacquard figures will be extensively used. It is expected that bow ties, later in the Spring, will be unusually popular.

Even though retailers are complaining that there is little new in the line of millinery, novelties are making their appearance in the local market. For instance, some of the hats for immediate wear that are now being shown here have black satin brims with ribbon crazy quilt crowns. Others show the use of narrow gros grain ribbon interlaced with wool. Maline hats are seen with patent leather piping, and hats of Georgette crepe combined with satin in medium mushroom shapes are also shown. The trimmings include new effects in ostrich fancies, wool pompoms, and handmade silk flowers.

Holiday Sales Running Big.

Holiday sales continue to run big locally, and a man employed in an executive capacity by one of the well-known stores is authority for the statement that this store is well ahead of last year both in volume of sales and money represented. While he was not sure whether this was due to an increased observance of the "Do your Christmas shopping early" rule or to the possibility that the public has more money to spend this year than last, he attributed the gain to the latter. "Time alone will tell," he concluded, "but I am sure that closing time on Dec. 24 will not find us behind the mark set in 1916."

BUSINESS NOTES.

The forty-second annual edition of "Cotton Facts" has been issued by the Shepperson Publishing Company of this city. In addition to the large number of topics covered in previous issues, the new book contains several features of particular interest to those having to do with cotton and cotton goods.

At the Hotel Imperial, on Saturday at 2 P. M., will be held the next meeting of the newly organized American Fur Dealers' Association. The association to date has 125 members, who are drawn from the raw and dressed fur dealers of this city. These are the officers: President, Carl Dernburg; Vice President, Max Wulfsohn; Treasurer, Louis Cohen, and Secretary, Jack Phillips.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Small Volume of Dealings, with Further Price Recessions —Rails Lagging.

The usual evening-up process before a holiday took place on the Stock Exchange yesterday with a further contraction in activity. The list closed irregular, but with most issues selling off from Tuesday's final prices. The Street had numerous developments on the various war fronts to discount in the foreign exchange market, but security prices drifted along without reflecting any effort to adjust quotations to the improved prospects of the Allies on the west and Italian fronts, or to the beginning of overtures for peace between German authorities and representatives of the Bolsheviki.

Bankers are generally reconciled to a long drawn out war, and they are loath to undertake any new financing, at least until the Federal authorities make known their position regarding Government aid for the railroads and such industries needing additional capital as are working on war orders. The abnormal cost of materials has brought about such an increase in the inventories that manufacturers need in many cases double their ordinary amount of working capital in order to meet their current bills. In some instances, one of which came to light yesterday, the industries are omitting dividend payments justified by current earnings in order to free the sums which would be disbursed to stockholders for use as working capital. With a great many companies which have enjoyed an unusual degree of prosperity it will be necessary to arrange short-term borrowing to meet the new excess profits taxes.

Railroad securities are showing little improvement on the strength of expected economies resulting from the pooling arrangement being set in motion by the committee of Vice Presidents at Pittsburgh. This is natural in view of the fact that so far little consideration has been given by the executives to the rights of stockholders in planning ways to break the freight deadlock which has existed on some of the Eastern roads. The first thing to be worked out is, of course, the expediting of fuel and raw materials which must be moved without regard to the advantages ordinarily belonging to the lines originating the traffic. Eventually the companies must effect some kind of a pooling arrangement looking to the restoration of net earnings where they are interfered with by the drastic measures now being adopted for the relief of a bad situation.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Investment Stocks Receive Good Attention—Shipping Shares Strong.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The stock market was generally firm today, with the chief features the strength and activity in shipping shares and the Marconi group, especially American Marconi. Investment stocks received good attention, and the foreign bond section was firm, with the exception of Russian and Spanish issues, which were weak. Armament shares were in demand and rubbers improved.

Money was in better supply and discount rates were quiet. Italian exchange was better.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 59 francs 75 centimes for cash; Exchange on London 27 francs 28½ centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 85 centimes.

Extend Mercantile Stores Notes.

The maturity of the outstanding serial notes of the Mercantile Stores Corporation has been extended from Dec. 1, 1917, to Dec. 1, 1919, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Trustees, who were appointed at the time of the reorganization of the H. B. Claflin Company. The affirmative consent in writing of holders of a majority in number and in principal amount, and practically the unanimous consent of the holders in amount of the outstanding notes, has been obtained for the two years' extension.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

New Bond Table Needed.

The readjustment that has taken place in quotations for bonds, with so many of the high-grade issues selling at unusually low figures, has directed attention to the need of compiling a new book of investment yields. Ordinarily a bond salesman, by referring to his little magic volume of figures, could instantly tell the yield of a security, but the authors of these bond tables evidently never thought that "good" bonds would ever sell at prices yielding more than 6 or 7 per cent., for they have never extended their computations to embrace such conditions. The fact of the matter is that at present a great many first-class short-term notes and bonds are being quoted at levels which make the yield very high, and salesmen cannot tell off-hand what the yield is. Many of them must summon mathematicians and have the "yield" worked out by resort to logarithms. Some optimists believe that before the new table of high yields is worked out and published there will be a change in the investment market and that there will be no need for the new work. Those who are less optimistic are willing to take a chance, and would immediately subscribe if a compiler of tables agreed to turn out the book before the war ends.

December Payments.

Dividends and interest disbursements to be made next month by railroad and industrial corporations will aggregate $182,300,000, compared with $168,795,000 in December, 1916, according to a compilation made by The Journal of Commerce. It is calculated that interest payments will reach the sum of $100,900,000, against $96,500,000 in the same month a year ago, while dividend disbursements will total $81,400,000, compared with $72,295,000 in the corresponding month of 1916. The large increase in dividend payments is due to the larger distribution that will be made to common stockholders of the United States Steel Corporation. It is figured that the year's disbursements in interest and dividends will amount to $679,000,000, compared with $547,000,000 in 1916.

War and the Metric System.

Every now and then the financial district hears of more big ammunition and gun contracts placed by the War Department, which cannot be officially verified because of the stringent secrecy provisions attached to the contracts, but which are generally considered accurately reported. The chief feature connected with them, of course, is their magnitude; but another interesting feature whose implications have not been so closely studied is the fact that all these contracts are in the metric system. The War Department has apparently definitely committed itself to the step of shifting over to the metric system in the middle of its huge expansion program. Not least of the hidden romances of the war will be the story of how all the tools, jigs, dies, gauges, &c., needed for this change were found.

When Will They Know?

A statement of the Southern Pacific, showing a complete blank in the column of operations of its steamships since Oct. 15, with the bare explanation that its entire fleet was requisitioned on that date, and that it is running the ships not actually in Government service, for Government account, calls attention to the fact that six weeks after their ships were taken over, shipping men are still in ignorance of the compensation the Government proposes to allow them for their labors in operating their own ships for Government account. A few sample copies of the Government form of charter on which the requisitioned ships are to be placed have been cautiously distributed to a few of the big men in the business for their inspection and criticism, but even this fundamental agreement is still withheld from the industry as a whole, and the decision on the operating fees to be allowed has not yet been put on paper.

Playing the Game Fairly.

In the circumstances it is a wonder that there has been so little complaint and so few manifestations of impatience among shipping men. Are there many other industries which would promptly and cheerfully, on demand, turn over their entire plant and staff of employes to the Government and let the Government run the entire industry for its own benefit for six weeks, without the owners receiving in return so much as a scrap of paper to show their stockholders?

A High Flight and Woeful Fall.

There is a story behind the resolution passed by the Governors of the Stock Exchange on Tuesday forbidding Exchange members or firms in future to carry speculative accounts for telephone clerks—the story of the downfall of a youthful speculator. This was a telephone clerk who was permitted to dabble by his own employers, who carried his account for him. It seems the young man bought 2,500 shares of Bethlehem Steel for a rise. It did not rise, and he promptly hedged by selling short 5,000 shares of United State Steel. But this also failed to go down, and the boy's financial career came to a sudden and disastrous termination, while his employers had to make good for him. The result was the new Exchange ruling, designed to put a stop to such catastrophes in the future.

Generous Liberty Loan Payment Plan.

A great many banks and business concerns throughout the United States have sold Liberty Loan bonds on the installment plan, requiring subscribers to pay one dollar down and a dollar a week for forty-nine weeks, but in practically all of these cases the subscriber has been told that interest would be adjusted at the time of the final payment, and in some cases banks have reserved the right to retain the first two coupons as compensation for interest. Word has just been received from Portland, Ore., that a clothing merchant, Ben Selling, had sold more than $275,000 of the 4 per cent. Liberty bonds on a dollar-a-week basis, but without any deduction for interest. It is reported that approximately 6,000 persons took advantage of the offer, and the clothier has already issued more than 13,000 receipts. In advertising his offer, Ben Selling wrote: "As you know, my business is selling clothing, but I am so anxious to see the new loan successfully floated that temporarily I have become a bond seller—I will do my bit. Will you do yours?"

DU PONT DIVIDEND IS 50%.

Special Payment of 32% for Year Added for Stockholders.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 28.—Directors of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. today declared not only a regular dividend of 4½ per cent., making 18 per cent. for the year, but a special dividend of 32 per cent., making a total of 50 per cent. for the year. While the regular dividend of 4½ per cent., payable Dec. 22 to shareholders of record Nov. 30, will be paid in cash, the special dividend will be paid in 4 per cent. Liberty bonds, payable Dec. 22, to stockholders of record Nov. 30.

A regular dividend of 1½ per cent. was declared on debenture stock of the company, payable Jan. 25, to stockholders of record Jan. 10.

A meeting of the Directors of the old company—E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company—also was held today, at which the regular quarterly dividends of 1½ per cent. on common and 1½ on preferred were declared, both payable Feb. 1 to stockholders of record Jan. 21.

MAY PAY TAXES QUARTERLY.

McAdoo Responds to Appeal of Business Men on War Imposts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—In response to appeals made by business interests of the country, an order will be issued within the next few days by Secretary McAdoo authorizing the payment of war and excess profits taxes in quarterly periods. This action is to be taken without delay, so that corporations and other business concerns whose fiscal year ends on Dec. 31 can arrange for making their reports to the Treasury Department and paying their taxes at regular intervals during the coming year.

Under the provisions of the bill, payments must be made not later than June 1, although payment in advance is authorized. Many business men protested against the collection of the taxes at one time, contending that it would drain certain districts of surplus money and cause hardships.

DEMAND FOR STEEL GROWS.

Lack of Raw Materials Still Seriously Hampers Trade.

"The week has seen an increasing demand for steel products both from the Government and from manufacturing consumers," The Iron Age will say today. "Many of the latter are buying for requirements not directly growing out of the war. Steel absorbed by the Government and by war contracts is a growing factor, and is made to seem still larger as output is cut down by coal and coke shortage.

"With the approach of Jan. 1, the date named in connection with present prices, some agitation of a lower basis for iron and steel products has started at Washington, but the trade itself calls for stability, and it is pointed out that, as only a beginning has been made in working under the new schedules, they should not now be disturbed. The larger producers have been practically a unit in carrying out the spirit of their agreement with the Government. While priority decisions are limiting the amount of steel going to some consumers, there is as yet no shutting down of plants, even in non-essential lines, though such steps may not be far off."

"Inadequacy of raw material supplies is keeping the iron and steel industry in a serious plight," The Iron Trade Review will say. "The virtually famine conditions in pig iron, especially in steel-making grades, which appeared a week ago, have been accentuated. Coal and coke shortages continue contributing factors to the undue strain upon the blast furnaces."

THE COTTON MARKET

Trade Devotes Another Day to Getting Bearings—Net Loss 7-15 Points.

The cotton market yesterday devoted another day to the task of getting its bearings in the rarefied air above the 30-cent level. Prices consequently were permitted to settle back a trifle in a quiet session, solidifying at a few points below Tuesday's level and closing with a net decline of 7 to 15 points. There was considerable realizing and evening-up for the holiday, but plenty of support against this pressure.

The market opened at a decline of 5 to 20 points under overnight selling orders and local offerings, inspired by easier cables or reports of an easier spot basis in the South. Private cables said the decline in Liverpool had been due to increased offerings from this side and a comparatively small offtake, but houses with English connections were good buyers here, and there was also domestic trade buying accompanied by reports that spinners were fixing prices. The market rallied in consequence, and buying was stimulated later by reduced estimates of the East Indian crop, and reports that the slight easing of the Southern spot basis had brought in an improved demand from Eastern spinners. The rally carried December back to Tuesday's closing figures, while later months sold 7 to 10 points net higher, but offerings increased at this level and the close was well off from the best. Reports that the coming session of Congress would take up the question of regulating the distribution of goods and other necessities uncovered in the Food Bill had rather an unsettling effect on sentiment during the middle of the morning. It seemed the most general impression, however, that any legislation along these lines would be with a view to restricting profits and regulating the margin between raw materials and the cost to ultimate consumers.

It was reported during the morning that cotton could be bought in the South at prices which would permit deliveries on December here at a profit and without loss on January. In this connection the difficulty of securing warehouse room here was pointed out, and later advices suggested that a sufficient demand had sprung up for spots to stiffen the market. Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged to 35 points lower, all markets being unchanged except Houston and Galveston. Exports today were 11,790 bales, making 1,666,191 so far this season, against 2,394,822 last year.

WHEAT.

The outlook for the new crop continues favorable with the exception of reports of lack of moisture in some sections. It is evident, however, that the acreage will not be as large as had been hoped for in view of the prospective large requirements for next season. The amount planted, however, is believed to be a record area and with favorable conditions throughout the winter and during the growing season next year a very large crop is easily possible. The movement at interior points was moderate and for the three days this week total interior receipts were 3,227,000 bushels, compared with 5,400,000 last year.

RYE—Market barely steady; No. 2 Western $1.90 cost and freight New York.

CORN.

The corn trade is not very sanguine of any immediate relief as a result of the new arrangements by which the Food Administration will control the movement. At least, there seems to be little prospect of corn being delivered on December contracts owing to the prevailing high prices for the cash article, and operators are timid about taking chances on the short side of the late months. Prices yesterday were firm, with offers readily taken by traders who had sold short in anticipation of a reaction on the promise of a more liberal movement. Toward the close, however, there was a partial decline under profit-taking for over the holiday, and final quotations showed comparatively little net change, being ¼c lower to ¼c higher. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $1.99, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, ten days' shipment, while No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.95⅝ and No. 4 yellow at $1.91⅝, New York track, 20 days' shipment, and Argentine corn at $2.05 to $2.10, free on board cars, New York, to arrive.

OATS.

The oats market again displayed a very strong undertone, prices early advancing ⅞c to 1¼c, owing to continued strength in the cash position and owing to the fact that the arrivals from the country are still proving inadequate to fill the very active demand. Exporters were not in evidence, however, and toward the close there was a reaction which left prices net unchanged to ⅛c lower. The local cash market was steady; standard quoted at 80c; No. 2 white, 80c; No. 3 white, 79½c; No. 4 white, 79c; fancy clipped white, 79½ to 81½c; ordinary clipped white, 78½c to 79½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

Reports that very large orders for hog products consisting of record quantities for Belgian relief and for the United States Government had been placed among Western packers, sent the provision market soaring to new high records. Cash pork in the West was said to have sold as high as $50, a figure never before experienced while January lard in Chicago sold at $25.52. There was a partial reaction at the close under profit taking, but final figures were at sharp gains over the previous day. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 35,000, estimated for Friday, 20,000; Kansas City received, 14,000, and Omaha, 7,800.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Owing to the narrowness of trade, the market for cottonseed oil was not influenced by the sharp upturn in hog products, and final quotations were 4 to 5 points net lower. Total sales were 1,700 barrels, and there were tenders of 500 barrels on December contracts. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

Tuesday's bulge was followed by a renewal of scattering liquidation or trade selling in the coffee market yesterday, and prices lost their slight improvement, closing at a net decline of 8 to 13 points. There appeared to be a feeling around the ring that advances would merely meet increased Brazilian offerings, and the decline was accompanied by reports of an easier tone in the primary markets. December contracts sold off to 6.85c and May to 7.30c, with the close at practically the low point. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged at 7½c for Rio 7s and 9¼c for Santos 4s. SUGAR.

Little or no relief has been noted in the general local sugar situation, but it is expected that by the first of the week about 15,000 tons will have been distributed. Western beets are not arriving in the Eastern territory owing to a shortage of freight cars, and much of the sugar is being temporarily stored in the West. The International Sugar Committee is reported to have recently taken a small quantity of full duty sugars at 5⅝c cost, insurance, and freight, equal to 6.90c duty paid for Centrifugal. It is expected that on Friday the Cuban representatives will arrive here ready to negotiate a price for the new crop Cubas. Spot prices are unchanged as follows: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅞c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,261 packages. The market is still very lightly supplied with high grade fresh creamery and the feeling on such is decidedly firm. There was no disposition, however, to force values any higher. Secondary grades moving rather slowly and there is an exceedingly wide range of values. Considerable trading in storage creamery and the feeling quiet and firm. Ladles and packing stock slow and prices barely sustained. Creamery, higher than extras, per lb., 48½@49c; extras, (92 score,) 48c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43½@47½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40½@43c; thirds, 39@40c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 49½@50c; extras, 48½@49c; firsts, 44½@48c; seconds, 41½@44c; creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 44@44½c; extras, 43@43½c; firsts, 41½@42½c; seconds, 40@41c; thirds, 38@39½c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 46@47c; good to prime, 42@45c; common to fair, 36@41½c; renovated, extras, 41@42c; firsts, 39½@40½c; lower grades, 35@38c; ladles, current make, firsts, 33½@34c; seconds, 32½@33c; lower grades, 31@32c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 30@31½c.

EGGS.—7,175 cases. Fresh gathered eggs continue in light supply, and while the demand has been affected by the high prices ruling, there is still rather more call for fancy goods than can be readily supplied. Prices rule firm on top qualities, but the offerings are of very irregular quality and value. Storage eggs continue in fair demand, and on the business reported prices are steady. The undertone of the market, however, is irregular, some dealers feeling that the statistical position is not likely to sustain the present range of prices. Nearby white eggs are in comparatively light supply, but the demand is small. Most of the stock is of mixed and irregular quality and prices are showing a very wide range; few reach top quotation. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 59@60c; extra firsts, 57@58c; firsts, 54@56c; seconds, 47@53c; thirds and poorer, 40@45c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34@35c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 33@34c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 30½@32½c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 24@30c; refrigerator, nearby whites, 38@42c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 72@76c; ordinary to good, 60@70c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 60@72c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 55@60c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 53@60c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 60@64c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 50@60c.

TAKE OVER WESTERN LINES.

Directors Act on Plan for Greater Pennsylvania Unity.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and of the Pennsylvania Company today took steps to effect a closer unity between the lines East and West of Pittsburgh. Both companies have agreed, subject to the consent required from some of the State Commissions, to transfer the leases and other operating agreements of the Western Lines, now held by the Pennsylvania Company, to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The latter company will then operate the lines now operated by the Pennsylvania Company, and the present organization west of Pittsburgh will continue to conduct the operations of the Western lines in the name of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company is not included in the arrangement.

All of the capital stock of the Pennsylvania Company is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and all of its bonds are guaranteed by the latter company. Under the plan suggested, the capital stock of the Pennsylvania Company will ultimately be surrendered and cancelled, excepting such amount as may be deemed essential to preserve the charter of the Pennsylvania Company.

The Vice Presidents, officers and employes of the Pennsylvania Company were today appointed to similar positions with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, effective Jan. 1. The titles of the new Vice Presidents will be:

J. J. Turner, Senior Vice President, with general supervision over all departments of the Western lines.

E. B. Taylor, Vice President in charge finance and accounting.

D. T. McCabe, Vice President in charge of traffic.

C. L. Peck, Vice President in charge of operation.

Benjamin McKeen, Vice President in charge of real estate and purchases.

STATE AS TRACTION BANKER.

Massachusetts May Supply Equipment and Collect in Installments.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—A suggestion that the State, for a limited period, act as banker for the street railways of Massachusetts and purchase necessary equipment, for which they might pay on the installment plan, was made today to the Special Legislative Commission on Street Railways by Chairman Frederick J. MacLeod on behalf of the Public Service Commission.

This plan of giving the railway companies the benefit of the Commonwealth's credit was regarded by the commission as a compromise between immediate general fare increases and public ownership.

Chairman MacLeod said if the State was prepared now public ownership might be the solution, but the problems of readjustment involved would be too serious for the public to cope with under present war-time conditions.

Mitchell Motors Passes Dividend.

Directors of the Mitchell Motors Company of Racine, Wis., have passed the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on the capital stock of the company. Dividend payments on the issue were started in November, 1916, the company having been formed in July of that year with a capitalization of 125,000 shares of no par value. Heretofore the company was engaged in the manufacture of pleasure cars, but recently it closed a contract with the Government for the production of motor trucks. This new venture, it is asserted, requires substantial working capital, and for that reason the Directors thought it best to omit the dividend at this time.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Charles E. Whyard has been appointed an assistant cashier of the Greenwich Bank, of which he has been an employe for more than sixteen years. He was recently manager of the bank's Herald Square branch.

The Stock Exchange has admitted to the list: Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railway Company, $1,083,000 consolidated mortgage 4½ per cent. bonds, due May 1, 1957.

The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company has sold approximately $4,000,000 first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, maturing 1939, to Spencer Trask & Co. and the National City Company.

The Wharton Steel Company has called a special meeting of the shareholders for Monday, December 3, to act upon a proposition to increase the capital stock from $3,000,000 to $10,000,000.

The merger agreement by which the Westmoreland Coal Company may absorb the Penn Gas Coal Company and the Manor Gas Coal Company, two subsidiaries, will be voted on at a special meeting of the stockholders to be held December 11.

The Chicago Federal Reserve Bank has advanced the rates of discount ½ of 1 per cent. for all maturities.

Moreau Delano of Brown Bros. & Co. and James L. Ashley, Secretary and Treasurer of the International Nickel Company, have been elected Directors of the American Bank Note Company, succeeding Colonel Ambrose Monell, resigned, to take up war duties, and one other vacancy.

The issue of $3,000,000 Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston two-year 6 per cent. notes offered by a syndicate composed of Lee, Higginson & Co., the Old Colony Trust Company, F. S. Mosely & Co., Kidder, Peabody & Co., and Parkinson and Burr, has all been sold.

The M. and M. Journal's current issue carries the names of thirty-eight employes of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank who have gone to war.

Columbia Gas and Electric Company reports production of 308,640 gallons of gasoline for the week of Nov. 16, beating the highest previous record of 297,598 gallons, made the preceding week.

Bonbright & Co., Inc., are offering $1,500,000 of United Light and Railways Company 6 per cent. secured gold notes under a covenant to pay the normal income tax.

Bank Employes Get Bonus.

In order to counterbalance in some degree the effect of advancing living costs, the Executive Committee of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank has voted a special distribution to all members of the staff receiving less than $4,000 a year. Payments will be made quarterly, the first installment of 4 per cent. of the yearly salary of the clerks having just been paid. This special distribution has no relation to that which is usually made in the Christmas season, and it does not affect the salary advances which are made through the year.

CENSURES CLARK FOR LOAN SPEECH

Gov. Strong Shows That Speaker Had No Basis for His Attack on Bankers.

GIVES OUT THEIR LETTERS

Asks How the Foreign Born Can Be Expected to be Loyal in Face of Such Reckless Accusations.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York made public yesterday copies of letters recently exchanged between Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and Benjamin Strong, Governor of the bank, in reference to the Speaker's assertion a month ago that a "ring" of New York financiers was endeavoring to make the Liberty Loan a partial failure so that the next war loan would bear a higher rate of interest.

Speaker Clark's Letter.

Speaker Clark's letter to Governor Strong follows:

Bowling Green, Mo., Nov. 2, 1917.
Hon. Benjamin Strong, Esq., Governor Federal Reserve Bank of New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir—So far as I know the sequence of affairs was this. The night of Oct. 24 I made a speech in Oklahoma City to a very large audience in favor of the Liberty Loan, but as I was making two speeches a day of that sort I could not remain in any one town very long. Consequently I left Oklahoma City and was on the road to St. Louis before you sent your telegram. It finally caught up with me here by mail on the 29th. I think it arrived here in the mail on the 28th.

The remarks complained of were made when all the papers were ablaze with charges that the big cities in the country were lagging behind in subscribing for the loan, especially New York. As soon as I got to St. Louis and saw the papers I immediately made a statement withdrawing my criticism because in the mean time New York seemed to have come to the front with her full quota. I received another copy of your telegram here which I suppose was simply sent out by the telegraph company.

The paper stated the next day that you were very much pleased with the fact that I withdrew the charges. When I left Washington it was currently reported that New York was lagging behind. On Oct. 12 The New York World in an editorial headed "Back Fire on Wall Street," said:

"The Stock Exchange informs the American people daily with its panic prices that it has little faith in the securities which represent the public and good faith of the United States. If this is the way to commend the Liberty Loan, what would the Kaiser do if he were active in the market?"

On the 13th, in an editorial entitled "How Wall Street Goes to War," The New York World said: "In ordinary times Stock Exchange sentiment is not easy to gauge. Today, however, he who runs may read. It is against the United States." The World is published under your nose.

I take it for granted that you read these editorials in The New York World. The people out West read them, I among the rest, and it was not a very violent conclusion, as The World is supposed to be one of the great and leading lights in the newspaper realm, that The World knew what it was talking about.

These editorials in The New York World and other similar ones in the Chicago papers and all the rest of the papers were the basis of my remarks. As soon as I learned the facts, I did what The New York World has never done and never will do, and that is withdraw the charges. The New York World abused me like a pickpocket for reiterating what it said on the 12th and 13th of October. This is the whole tale so far as I am concerned. Very truly,
CHAMP CLARK.

Governor Strong's Reply.

Governor Strong's reply to Speaker Clark is as follows:

Nov. 22, 1917.
Hon. Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir—Your letter of Nov. 2 has been forwarded to me here. The sequence of affairs to which you refer was as follows:

On Oct. 24, previous to addressing an audience in Oklahoma City, you were reported to have stated, in an interview given to the press, that a "ring" of New York financiers was hampering the Government by endeavoring to make the Liberty Loan a partial failure so that the next loan would bear a higher rate of interest. You characterized these unnamed financiers as traitors, the spiritual descendants of the ring that operated in just such an emergency during the civil war, and positively refused to divulge the sources of your information. The implication to be drawn from your interview was clearly that you had "sources of information."

On Oct. 26 you stated to an Associated Press representative in St. Louis that you were quoted substantially correctly, had nothing to retract, and that the report that the New York district's subscription was 38 per cent. of its quota at the time of your first statement showed that some one was "pulling against the collar."

Three hours later on the same day you withdrew the charge, and stated that you had made it because the newspapers were full of stories about the sale of Liberty bonds lagging all over the country; that when the first Liberty bonds were issued "some fellows in New York had tried to beat the price down below par," and that in view of that fact you had made your statement in Oklahoma City.

And now, on Nov. 2 you wrote me that your conclusion that a "ring" of New York financiers had entered into a treasonable conspiracy was the outgrowth of reading two editorials in The New York World, printed on Oct. 12 and Oct. 13, and that these editorials were the basis of your remarks. Neither of the editorials refered to, which I have before me, made any reference to higher rates of interest on subsequent loans; they dealt entirely to the decline in security prices on the Stock Exchange and its supposed effect upon the success of the loan.

It seems apparent that at no time did you have the slightest ground for publicly or privately charging the most serious crime in time of war, "treason," against a group of unnamed men; that the basis of your remarks was not, as you at first stated, "sources of information," but two editorials in The New York World, which simply expressed the opinions or conclusions of the author of the editorials regarding the stock market, and that your so-called retraction sought to imply that other acts of these New York financiers justified your charges, though your first surmise had turned out to be incorrect.

The facts are that in both the first and second Liberty Loan the New York District exceeded every other district in the percentage of subscriptions to quota apportioned, that it has made temporary loans to the Government since our entry into the war, exceeding the total of all other districts combined, has provided not far from half of all the fund furnished our Government for war purposes, has in addition purchased over one hundred millions of the bonds originally subscribed in other Federal Reserve districts, has pledged for banking loans to insure a stable money market in aid of the loan the sum of over three hundred million dollars; had in the first Liberty Loan pledged a subscription of $300,000,000, to make up shortages in other districts, if required, and has led the country in its support of the Federal Reserve system by adding the resources of State banks and trust companies, aggregating nearly three billion dollars in a period of two months.

Figures have just been furnished me, based upon the wealth of the nation in 1912, which I believe to be reliable, which indicate that the New York Reserve District subscribed 5.13 per cent. of the total wealth of the district to the second Liberty Loan, and the Kansas City District, which includes part of your own State, .88 per cent. of its total wealth, the New York percentage being the highest and the Kansas City District the lowest of all twelve districts.

A time is coming in this country, Mr. Speaker, when the demand will be made that our Representatives in Congress represent the country of which they are citizens, and not alone the section where they chance to reside. Your groundless statement has surely done no harm, because the facts so completely refute it. But the pitiable fact remains that the suspicion of wrongdoing by one part of the country is implanted in another section, is kept alive, nourished, and developed, usually for selfish political purposes, by just such irresponsible charges as yours. You should seek the "spiritual descendants" of those men of civil war days, to whom you refer, among those who, like yourself, are promoting sectional and class distrust and suspicion, not during those days of sorrow, when our country was engaged in a fratricidal struggle, but now, when our sons are defending our country against treacherous attack from abroad. This great country of ours, which shelters 35,000,000 of foreign birth or parentage, is now engaged in a death struggle with a relentless enemy. If the officers of our Government make reckless charges of treason against our leading business men, how may these new citizens of ours be expected to reverence their new country?

Almost without exception these New York financiers, to whom you refer, including the writer, have sons in the American Army in France. I am informed that you also have a son in the service. You must not overlook, Mr. Speaker, that a united country will insure those boys a safe and victorious return more certainly than will sectional discord and suspicion. The people of your own section of the West will insist upon this unity, as we do in the East. Yours truly,
BENJ. STRONG.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

In the closing trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange after a dull day, with a narrow list, prices weakened as the effect of the closing out of long positions on the eve of the holiday. The market showed a willingness to take on shares at concessions, and, while the final prices were at net declines, yet, in most instances, they were above the low figures recorded in the morning. Steel common, which accounted for more than half the trading, opened ¼ down at 97¼, sold to 96⅜, rallied to 97½, and closed at 97.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

West side investment properties were features of the realty market yesterday, which was one of the most active in recent months. Well-located apartment houses held the centre of attention, most of the important transactions concerning holdings of this type, although some of the business of the day also concerned commercial buildings.

The leading deal of the day involved the St. Urban, a twelve-story apartment house at the southeast corner of Central Park West and Eighty-ninth Street, on a plot 125 by 160, which was sold by the Barston Realty Company, Adolph Kastor, President, to Frederick Brown, the operator. The building contains forty-seven apartments and carries an annual rent roll of $144,000. It is assessed by the city at $1,000,000.

In part payment the purchaser gave the two four-story brownstone dwellings at 195 to 197 Madison Avenue on a plot 49.8 by 100, at the southeast corner of Thirty-fifth Street, formerly owned and occupied by the late Morris K. Jesup. The corner is directly opposite the department store of B. Altman & Co., and is on the same block with the Cameron Building, one of the first commercial structures to test the famous Murray Hill residential restriction.

Harry B. Cutner was the broker in the transaction, which involved properties valued at about $1,500,000. Rose & Paskus represented the Barston Realty Company as attorney and Julius H. Sieser acted for Mr. Brown.

The Queen Mab Co. Buys Another $900,000 Heights Apartment.

The Queen Mab Company has increased its holdings on Washington Heights by the purchase of 563 and 565 West 189th Street from the A. & K. Construction Company, of which Benjamin P. Koch is President.

The property, which was held at $90,000, consists of a five and one-half story twenty-five-family new law apartment, occupying a plot 62.6 by 100, adjoining the corner of St. Nicholas Avenue.

Nehring Brothers negotiated the sale. This transaction completes the sale through the same brokers of the four houses built by the A. & K. Construction Company, occupying a plot 125 by 100, and running through from 189th to 190th Streets.

They are known as 550 and 565 West 189th Street and 562 to 566 West 190th Street, and yield an aggregate rental of $43,000 a year. They were held at $400,000, and have been disposed of by the builders during the last eight months.

Ely Bernays purchased the 190th Street houses and the Queen Mab Company the 189th Street property.

Reported Deal in the Dyckman Section.

The Hussle Construction Company is reported to have sold 306 Haven Avenue, a five-story apartment house on a plot 50 by 97, located on the corner of 179th Street.

East Side Business Leases.

Important East Side commercial leases were reported yesterday affecting properties on East 51st Street and on Fourth Avenue. Michael A. Hoffman leased for a term of twenty-one years, at an aggregate rental of about $110,000, the two three-story stables at 167 to 169 East 51st, on a plot 30.10 by 100; also the abutting similar property at 160 East 52d Street, on a lot 20 by 100. The lessees are Hyman & Rosenfeld, who plan to alter the buildings into a modern garage.

The four-story tenement at 465 Fourth Avenue was leased for a term of twenty-one years by Herman Buchtenkirch to Samuel and Louis Grossman, restaurateurs, who will alter the property to meet their own requirements. The lease involves a rental aggregating about $100,000 for the term. Henry Hof was the broker in both transactions.

Tenant Buys West Side Apartment.

Lewine & Kempner have sold the two four-story flats, at 73 to 75 Amsterdam Avenue, southeast corner of 63rd Street, on a plot 46 by 75. Viscardi Brothers, druggists, who are tenants of the corner store, are the buyers and will hold the properties for investment. They were acquired about a year ago by the seller from the Stein Estate and have been held at $70,000. David Lion was the broker in the present sale.

Bank Sells Apartment House.

The six-story apartment house at 227 to 229 West 141st Street, on a plot 62.6 by 99.11, has been sold by the Citizens Savings Bank to the Falmouth Realty Company, for $55,000. The property is assessed at $74,000.

The buyer has obtained from the bank a first mortgage loan of $50,000 at 5 per cent., due November 15, 1922.

Broadway Lots in Trade.

The Four West Fifty-Seventh Street Company, W. Emlen Roosevelt, President, has sold the plot of lots on the west side of Broadway, midway between 122d and 123d Streets, and adjoining the Hazelton Court apartments, to Harry J. Luce, President of the Acker, Merrall & Condit Company.

The lot have a frontage of more than 126 feet and were given in exchange for the business building at 37 West 32d Street, reported sold on Tuesday. William B. May & Company negotiated the deal.

Tenement in Cash Sale.

Virginia Kent White has resold, for cash, the six-story tenement at 411 to 413 East Fifty-sixth Street, on a plot 40 by 97.2, near First Avenue. Mrs. White purchased the property on April 25, at an auction sale conducted by Arthur C. Sheridan.

Greene Street Loft Sold by Lorillard Estate.

The five-story loft, store, and building, 68 Greene Street, on a plot 30 by 100, has been sold by the Lorillard Estate. A client of the Douglas Robinson-Charles S. Brown Company, is reported to be the buyer. The property, which is located 125 feet north of Broome Street, has been held by the estate for a number of years, and is assessed by the city for taxation purposes at $35,000.

Other Manhattan Deals.

Joseph P. Day sold for the Conroy Estate a three-story tenement, on a lot 24 by 77.3, at 207 Henry Street, immediately adjoining the Henry Street Settlement. This property has been in the hands of the Conroy Estate for more than sixty years, and is the first change of ownership in that time. The property is assessed at $12,500.

Julian F. Strzelecki of Brooklyn has purchased for $24,000, from the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, the property at 117 Broad Street, on a lot 22.6 by 75.

Bronx Sales.

Samuel Cowen sold a dwelling on a plot of fourteen lots, situated at Eastern Boulevard and Arnow Place, for the Newport Holding Company, to a builder.

Brooklyn.

Tutino & Cerny sold for the Brooklyn Investors' Corporation, to a client for investment, the three-story double brick flat 730 Fifty-ninth Street.

Queens Borough Sales.

The Barlelian Realty Corporation sold to the Linoleum Company of Manhattan a plot 160 by 230 feet adjacent to its present holdings on South View Street, Jamaica.

The Bay View Heights Company sold to M. A. McFarland of Manhattan a plot 40 by 100 feet on the east side of Grand Avenue, 140 feet north of Arthur Avenue, and a plot 40 by 100 feet on the west side of Birch Street, 86 feet north of Old South Road, Jamaica.

J. Clements sold to E. H. Blakey of Brooklyn the property 80 by 100 feet on the east side of Winthrop Avenue, [illegible] feet north of Washington Avenue, Belle Harbor.

Staten Island.

Cornelius G. Kolff sold for a client eleven lots on Columbia Street, West New Brighton, to Carl F. Grieshaber and Norman Behrens. The purchasers will immediately improve the property with one-family cottages.

[illegible] & Schwab sold for the Tabb estate the old-fashioned dwelling at [illegible] Richmond Terrace, New Brighton, to Mrs. Katherine K. Delaney. The property has a frontage of 150 feet on Richmond Terrace and a depth of [illegible] feet running through to First [illegible].

William W. Hyde Sells Greenwich Estate to New Yorker.

[illegible] Thomas of New York City has purchased the residence of Mrs. William W. Hyde on Hillside Road, Greenwich, Conn., for about twenty-five thousand dollars. The property consists of a house, garage and three acres of land.

New Jersey.

Edward P. Hamilton & Co. sold for the Litchfield Company to a Mr. Wood of Philadelphia thirteen acres with buildings, on Beaufort Avenue, near Essex Fells, N. J.

Commercial Leases.

The Charles F. Noyes Company has leased for the Exchange Buffet Corporation to the L. C. Smith Brothers Typewriter Company for a term of years the ground floor, 6, 8, and 10 Vesey Street, at an aggregate rental of approximately $100,000. With this lease the Astor House building, in which this store is located, is 100 per cent. occupied. The Noyes Company originally leased the store and basement, of which these premises are a part, to the Exchange Buffet Corporation for twenty-one years at an aggregate rental of about $350,000.

Joseph P. Day has leased to the Warwick Thompson Company the old Stevenson Brewery, known as 504-508 West Fortieth Street. The property is improved with a five-story brick building, containing about 30,000 square feet. The new tenants intend to make extensive alterations.

Lease Rockaway Hotels.

The Lewis H. May Company leased for A. S. Iserson the Palace Hotel, fronting on the Atlantic Ocean, between Beach Thirtieth and Beach Thirty-first Streets; also for A. Gussow the Shelbourne Hotel, fronting on the ocean between Beach Twenty-ninth and Beach Thirtieth Streets, at Edgemere, L. I., to Miriam M. Bibo. Both hotels adjoin and are of recent construction. The leases are for a term at the rate of $19,000 a season.

Realty Note.

Joseph P. Day has sold two properties for the Union Seed and Fertilizer Company, one in Huntington, Tenn., to H. Priest for development, and the other, a large factory in Grenada, Miss., to a syndicate represented by the Bank of Grenada. The sales show New York's growth as a centre for the sale of manufacturing property throughout the country.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Conditions are still much unsettled over the eastern half of the country, except in the lake region, with an increasing disturbance over the mouth of the Ohio River and another off the southern New England Coast, with a ridge of high pressure between. As a result rains and snows were general in New England, the Middle Atlantic States, and from the lower lake region southwestward through Eastern Texas and Oklahoma, with a fall of rain over Western Arkansas, Eastern Oklahoma, and Northeastern Texas.

There is also a marked disturbance over the Canadian Northwest, attended by scattering rains to the southwestward into the extreme north portions of Nevada and California. It is warmer in the Atlantic States and the lower lake region, although still quite cold in New England, and it is cooler in the lower Mississippi Valley and the west Gulf States.

In the West temperatures are slightly higher as a rule and above the seasonal average.

The lower Ohio Valley disturbance will probably move east-northeastward attended by rains Thursday in the Ohio Valley, Central and Eastern Tennessee, Alabama and the South Atlantic States and by rain or snow in the west lower lake region. During Thursday night and Friday the rain and snow will extend into the Middle Atlantic States and New England, probably mostly snow in New England. In the upper lake region the weather will be partly cloudy to cloudy Thursday and Friday and it will be fair Friday in the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the South. It will be somewhat colder Thursday and Thursday night in Tennessee and the east Gulf States and on Friday in the South Atlantic States.

Winds for Thursday and Friday along the North Atlantic coast will be moderate to fresh northwest and west, with snow Thursday; Friday probably fair. Middle Atlantic coast, moderate west, becoming variable; partly cloudy. South Atlantic coast, moderate south and southwest, except east and southeast off the Florida coast; partly cloudy.

FORECASTS TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York and Southern New England—Generally fair Thursday. Friday, snow or rain.

New York and Eastern Pennsylvania—Cloudy Thursday. Friday, probably rain.

Western New York—Cloudy Thurs., local snows at night or Friday.

Northern New England—Local snows Thursday and probably Friday.

THANKSGIVING FOOD NEVER SO EXPENSIVE

Turkeys Get Up to 50 Cents a Pound and Cranberries Bring 25 Cents a Quart.

A DAY OF SOLDIER DINNERS

Hotels, Restaurants, and Homes Vie for the Honor of Entertaining Men in Service.

New York will pay more for its Thanksgiving dinner today than ever before. Turkeys, which last year sold at from 35 to 40 cents a pound, are selling this year at 45 and 50 cents. At wholesale turkeys were sold in downtown markets yesterday at from 40 to 43 cents.

Cranberries, which last Thanksgiving cost from 12 to 15 cents a quart, are quoted this year at from 20 to 25 cents a quart. Eggs, which last year cost from 55 to 70 cents a dozen, according to age, are selling this year at from 65 to 85 cents a dozen. Butter is 55 cents instead of 48, the price at which all grumbled last year. Broilers are offered at 55 cents a pound. Last year they were 43 cents.

Pumpkins, when are quoted at from 20 to 30 cents, are about the same as last year. Roasting chicken, cheese, potatoes, celery and lettuce cost less this year than last.

Thanksgiving dinners with soldiers and sailors for guests will be a feature of the day. The Union League Club will entertain 200 soldiers from Camp Upton at noonday dinner, and a number of the club's members will provide for 200 negro soldiers from the 367th Infantry Regiment at Libya Hall, Seventh Avenue and 139th Street. Souvenirs will be distributed to the guests at both dinners.

One of the largest of the day's public dinners to the nation's fighters will probably be that of the National Service Commission of 50 East Forty-second Street, to 1,000 soldiers, sailors, and marines, at the Twelfth Regiment Armory at 4 P. M. There will also be an entertainment to which an additional thousand men, who will have dined at homes throughout the city, have been invited.

Five hundred sailors will be the guests of James B. Regan in the banquet room of the Hotel Knickerbocker at 1 P. M. Entertainment will be furnished afterward by George M. Cohan, Raymond Hitchcock, the Jolly Sisters, and Harry Fox. Five hundred and twenty-five soldiers will be entertained at the Central Branch of the Y. M. C. A., 610 Lexington Avenue, at 1 P. M. One hundred and fifty soldiers will be diner and entertained at the Hofbrau Restaurant, and the same number will receive an elaborate meal at the St. Regis. Following the latter dinner, R. M. Hahn has arranged for a vaudeville performance by Savoy and Brennan, Van and Schenck, the Courtney Sisters, and Harry Fox. Mr. Hahn is also paying the railroad fares of the 150 men from and back to Camp Mills. Adolph Lorber will entertain 1,200 soldiers throughout the day.

Three hundred soldiers will dine at the homes of citizens through arrangements made by the National League for Women's Service. Miss Helen Winne, director of the league's Sailors' and Soldiers' Club, said yesterday that she had had 150 more applications from would-be hosts than she could fill from her lists of soldiers and sailors. Among members of the league who are entertaining large parties of soldiers at their homes are Mrs. Benjamin Guggenheim, Mrs. George D. Pratt, Mrs. Morris Loeb, Mrs. William Scott Pyle, Mrs. N. R. Tinker, Mrs. Charles D. Dickey, Mrs. James Parrish Lee, and Mrs. H. B. Conrad. Theatre parties will be given to the soldiers after several of these dinners. A dinner and dance will be given to the soldiers and sailors at the league by Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim and Miss Julian Cutting.

The Catholic Club will entertain several hundred sailors at dinner at 120 West Fifty-ninth Street.

Several dinners to soldiers will take place at the Hotel Majestic. Among the hosts will be the Rotary Club, Arthur Somers Roche, President John T. Sproull of the Coal and Iron National Bank; Vice President C. B. Seger of the Union Pacific Railway; John Liggett, Henry Wollman, L. E. Waterman, and Louis H. Chalif.

In addition to these and many other soldier dinners throughout the city, William Waldorf Astor will give his customary annual Thanksgiving celebration and dinner to several hundred newsboys at 244 William Street. Charles H. Harris distributed fifty dinner baskets to East Side poor folk. Besides many good things to eat, a $2 note will accompany each basket. To be sure that he is really doing his Thanksgiving bit, Mr. Harris is giving a Thanksgiving dinner to both the staff and patients of the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases and is entertaining a number of soldiers at dinner in his own home.

The Men's Club of Temple Israel in Brooklyn started a two-day program of entertainment for fifty soldiers with a supper and theatre party, to be followed by breakfast, an auto ride, dinner, and an entertainment at the Unity Club.

All sailors and soldiers will be welcome today at Madison Square Garden, where a committee has prepared an entertainment for them, to begin at 3 o'clock and end at midnight. There will be five bands, concerts, boxing contests, and moving picture shows. Each soldier or sailor will be permitted to bring one civilian guest with him.

Police Captain John D. Ormsby of the Traffic Squad, who recently won a $50 prize for the best suggestion for preventing traffic accidents, sent the money yesterday to Mrs. Arthur Woods, wife of the Police Commissioner, for Thanksgiving distribution. Mrs. Woods said she would use the money to buy Thanksgiving dinners for twenty needy families of policemen who died in the line of duty.

Special Thanksgiving services will be held in most of the churches. In Old First Church, Fifth Avenue and Twelfth Street, the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield will preach on "Over the Top."

The Hebrew Veterans of the War with Spain will give a patriotic service at the Mount Morris Theatre at 10 A. M. The speakers will be Edward Lazansky, Maurice Simmons, the Rev. Dr. Herbert S. Goldstein, and Congressman Isaac Siegel.

The annual Thanksgiving Eve dance and entertainment of the senior clubs of the Henry Street Settlement was held last night at Clinton Hall, 151 Clinton Street. The gathering is usually in honor of the debutantes of the settlement, and so it was this year, but in addition, the former members of the settlement's boys' clubs now in the national service were guests of honor. Most of the twenty settlement alumni at Camp Upton were present, and there were others in uniform from other stations. Altogether, the settlement has ninety men in the service. Balalaika's Orchestra and the settlement's Russian dancers provided the entertainment that preceded the dance.

LOTS TO EAT AT CAMP UPTON

Tons of Turkey and the Fixings for the Few Who Couldn't Get Away.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, YAPHANK, L. I., Nov. 28.—More than half of the New York City division left camp this afternoon for the Thanksgiving holiday. The remainder of the men, who could not be accommodated on the trains over the one-track railroad leading to New York, will spend the day either at camp or as guests of neighboring farmers and residents of surrounding towns. Even the military police, who have borne the brunt of the guard duty at Camp Upton, got passes for the holiday, and their work is being performed for the most part by special guards detailed from infantry and artillery organizations.

For the men left in camp there will be no lack of good things to eat tomorrow at noon. According to Captain Edwin Simpson of the Quartermaster Corps, who is the Divisional Sustenance Officer, Camp Upton has on hand 40,000 pounds of turkey, or about 19 ounces per man. Other items in tomorrow's menu include five carloads of celery and oranges, 10,000 pounds of mincemeat, and 14,000 pounds of assorted nuts. In addition to these supplies from the Quartermaster stores, other dainties will be provided by company chefs which are purchased from company funds.

The soldiers woke this morning to find the ground covered with snow, and trench warfare exercises gave way in interest to snowball fights, in which the missiles were hurled according to instruction given in hand grenade throwing.

PRESIDENT GETS HIS TURKEY

Gift of South Trimble Delayed, However, by Railroad Congestion.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Railroad congestion delayed until the eleventh hour the arrival of a forty-pound turkey raised on a Kentucky farm for the Thanksgiving dinner at the White House.

The turkey, the gift of South Trimble, Clerk of the House, and especially fattened on a diet of acorns and chestnuts, finally reached Washington today after many days' traveling.

ROOSEVELT'S THANKSGIVING

Tells Nation Our Fighters Are Cause for Gratitude.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's Thanksgiving greeting to the country today was:

"We have cause for profound thanksgiving for all of the men in the regular army, in the National Guard, the national army, and the navy, because these are Americans who are acting in accordance with the highest ideals of the American people."

Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt and their daughter, Mrs. Richard Derby, and her two children will spend the day quietly at Sagamore Hill.

United States Senator Reed Smoot, Congressman Madden of Illinois, and one or two members of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee visited Sagamore Hill today and had luncheon with Colonel Roosevelt. What was discussed was not learned.

TURKS CLING TO JERUSALEM

Maurice Says British Cannot Take City Without a Pitched Battle.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—"Our troops are now in sight of Jerusalem," said General F. B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations at the War Office, today, "but the Turks have had time to get up reserves and make a stand and it is probable that Jerusalem will not fall without another definite battle.

"The meaning of the recent lull on the Palestine front is that we must get up fresh troops, guns, supplies, and munitions for that battle."

PETROGRAD, Tuesday, Nov. 27.—A delegation of Jews appeared at the British Embassy today to express its gratitude for the action of the Entente Allies with reference to Palestine.

HAS PLAN TO HURRY SUBWAY OPERATION

President Dowling of the Aldermen Would Open Partial Service on New Lines.

WRITES TO SERVICE BOARD

Points Out That In Three Weeks There Will Be a Heavy Demand on Transportation.

Under the impression that the Public Service Commission would begin interrogating officials of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company yesterday concerning delay in completing the Lexington Avenue and Seventh Avenue subways, President Frank L. Dowling of the Board of Aldermen wrote to the commission urging it to work out some plan by which the completed parts of the two lines might be put into immediate operation. In reply to the letter Commissioner Whitney said that all the suggestions contained in Mr. Dowling's letter had been discussed by the commission, and that what he had asked the commission to do had already been done.

Mr. Dowling's letter asked if local service on the lines could not be operated fifteen days in advance of through express service, and he called attention to the fact that work was carried on in the tubes only eight hours a day out of the twenty-four. He also called the commission's attention to the holiday period, when the transit lines of the city have to stand the heaviest strain of the year, and said that numerous persons had appealed to him to do what he could to hurry along the work.

"Within three weeks," he said, "the holiday shopping movement will be at its height."

He declared that he was credibly informed that less than 100 feet of track and contact rail remained to be laid on the Seventh Avenue line and that practically all of the running and contact rails on the Seventh Avenue line were ready for use. The only barrier to the operation of trains on the Lexington Avenue line, so far as Mr. Dowling knows, are a few yards of rock excavation.

"The remainder of the general construction work," he wrote, "for the completion of the so-called 'H' system, representing an outlay of public funds of approximately $32,000,000 under Lexington Avenue and $13,000,000 under Seventh Avenue, has been so far completed as to admit of emergency operation.

Mr. Dowling asked if it would not be possible to operate the trains on the two lines over the express tracks sixteen hours a day, providing no stops were made in this borough on the Lexington Avenue line and none on the Seventh Avenue line south of the Pennsylvania Station except at the terminals at Rector Street and the Battery. Then his letter says:

"If this service could be undertaken for a period of approximately fourteen hours daily in order to relieve the holiday traffic, it would in no wise interfere with the work of completion of local stations, which are on a different level, and it could be suspended for a period of approximately ten hours daily after the usual rush of the evening traffic. This would permit of nine or ten hours in each twenty-four in uninterrupted labor on the express stations. Such labor in any event is carried on by artificial light, and the only hardship, if such it might be called, that would be entailed by securing this traffic would be in having workmen employed by artificial light at night instead of by artificial light during the day.

"It has occurred to me that as the Lexington Avenue trains will leave the existing tube at Forty-first Street without a grade crossover there would be neither danger nor congestion entailed by operating a certain percentage of the Bronx express trains up and down Lexington Avenue and having the remainder continue the present Lenox Avenue-Bronx service. The physical connection between the existing tube and the new Lexington Avenue tube at 149th Street and Mott Avenue is, I believe, today ready for the putting down of rails, so that it will be possible to have the Lexington Avenue trains continue north of 149th Street either in the present subway or along the Jerome Avenue branch of the Lexington Avenue system.

"As to the new Seventh Avenue tube, the express station at the Pennsylvania Station is at present in use in part, and the run through the Seventh Avenue tube south of that point to lower Manhattan is not a long one."

Public Service Commissioner Whitney said in his comment on the letter:

"The commission ten days ago called a public hearing and called upon Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the Interborough, to be prepared to testify as to what work would need to be accelerated in order to have early operation. These various suggestions seem to have been embodied in a letter of his own by Mr. Dowling, although all the suggestions are being acted on by the commission."

TELLS OF CATHOLIC WAR AID

Knights of Columbus Officer Says Order Has Contributed 38 Chaplains.

At the annual entertainment of Vera Cruz Council of the Knights of Columbus, given last night at the Central Opera House, William P. Larkin, Supreme Director of the Knights of Columbus, spoke on the drive for $3,000,000 that the Knights of Columbus are making to establish chapels and places of recreation for the men at the training camps in this country and for the soldiers abroad. Mr. Larkin said that $1,300,000 had already been contributed, with which sixty-eight recreation buildings had been erected in the various camps. The Knights of Columbus, he said, had already provided thirty-eight Catholic Chaplains, in addition to those maintained by the Government.

COAL SHIPMENTS TO HAVE PRIORITY

City. The Fuel Administration made this brief announcement:

"Albert H. Wiggin, State Fuel Administrator for New York, today notified the United States Fuel Administration that there was an apparent shortage of coal for that city. Mr. Wiggin stated that it appeared that coal amounting to several hundred thousand tons consigned to New York had been diverted to other cities. The United States Fuel Administration took action at once to meet the situation in New York."

Dr. Garfield said that the Susquehanna and Lehigh Valley Railroads were short about 200,000 tons in shipments to New York City because of the heavy shipments which had gone to the Northwest. Orders were issued that this situation must be corrected at once and heavy shipments made to New York. With the proposed priority order in effect it is assured that a critical situation will be avoided, and that New York City will get the coal it needs.

The Railroads' War Board has been asked to co-operate with the coal operators. The committee of Vice Presidents which has charge of the voluntary pooling of cars, trackage, and equipment also will be called upon for aid.

Failure at either end of the program, it was generally admitted tonight, would provide a great impetus toward immediate Government direction of coal mines and railroads for the period of the war. In a sense the proposition which has now been agreed upon is a test of what the coal operators and railroads will and can accomplish.

The National Coal Association, which represents the operators, placed itself on record tonight in a statement which read in part:

"Ordinarily at this time of the year there is in the hands of consumers a supply of bituminous coal estimated to be sufficient to meet their needs for thirty days. A careful canvass by the association and other agencies of the present stocks of fuel in the country discloses that at this time there is on hand less than a week's supply, and that, with the exception of a few sections of the country, such as the Northwest, the entire country is facing a fuel famine.

Tell of Operators' Efforts.

"Bituminous coal operators of the National Coal Association, representing an output of more than 250,000,000 tons monthly, have been endeavoring for weeks past to correct this situation. They have sought unceasingly to bring production of their mines to capacity.

"The latest report of the United States Geological Survey shows that for the week ending Nov. 10 bituminous mines in the great producing sections of the country produced only 77.2 per cent. of the amount they were capable of producing. This means that were all conditions in harmony with the desire of bituminous operators to obtain a 100 per cent. output from the mines, the yield of coal would have been approximately one-third greater than it has been. Also while official Government figures show the output of coal during the week of Nov. 17 to have been higher than in any week since July, they show that mines produced but three-fourths the amount of coal they were capable of producing.

"The fact that coal production was higher this week than at any time since July does not mean that it was sufficient to meet the military, naval, industrial, and domestic needs of the nation. On the contrary, coal consumption has increased at a much greater rate than production during the period since July, and the output for the week of Nov. 17, although establishing a new record for four months, was not sufficient to meet the heavy demands of the nation's war time activities.

"Analyzing the inability of the mines to produce the amount of coal they are capable of producing, the Geological Survey states that two thirds of this inability was directly due to a shortage of cars.

"Only orders establishing the preferential movement of coal by the railroads, issued at once, can correct the situation. The public must recognize that such orders are for its benefit, and, therefore, must support the railroads in carrying them out.

"Bituminous coal operators will certainly run their mines to the limit of production, if they are given the opportunity."

The decision as to just how far the priority order shall affect non-essential industries will be considered at conferences.

In an official communication to the Canadian Fuel Controller, the Fuel Administration pointed out that Canada would be expected to resort to the same measures to save coal as are being adopted in the United States. Most of the Canadian coal supply is derived from the United States, and the Fuel Administration has undertaken to give Canada a pro rata share of the United States' supply on the same basis as the various States of the Union.

POOL BOARD STOPS FAST FREIGHT LINES

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 28.—The committee appointed by the Railroad War Board to put into operation the plan to pool tracks and equipment of Eastern railroads for the period of the war took radical action to facilitate transportation at its first meeting here today.

Orders were issued affecting the various railroads operating in the territory east of the Mississippi and north and south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers as follows:

To embargo immediately the shipment of all export steel billets, bars, plates, scrap and pig iron, except that intended for the use abroad of the United States Government.

To divert all through freight which would normally pass through the congested Pittsburgh gateway between the East and the West to the railroads north and south of that district.

To discontinue the Pennsylvania's fast New York-Chicago train, the Broadway Limited, effective Dec. 1.

To suspend immediately the running of fast freight lines.

To furnish only box and stock cars for team track loading of coal.

The committee's resolution regarding 1,325,000 tons of steel and iron now stored on the ground and in cars at North Atlantic ports states that "it is vitally essential that there be thorough co-operation in the handling of traffic for overseas shipment, so that the railway equipment which would otherwise be available for coal or coke shall not be used in moving traffic which cannot be promptly trans-shipped when it reaches tidewater."

A representative of the committee is to be named, with headquarters in New York, for co-operation with the representatives of America's allies, to the end that rail transportation be limited to that traffic for which overseas transportation is available.

3,500 GERMAN TROOPS SURRENDER IN AFRICA

Col. Tafel's Force, Chiefly Natives, Blundered into British-held Territory.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—An official statement on the operations in German East Africa tells of the unconditional surrender of a German force under Colonel Tafel, consisting of 12 German officers, 100 German soldiers, and 3,400 natives.

The force had advanced southward from the Mahenge area to Newala, apparently in ignorance of the British occupation of Newala.

AMERICANS CONFER FIRST

May Be Urged to Put Drafted Men to Building Ships—War Council Today.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Colonel House's plan of team work has been adopted by the Interallied Conference, and, instead of having general meetings and oratorical fireworks, the delegates are organizing in groups to consider and settle practical questions. Colonel House called all the Americans together this morning before 10 o'clock to agree on a procedure in the interest of time-saving and efficiency. Everybody recognized the critical nature of the present conditions and the importance of backing up to them sincerely united and single-minded against the common enemy.

The temptation is very great for each delegation to press the viewpoint of the country it represents. Every delegate comes loaded with oratory about the peculiar sufferings and needs of his particular country. If this is allowed to proceed, the picture of war misery will simply be painted in stronger colors, without accomplishing any practical result. Instead, it is hoped to get the delegates together with the official "opposites" of the other countries and lay a basis of knowledge and mutual understanding for such use of aggregate resources as will best promote the one great aim of defeating Germany. There is a big rush for the Americans, as America is the only country with a surplus of supplies, and if we acceded to all the demands the surplus would be exhausted before we got half way around.

One of the capital subjects for consideration is shipping. This will not be left to the permanent Allied Council, whose sessions will be resumed in London. The shipping question is urgent and fundamental, and some general policy will be adopted at the Paris meeting. I venture the prediction that America will be urged to put the increased shipbuilding program ahead of everything else, if necessary even using army drafts fitted for such work in the shipyards.

The Americans with Colonel House at their head left the Hotel Crillon in a body at 9:50 for the Foreign Office. Ten minutes later Premier Lloyd George emerged from his rooms, next to Colonel House's, and called out, "Has Colonel House left?" When an attendant replied affirmatively the Premier said, "I'm late, as usual," and without awaiting the elevator, ran down the steps and jumped into his car.

The interallied conference ran as smoothly as a Texas Democratic Convention. The session was short and the proceedings according to prearranged plans. Lloyd George returned to the Crillon at 11:45. Colonel House walked from the Foreign Office with Gordon Auchincloss, reaching the hotel at noon. The American delegates came strolling in smiling, but reticent, the team captain evidently having enjoined the strictest secrecy. The remainder of the day was spent in committee work.

Fifteen Nations in Conference.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The interallied conference opened in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, with fifteen nations represented. The French Premier, M. Clemenceau, presided and welcomed the delegates, emphasizing the gravity of the responsibilities resting on the assembled statesmen and military officials.

Premier Clemenceau's speech barely exceeded a hundred words.

"Gentlemen," he said, "in the name of the French Republic the honor of welcoming you falls upon me. In this greatest of wars it is the feeling of the supreme solidarity of peoples which unites us in this moment to win on the field of battle the right to a peace which shall be a true peace of humanity. It is for this we are here in this admirable reunion of hope and duty, well prepared to make every sacrifice demanded by an alliance which no intrigue and no weakening can ever impair. Our task is to translate into acts those lofty feelings whereby we are animated. Our order of the day is work. Let us work."

M. Pichon then outlined the questions to be examined and the method of work to be followed. The resolutions by the French representatives having been adopted without discussion, the conference divided into sections in which the various allied delegations are represented. These sections are finances, imports and transportation, armament, munitions, aviation, food and blockade. Each of these commissions is being presided over by the French Minister whose department corresponds to the subject under consideration.

German Food Chief Promises Diet of Bread and Potatoes

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 29.—Speaking in the Prussian Lower House today on food conditions, Herr von Waldow, President of the German Food Regulation Board, said:

"Considerable supplies of grain for making bread have been provided by early thrashing. The Imperial German Bureau has already received 1,000,550 tons, as compared with 890,000 tons last year.

"The potato crop may be regarded as satisfactory, almost as a good one, and we count upon having 34,500,000 tons. Distribution will be carried out much more efficiently than in recent years. The same quantity of sugar as formerly can be delivered.

"We shall still have to bear many restrictions, but we have adequate food supplies for the new year."

Herr von Waldow said that bread and potatoes would form the basis of the food supply.

Substantial Number of Coming Great Force Arrives—Training with Our Troops.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Monday, Nov. 26, (Associated Press.)—American troops have played an important part in General Byng's drive before Cambrai. It is now possible to tell the people of the United States for the first time that American army engineers have had a large hand in the marvelous work which has been accomplished in the way of pushing the vital railways up to the front.

The engineers have been laboring on roads behind the British lines for nearly four months, and two of the men who were wounded were in the first American casualties announced from Washington. The military requirements have made it impossible to mention their presence here before this time.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 29, (Associated Press.)—A substantial vanguard of the great army of American aviators, which eventually will operate in France, has arrived near the front.

For weeks some of them had been training actively for battlefront service, co-operating with the manoeuvres of American troops rehearsing and practicing attacks.

Army flying fields have been established in certain sections, and for days American soldiers in many parts of France have been watching American aviators circling above their heads.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Another striking act of devotion to duty has been reported by Vice-Admiral Sims in connection with the torpedoing of the American destroyer Cassin in British waters on Oct. 15 last. Only three days ago Secretary Daniels was informed of the bravery of Osmund K. Ingram, gunner's mate, who lost his life as a result of rushing to the stern of the Cassin and throwing overboard powerful explosives when he saw the torpedo approaching that end of the vessel. Ingram was blown overboard and was the only man to lose his life. His bravery saved the Cassin, which was able to make port.

Secretary Daniels was notified by Vice-Admiral Sims today of the bravery of William Joseph Murphy, Chief Electrician on the Cassin, at the time of the torpedoing. Murphy stood at his post when the explosion put the radio apparatus out of commission, and succeeded in repairing and adjusting it, thus making it possible for the ship to get into radio touch with other vessels.

Murphy is a New York youth. He enlisted at Boston on Nov. 8, 1911. His wife is Mrs. Mabel Mary Murphy of 378 East Thirty-fifth Street, Brooklyn.

Secretary Daniels also announced today that he had sent to John J. Swigart, seaman, commendation for jumping overboard from an army transport in an unsuccessful effort to rescue a shipmate. Swigart jumped from the vessel, which was going at high speed, into its wake, and swam to a point where the man was last seen. He searched for the man until exhausted. Swigart enlisted from Cincinnati, March 19, 1917. He gave as his next of kin William Swigart, a brother, of 31 East Seventh Street, Newport, Ky.

SCANDINAVIAN KINGS BEGIN CONFERENCE

Powerful When United to Resist Foreign Aggression, Says Swedish Monarch.

CHRISTIANIA, Nov. 29.—The Scandinavian conference was opened yesterday with speeches by King Haakon of Norway and King Gustav of Sweden, after which the Ministers representing the three nations conferred for several hours.

A banquet was held last night at which King Haakon, proposing a toast to the visiting monarchs, said:

"These are mournful times for Europe. Our own countries also come under their shadow, but we are fortunate in having been able to keep out of the war."

The King expressed his thanks to the Danish people for their readiness to submit to privations in order to assist the other Scandinavian countries.

King Gustav, in his reply to King Haakon, referred to the separation of Sweden and Norway and to the fact that he was the first Swedish ruler to visit Norway since that event. He continued:

"Each of our nations is small in itself, but together we constitute a force which must be reckoned with, when it is a question of safeguarding the maintenance of our independence and of our right freely to dispose of our own destinies."

FEARS WORLD-WIDE RUIN

Lansdowne Wants Allies to Restate Aims as Step Toward Ending Conflict

WOULD REASSURE GERMANY

Sees Peace Party Strengthened if Convinced That Foes Don't Seek Her Annihilation.

DECRIES "WAR AFTER WAR"

And Favors International Discussion of New Problems, Including Freedom of Seas.

Lansdowne's Proposals of a Basis of Peace

The Marquis of Lansdowne, author of the suggestions for peace, published below, was Foreign Minister in the Cabinets of Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour, and Minister without portfolio in Mr. Asquith's Coalition Ministry, and has been Viceroy of India and Governor General of Canada.

He tabulates his suggestions of a restatement of the Allies' aims as follows:

1. That we do not desire the annihilation of Germany as a great power.
2. That we do not seek to impose upon her people any form of government other than that of their own choice.
3. That, except as a legitimate war measure, we have no desire to deny to Germany her place among the great commercial communities of the world.
4. That we are prepared, when war is over, to examine in concert with other powers a group of international problems, some of them of recent origin, which are connected with the question of the freedom of the seas.
5. That we are prepared to enter into an international pact under which ample opportunities would be afforded for the settlement of international disputes by peaceful means.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 30.—The Marquis of Lansdowne has written a letter to The Daily Telegraph, in which he urges upon the Allies a restatement, in general terms, of their war aims, in an attempt to bring about peace before the prolongation of the war leads to the ruin of the civilized world."

The Daily Chronicle says it is informed, "on authority," that the rumor current that the letter was written with the knowledge of the Government is unfounded.

Lord Lansdowne's letter to The Daily Telegraph is as follows:

"We are now in the fourth year of the most dreadful war the world has ever known—a war in which, as Sir W. Robertson lately informed us, the number of the killed alone can be counted by the million, while the total number of men engaged amounts to nearly 24,000,000. Ministers continue to tell us that they scan the horizon in vain for a prospect of a lasting peace, and without a lasting peace we all feel that the task we have set ourselves will remain unaccomplished.

"But those who look forward with horror to the prolongation of the war, who believe that its wanton prolongation would be a crime differing only in degree from that of the criminals who provoked it, may be excused if they, too, scan the horizon anxiously in the hope of discovering their indications that the outlook may, after all, not be so hopeless as is supposed. The obstacles are indeed formidable enough. We are constantly reminded of one of them.

"It is pointed out with force that, while we have not hesitated to put forward a general description of our war aims, the enemy have, though repeatedly challenged, refused to formulate theirs and have limited themselves to vague and apparently insincere professions of readiness to negotiate with us. The force of the argument cannot be gainsaid, but it is directed mainly to show that we are still far from agreement as to the territorial questions which must come up for settlement in connection with the terms of peace.

"These are, however, by no means the only questions which will arise, and it is worth while to consider whether there are not others also of first-rate importance, with regard to which the prospects of agreement are less remote. Let me examine one or two of these.

"What are we fighting for? To beat the Germans, certainly; but that is not an end in itself. We want to inflict a signal defeat upon the Central Powers, not out of mere vindictiveness, but in the hope of saving the world from a recurrence of the calamity which has befallen this generation.

War for "Reparation and Security."

"What, then is it we want when the war is over? I know of no better formula than that more than once made use of with universal approval by Mr. Asquith in the speeches which he, from time to time, has delivered. He has repeatedly told his hearers that we are waging war in order to obtain reparation and security. Both are essential, but of the two, security is perhaps more indispensable.

"In the way of reparation much can no doubt be accomplished, but the utmost effort to make good all the ravages of this war must fall short of completeness and will fail to undo the grievous wrong which has been done to humanity.

"It may, however, be possible to make some amends for the inevitable incompleteness of reparation if the security afforded is, humanly speaking, complete.

"To end the war honorably would be a great achievement. To prevent the same curse falling upon our children would be a greater achievement still.

"This is our avowed aim, and the magnitude of the issue cannot be exaggerated; for, just as this war has been more dreadful than any war in history, so, we may be sure, would the next war be even more dreadful than this. The prostitution of science for purposes of pure destruction is not likely to stop short.

Proposes Pledge of Future Arbitration

"Most of us, however, believe that it should be possible to secure posterity against a repetition of such an outrage as that of 1914, if the powers will, under a solemn pact, bind themselves to submit future disputes to arbitration.

"If they will undertake to outlaw politically and economically any one of their number which refuses to enter into such a pact, or to use their joint military and naval forces for the purpose of coercing the Power which breaks away from the rest, they will indeed have traveled far along the road which leads to security.

"We are, at any rate, right to put security in the front line of our peace demands, and it is not unsatisfactory to note that, in principle, there seems to be complete unanimity upon this point."

Lord Lansdowne then cites from President Wilson's speech at the banquet of the League to Enforce Peace. His reference to "a universal association of nations to prevent any war from being begun, either contrary to treaty covenants or without warning and full submission of the cause to the opinion of the world," and quotes from the German Chancellor's speeches to the Main Committee of the Reichstag in the same year in favor of a "peaceful agreement and understanding which will prevent the return of such an immense catastrophe." The Papal suggestion of August last of the establishment of arbitration and the Austrian welcome of it and readiness to enter into negotiations regarding the Papal proposal are recorded, and Lord Lansdowne proceeds:

"In his dispatch covering the allied note of Jan. 10, 1917, Mr. Balfour mentions as one of the three conditions essential to durable peace the condition that 'Behind international law and behind all treaty arrangements for preventing or limiting hostilities some form of international sanction might be devised which would give pause to the hardest aggressor.'

"Such sanction would probably take the form of coercion applied in one of two modes. The aggressor would be disciplined either by the pressure of superior naval and military strength or by the denial of commercial access and facilities.

"The proceedings of the Paris conference show that we should not shrink from such denial if we were compelled to use the weapon for purposes of self-defense; but, while a commercial boycott would be justifiable as a war measure, and while the threat of a boycott in case Germany should show herself utterly unreasonable would be a legitimate threat, no reasonable man would surely desire to destroy the trade of the Central Powers if they will, so to speak, enter into recognizances to keep the peace and do not force us into conflict by hostile combination.

Deplores "War After the War."

"A commercial war is less ghastly in its immediate results than a war of armed forces, but it would certainly be deplorable if, after three or four years of sanguinary conflict in the field—a conflict which has destroyed a great part of the wealth of the world and permanently crippled its resources—the Powers were to embark upon commercial hostilities certain to retard the economic recovery of all the nations involved.

"That we shall have to secure ourselves against the fiscal hostility of others; that we shall have to prevent the recurrence of conditions under which, when the war broke out, we found ourselves short of essential commodities because we had allowed certain industries and certain sources of supply to pass entirely under the control of our enemies, no one will doubt—subject, however, to this reservation, that it will surely be for our interest that the stream of trade should, so far as our own fiscal interests permit, be allowed to flow strong and uninterrupted in its natural channels.

"There remains the question of territorial claims. The most authoritative statement of these is to be found in the Allies' note of Jan. 10, 1917. This statement must obviously be regarded as a broad outline of the desiderata of the Allies; but is anyone prepared to argue that the sketch is complete, or that it may not become necessary to re-examine it. Mr. Asquith, speaking at Liverpool in October last, used the following language:

"'No one pretends that it would be right or opportune for either side to formulate an ultimatum, detailed, exhaustive, precise, with clauses and subclauses, which is to be accepted verbatim et literatim, chapter and verse, as an indispensable preliminary and condition of peace. There are many things,' he added, 'in worldwide conflict such as this which must of necessity be left over for discussion and negotiation, for

BRITISH PUBLIC STIRRED

Lansdowne's Letter Revives Attacks on Lloyd George's Cabinet.

LACK OF WORLD STRATEGY

Point that Allied Policy May Give Aid to German War Party Seized Upon.

NORTHCLIFFE PRESS SILENT

Chronicle Declares It Prefers President Wilson's Counsel to Lansdowne's.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 30.—Lord Lansdown'e letter is generally recognized as the most important event of the day. The Daily Telegraph describes it as "an expression of the personal view of a statesman of world-wide reputation and long and varied experience." It is that certainly, but also much more than that.

The recent suggestion of a new Government, headed by Lansdowne and Balfour was derided in certain quarters on the ground that both were old men. It was for other reasons that the proposal was impracticable. None the less, Lansdowne is the representative of a considerable body of British public opinion.

Lloyd George's recent "parliamentary triumph" was the hour's wonder. Reflection has not increased confidence in his guidance. Never has the Premier had a worse week-end. From the Socialist Clarion to the Whig Spectator, practically all the weekly papers struck critical notes, ranging through the whole gamut from doubt to despair.

Outside of the Northcliffe press, which, one of the contemporaries says, is hypnotized by the terror of Asquith's return, the Lloyd George Government had hardly one whole-hearted supporter. Lansdowne's letter is regarded by sober opinion as a call for wise leadership. In last week's Commons debate, the Westminster Gazette points out, the Prime Minister spoke of himself as an expert in political strategy. The cheers of the House justified the description so far as it applied to Parliament, but political strategy in a wider sense as concerned with the world war is precisely the art which Lansdowne finds lacking in the counsels of the Allies, and for lack of it he thinks they risk prolonging the war beyond reason or necessity and playing into the hands of the war party in Germany.

In this respect Lansdowne's letter meets the approval of all but the jingoists, who still cherish the shibboleth of a knockout blow crushing Germany. The Star puts this point with snap.

"Lansdowne's letter," it says "is nothing short of a thunderbolt dropped in the camp of those who want the war to last forever, and who bully and browbeat everybody who dares to think for himself about the problem of peace.

"He is no fool and no pacifist, but he has more practical wisdom in his little finger than Milner, Curzon, Carson, and Lloyd George have in their four heads."

The same paper adds: "Lloyd George is at present in Paris with Lord Milner and Lord Northcliffe to stay up his hands as Aaron and Hur did for Moses in Rephidim. He is no doubt accurately informed as to the amount of political pressure which the Lansdowne group is in position to exercise and will be guided by thtat knowledge.

Meantime the Northcliffe press has nothing to say. There is no mention of Lansdowne's letter in this afternoon's Evening News. The other evening papers, with the exception of the Globe, which is now run by Leo Maxse, whose fire-eating propensities used to find their chief outlet in the National Review, agree in the main with Lansdowne, though issue is taken with him on certain points, chief among which is that of Germany's readiness to accept conditions which would make a league of nations policy a practicable proposition.

Here even the Westminster Gazette, which reflects the body of liberal opinion corresponding to that which Lansdowne speaks for on the conservative side says:

"We shall know more of the present German mood when we have read the speech which the new Chancellor is to make today in the Reichstag, but we may be sure that the militarist parties are counting upon the collapse of Russia to resist all the schemes which would make them equal partners in a free European system and to renew their claims of aggression and dominance."

The one point in Lansdowne's argument on which serious opinion fastens with interrogation is, as already indicated, the question whether we can get a peace which spells the defeat and not

Austria Is Disappointed Over the Results in Italy; Grows More Distrustful of Domineering Ally

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Reports reaching Paris, via Switzerland, picture Austria as discontented with the Italian situation and increasingly concerned over her relations with Germany after the war.

Austria's ambitions are local and limited, while Germany's are worldwide. By rushing in front of Austria and leading the sweep into Italy, and by taking sole charge of the Russian situation, Germany places herself where she can treat Austria with scant consideration after the war.

Austria, therefore, stands to lose, no matter which side wins the war. Emperor Charles is said to be very restless, and the feeling of the people is deeply embittered and distrustful of their Prussian partners.

Sweden Said to be Acting as Mediator Between Bolsheviki and Germany

Gen. Berthelot, for French War Office, Expresses to Highest Russian Command Confidence It Will Stand by Allies—Trotzky to Appoint New Ambassadors to London and Paris.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the Swedish Legation at Petrograd has agreed, at Leon Trotzky's request, to act as mediator between Russia and Germany, and has already sent to the Berlin Foreign Office a note proffering a truce and peace negotiations.

Petrograd advices say that General Henri Berthelot, Chief of the French Military Mission to Rumania, under a Jassy date of Nov. 25 has informed Lieut. Gen. Stcherbatcheff, commander of the Russian forces in Rumania, according to Ivestiay, the Bolshevist organ, of the receipt of a dispatch from the War Ministry at Paris commenting on the absence of military information from the Russian General Staff, but, instead, the receipt of details of the armistice efforts.

"I am requested to inform the highest military powers," says General Berthelot, "that France does not recognize the power of the national commissaries, but is confident of the patriotism of the highest Russian command and believes that it will refuse to enter into criminal negotiations, and will keep the Russian army facing the common enemy."

A decree has been issued by Nikolai Lenine and Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Premier and Foreign Minister, respectively, giving the Commissioner of the State Bank the right to issue from the State Treasury a short-time advance to the Council of Commissaries of 25,000,000 rubles.

The decree followed a conference of the Commissioner and the bank authorities, in which the legal proceedings for drawing funds were explained. This method was declared by the Commissioner to be too dilatory in view of the immediate need of funds. The decree was then issued, after which the bank managers resigned.

Their places have been filled by appointees of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, which will doubtless insure the acquisition of the funds mentioned.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAPARANDA, Sweden, Nov. 29.—In the near future the Bolshevist Government will appoint new diplomatic representatives in London and Paris and discharge the present Ambassadors. Trotzky has sent a circular note to all the Russian diplomatic representatives as Commissary of Foreign Affairs, asking whether they recognize him.

The Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates at Petrograd has been informed that the Allied Ambassadors, without breaking off diplomatic connections, intend to leave Petrograd for Stockholm and intrust special delegates to run the embassies.

COALITION CABINET FORCED ON BOLSHEVIKI

Temporary Soviet Parliament Also Agreed To After Peasants' Conference Turns on Lenine.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 28.—During the last twenty-four hours the political situation here has taken another disconcerting sideways leap. The Peasants' Conference which met a few days ago promptly split into two—a small conference of anti-Bolshevist pro-war peasants and a larger conference of Lefts sharing the views of the Lenine Cabinet.

But last night a curious thing happened. Lenine addressed the Lefts and somehow antagonized them. The peasant soldiers forming a majority of the audience behaved impatiently, interrupting frequently. A derisive reception was given to his reference to Ensign Krylenko's appointment to be commander in chief. The Bolshevist Premier retired, not daring to risk the putting of a resolution of confidence in his Government to the meeting.

Then came the announcement that Germany had accepted the proposal of an armistice on all fronts. A Bolshevik moved that a telegram of congratulation be sent to Krylenko. After an uproarious discussion the resolution was defeated and the Bolsheviki walked out.

Last night it had already become apparent that the Bolsheviki had not succeeded in obtaining a sweeping majority in the Constituent Assembly elections, even in Petrograd, the citadel of Bolshevism. A Bolshevik coalition with other extremists was therefore an urgent necessity yesterday, and today negotiations accordingly proceeded at the Smolny Institute. One form of agreement has been reached. Its announcement was made in curiously dramatic circumstances.

Encouraged by the chilly reception of Lenine, Chernoff this morning addressed the Left at the Peasants' Conference, making a powerful bid for leadership. The delegates, swayed by his oratory, gave him a tumultuous reception, especially applauding his references to the sovereignty of the people, not of "usurpers."

He concluded triumphantly, and the meeting was declared adjourned. A few delegates had already gone out when the Chairman asked the meeting to keep its seats and allow an important announcement to be made.

An emissary from the Smolny Institute then reported that a coalition government had just been agreed upon, consisting of Bolsheviki, of the Left, Social Revolutionaries, and Menshevik Internationalists. Eighteen delegates from the All-Russian Executive Committee of the Soviets, 108 from the Left in the Peasants' Conference, 100 delegates from the Army, and 60 from various trade unions are to form a temporary Soviet Parliament, which is to hold a meeting immediately. This will appoint committees to manage the Government departments. Each committee will elect its own Chairman. These Chairman will be the Cabinet. Such scheme excludes Tchernoff just at the moment of the apparent beginning of his triumphal progress.

So Russia is trying a third experiment for composing a revolutionary Parliament. It is not difficult to foresee the results, but it is obvious that unless it is manipulated with extreme skill the new organ of the Government may slip out of the hands of the Bolsheviki.

Schneur, Zoglovich, and Meren are the names of the three representatives from the 5th Army who were admitted to the German trenches as envoys of Ensign Krylenko, the Bolshevist Commander in Chief, and arranged for representatives of both sides to meet again on Dec. 2 to conclude an armistice and to make a renewed appeal to the Allies and to accept the Bolshevist peace platform and conclude a general armistice on all fronts.

The position is bizarre in the extreme. Only three armies recognize Krylenko as Commander in Chief. Headquarters and the Southern Rumanian and Caucasian fronts definitely refuse to recognize the Bolshevist Government. On the western (Russian) front there is dissension, part of the troops protesting against the Bolshevist peace tactics and the rest supporting them. The commander of the front, Baluyev, and Commissary Zhdanov have been arrested at Minsk. Krylenko has issued an order to stop fighting on all fronts and only to fire if fire be opened on the enemy. The observance of the truce terms by the Germans is conditional on complete cessation of hostilities by the Russian Headquarters.

Commissary Stankevitch refuses to transmit Krylenko's orders to General Dukhonin, and in the name of the army issues an appeal to the civil population to put an end to civil war and anarchy and continue to supply all that is needful for the maintenance of the army at the front.

Ensign Krylenko, instead of pursuing his journey south, is returning to Petrograd. Captain Kukel, who was left by Admiral Verderevski in charge of the Ministry of Marine for mechanical work, has been arrested for refusing to hand over papers of the Ministry to Bolshevist emissaries, and the Bolsheviki have appointed Captain Modest Ivanov in his place.

The Military Revolutionary Committee refuses to issue passports to foreigners traveling abroad unless a request is addressed directly by the Embassies to the committee. The neutral legations have agreed to these conditions.

The results of the poll in Petrograd for the Constituent Assembly are extremely interesting, the Bolsheviki and Cadets running neck and neck, with the Cadets so far in a slight majority. The Social Revolutionaries follow far behind, and the number of votes polled by the other parties is insignificant. The size of the Bolshevist vote is accounted for by the votes of soldiers of the Petrograd garrison and in part of the workmen.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 29.—Returns in the election for the Constituent Assembly have not yet been completed, but so far the Maximalists are far in the lead. One hundred and ten out of 194 district in Petrograd give the Maximalists 220,000 votes, the Constitutional

SPEECH TO THE REICHSTAG

Hertling Says He Hopes Peace Move Will Develop Soon.

PLEDGES FOR PROVINCES

Right of "Self-Determination" to be Allowed Lithuania and Courland.

TEUTON ALLIES PRAISED

Modification of Censorship Is Hinted — Appeal for German Internal Unity.

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 29.—Count George F. von Hertling, the new Imperial German Chancellor, told the Reichstag when it reassembled today that he was ready to enter into peace negotiations as soon as the Russian Government sent representatives having full powers to Berlin.

"I hope and wish," he said, "that these efforts will soon take definite shape and bring us peace."

Respecting Poland, Lithuania, and Courland, Count von Hertling said:

"We respect the right of self-determination of their peoples. We expect they will give themselves a constitutional form of government corresponding to their conditions."

The Chancellor delivered a long speech to the Reichstag, in which he dwelt upon all the current problems of the internal and external situations. After some personal observations on the war, he referred to the home politics of the Empire, alluding to the introduction of the Prussian franchise proposal, and the Government's new measures, which extend social and political legislation in Germany. In regard to the maintenance of a censorship, he professed himself, in contradistinction, he said, to the stand of the Entente Powers, in favor of a liberal conception of the right of free opinion.

After an affecting appeal for unity on the internal front, the Chancellor spoke about as follows on the general political world situation:

Praises "Our Faithful Allies."

"I have taken over from my highly honored predecessors in office a precious heritage, namely, to cherish our friendship with Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria. Our alliances with these three States were concluded on different dates, but their aim is common—the realization of national ideals, the safeguarding of our territorial possessions, and the warding off of enemy attacks. The pre-eminent nature of this aim has steeled our resolution in the long and bloody struggle, and will sustain us until the end is in sight.

"Our faithful allies, to whom we have been drawn in defense of our most sacred possessions, and in combination with whom deeds of incomparable greatness have been performed on the battlefields and at home, have my gratitude and admiration."

Ready for Russian Negotiations.

Count von Hertling referred to the fact that the Russian Government had sent from Tsarskoe Selo a wireless communication signed by Trotzky and Lenine, addressed to the Governments and peoples of the belligerent countries, proposing that negotiations for a truce and a general peace be opened at an early date, and said:

"I do not hesitate to declare that in the proposals of the Russian Government, so far as is at present known, debatable principles on which the opening of negotiations may be based may be recognized and that I am ready to enter into such so soon as the Russian Government sends representatives having full powers for this purpose. I hope and wish that these efforts will soon take definite shape and bring us peace."

Pleads for Unity to Baffle Foes.

Count von Hertling said that the initiative for the Prussian reforms proceeded from the Crown. After alluding to some new bills of reform affecting the workmen's unions, he referred to the censorship question and promised to do what was possible to allow a free expression of opinion and set aside abuses. He continued:

"The point now is to stand together united and firm until victory is achieved. Our enemies begin to see they cannot deprive us of victory by force of arms, but they base their hope on a supposed imminent internal breakdown.

"Without knowledge of our German conditions, and misled by a dependent and instigating press, they affect to see signs of coming events in transitory appearances. Do your best, gentlemen, to destroy this by a unanimous determination to support the Government. Let one thought and determination fill all hearts—thought of one's country."

Insists U-Boats Will Win.

As to the submarine campaign, the Chancellor said:

"Submarine warfare against merchant ships exercises systematically its powerful and inevitable effect. It was and is the only thoroughgoing means for carrying on against the superior power of our adversaries the economic war forced upon us. It directs itself against enemy tonnage and those voyaging in the enemy's service.

"If our adversaries have sought for some time to fill the thinned-out ranks of their merchant fleets with neutral ships which they have forcibly impressed into their service by a hunger blockade and other oppressive means, this procedure cannot be continued at will and will soon reach its limit. Even by the most hurried building of new ships in the yards of our adversaries, the number of ships sunk will continually exceed the tonnage of those newly built.

"All observations give us unmistakable proof that the submarine war against merchant ships will reach the aim intended for it."

Count von Hertling then praised the army and navy and the soldiers on all fronts. He eulogized the home population for its patience and endurance in bearing the privations the war had brought with it, especially the women who had so bravely taken up the work of the men called into military service.

He spoke of the financing of the war which had been carried out satisfactorily, adding:

"The Empire has appealed seven times to the German people to provide the means and all classes of the population have competed in order that each might bear his portion of the burden and the sum of about 73,000,000,000 marks has been subscribed voluntarily to date."

In asking the Reichstag for a new credit of 15,000,000,000 marks the Chancellor alluded to extraordinary war experiences which had called forth among all the German people consciousness and solidarity. Every member of the community, he said, was now aware that he was a part of the grand total of valuable members of the State, which they recognized peculiarly as their affair and possession.

Discusses Political Reform.

The Chancellor then spoke of the demand for reform and adjustment of political affairs. He said it was necessary to recognize what was right in this demand and carry it through with a firm hand. He added:

"One should particularly not be led astray by catch words nor slavishly imitate the instructions of other countries, but should do what is demanded by the actual needs of popular life and which correspond to the German spirit and German characteristics.

"Of the fundamental principles of our imperial constitution, nothing can or shall be changed. They are distinctive and have grown out of the historically developed character of the German people and their various branches. Parliamentary representation in the Reichstag rests upon the broadest conceivable base.

"When our political life, developing itself upon this firm foundation, undertakes new tasks and when the new needs make themselves apparent within the framework of the imperial constitution, the Imperial Government will at all times lend a willing ear to the wishes and suggestions which may reach it from this honorable house—of that I am sure."

WARNED OF GERMAN RISING.

Haase's Speech Bitterly Indicting Deception of the People.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Through Swiss channels the text of the recent speech of Herr Haase, Independent Socialist leader in the Reichstag, in which he criticised German diplomacy, has reached Washington. Herr Haase was once President of the whole Socialist group in the Reichstag, but when the party split on the question of the continued support of the war he became the leader of the minority.

After denouncing German diplomacy Herr Haase asserted that the progress of events must lead to the establishment of a social republic. Turning to the subject of war, he said:

"How long is the war going to be continued? If it goes with your wishes, then the time is not far off when our nation will be bled white and destroyed through exhaustion. You preach that we must keep our nerves. The nation has kept its nerves, but it has slowly awakened out of the delirium of war.

"For years it has been consoled by whisperings that it will only last a little longer and then this dreadful war will be over. Again and again it has been consoled thus. Finally, Aug. 1 of this year was to bring the solution. It has even been hinted from on high that peace would soon be dictated.

"Herr von Heydebrand quoted the Admiral who foresaw the complete success of the submarine within a few months, so that England would then be compelled to beg for peace. We have read it again and again in the Pan German press, and it went from mouth to mouth.

"The news that England had again abandoned the meatless days which she had introduced made several people whom I know stare in amazement. Then came the definite news from England of the conditions of life there, that rice was stored in great quantities and cost but 3 pence per pound, and that a dozen eggs could be bought for a shilling. Is, then, the nation to be kept in the delusion that, in spite of all this, England will soon be forced to beg for peace because she is starving?

"It has been calculated in public that England's cargo space will soon be so reduced that she will be unable to continue the war. But there again the public has long ago come to the conclusion that the statistics placed before it are quite false, and that it has been forgotten to take into account the fact that the tonnage of the whole world is at England's disposal, and that it is consequently silly to take the losses which the submarines cause simply in proportion to the ships which belong to England alone.

"The new Chancellor warned us today against all too previous prophets, and in the same breath uttered the prophecy which was just as hasty and which will very soon be belied by events; that England will not be able much longer—this was the expression he used—to withstand the need for peace.

"Do we want to deceive our people? The great masses want truth, and will no longer be put off with vain hopes.

"A great complaint has been begun by Scheidemann about the political effects of the intensified and ruthless submarine warfare. Now, we have from the very beginning declared we are against the submarine warfare from reasons of international law and humanity. We have continually pointed out that America and the other States would join our enemies. But they have no right to complain of these results who carried through the submarine war with Count Westarp and the rest and demanded a more intense application of this weapon.

"As for the attempt to effect a separate peace with Russia, nobody can believe that the peace resolution without a word about the self-determination of nationalities will have a good effect abroad. As a matter of fact, Russia has the greatest distrust of the German Government and its supporters. Nor will the majority Socialist declaration in Sweden be more efficacious. It has been condemned by all enemy and neutral Socialists.

"The feeling of the people as the result of the leaden weight of hunger is such as to startle even the most frivolous. You have read of riots and strikes in Silesia.

"Do you think the masses can possibly endure it much longer? It is impossible, and when the crash comes you must not be surprised. Workers know better every day how they must act if they are to achieve what they have at heart. They will rise against these conditions."

BEAD SUPPLY IS MENACED.

Invasion of Italy Affects the World-wide Monopoly of Venice.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The menace to Venice from the Austro-German campaign in Northern Italy strikes sharply at one line of trade in which the whole world is interested. It is the trade in glass beads. Venice is the bead capital of the world. In the South Sea Islands, the heart of Africa under the North Pole, Tibet, Patagonia, at the uttermost corners of the earth will the handiwork of the Venetian artisan be found. In this country tons of beads from Venice find their way into the handiwork of our Sioux, Chippewa, and Five Tribe Indians.

Harvey Carroll, American Consul at Venice, in a dispatch just received by the Department of Commerce, says that the Venetian bead-making industry is a monopoly and controls a world-wide exporting business, shipping to Africa, India, Oceania, Asiatic countries, Europe, and the Americas. It makes the beads that are used as money by certain tribes in the Congo and in German West Africa, and ships many thousands of tons of bead ornaments to the savage as well as the civilized nations of the world.

The offices of the company are in a magnificent old palace at Murano, the Palazzo Trevisan, which boasts frescoes by Tiepolo. The foundries and factories cover many acres of ground. Before the outbreak of the European war this company kept in storage more than 4,409,245 pounds of manufactured beads. At the present time less than one-fourth this quantity is in stock, and production has greatly decreased, owing to difficulty in securing fuel and raw material.

In the first half of the last century Jacopo Franchini, by binding tiny straws of colored glass together, formed at the end of a rod a miniature portrait or other design. This combination rod was fused at a blowpipe and drawn out until no larger than a knitting needle. Cut into cross sections, each showed a perfect portrait. In the Murano Museum there is a section of glass rod less than 1 centimeter, or four-tenths of an inch, in diameter, that shows three perfect portraits side by side. Owing to his intense application to his work, Franchini died in a madhouse. Nobody has since been found who can duplicate his work in glass.

GERMAN DESTROYER SUNK.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A German torpedo boat destroyer belonging to the Zeebrugge flotilla struck a mine off Westkappelle, Holland, and sank, according to an exchange telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam.

Only two of her crew were saved.

BRITISH ADVANCE LINES NEAR BOURLON

Some Gain of Ground Is Made West of the Wooded Hill Dominating Cambrai.

CITY IS UNDER SHELL FIRE

Belgians Beat Off a Severe Attack by German Troops in Flanders.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—On the Cambrai battlefront British troops made a slight advance today west of Bourlon Wood, according to the official statement issued tonight by Field Marshal Haig. This gain followed a night of comparative quiet, in which a few prisoners were taken in patrol encounters.

Haig's bulletin reads:

There was considerable artillery activity on both sides this morning in the neighborhood of Bourlon Wood. West of the wood we advanced our line slightly by a successful operation.

Hostile raids attempted early this morning in the neighborhood of Hollebeke were repulsed, leaving some prisoners in our hands.

The enemy's artillery has shown somewhat increased activity in this sector and also east and northeast of Ypres during the day.

The day bulletin says:

A hostile attack delivered against Belgian positions in the neighborhood of Aschhoop was beaten off after sharp fighting.

South of the Scarpe River we captured a few prisoners during the night in patrol encounters.

On the remainder of the front there is nothing of special interest to report.

The official statement dealing with aviation activities says:

Over 130 bombs were dropped during the day on the Courtrai, Roulers, Menin, and Thourout railway stations and other targets in the Ypres battle area. At night, in spite of a strong wind and clouds, seventeen heavy bombs were dropped on the Roulers Railway Station, and many rounds were fired from machine guns into the enemy's huts in the neighborhood.

One hostile machine was driven down out of control. Three of ours are missing.

The Belgian communication, issued at Havre, reads:

On November 28, after a violent bombardment, the enemy attacked our trenches near Aschhoop. He succeeded in entering our advanced posts but was driven out by a counterattack. The artillery actions remained intense most of the day and night in this region. There was slight artillery activity during the course of the morning.

The afternoon was marked by an intense bombardment of our works east of Merckem, near Dixmude, and in the region of Ramscapelle. We replied vigorously against the enemy batteries and organizations.

In the evening aerial bombs were launched on our cantonments at Alveringhem and Bostuletarem.

Reports Cambrai Shelled.

BERLIN, Nov. 29, (via London.)—British artillery has been shelling the town of Cambrai, the objective of the latest British offensive on the Somme front in France, the German General Staff announced today, but reported a lull in the general fighting in that section.

Tonight's bulletin says a British attack west of Bourlon was repulsed.

The day report reads:

Army Group of Prince Rupprecht.—East of Merckem Bavarian storming troops brought back from the Belgian lines one officer, forty-six men, and two machine guns.

There was heavy artillery firing throughout the day near Poelcapelle and between Becelaere and Gheluvelt. East of Arras the artillery activity increased. There was a lull in the fighting yesterday southwest of Cambrai. Between Moeuvres and Bourlon, and in the neighborhood of Fontaine Notre Dame and Crevecoeur, the firing increased at times.

Cambrai was shelled by the British. Minor forefield engagemenets resulted in the capture of prisoners and machine guns.

The supplementary report this evening reads:

There was strong artillery fire near Poelcapelle.

West of Bourlon an English attack failed with heavy losses.

CALM DAY ON BATTLEFIELD.

Sharp Contrast of Grassy Area with Shell-torn Flanders.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 29.—After the heavy fighting around Bourlon wood the battle front today was astoundingly quiet. During the night the enemy shelled the British positions in and about the forest and some of the recently captured villages, like Graincourt and Anneux, but this morning when I went up beyond the old line at Hermies into the open country on the left of the Canal du Nord, and the Grand Ravin the guns were quiet on both sides, and only a few shells passed on either side, until later in the morning the enemy put a barrage down for a time south of the Bourlon wood.

All this is so different from the Flanders front, where one cannot go a step beyond Ypres, or even so far without hearing the abominable noise of the 5.9 or seeing a shell burst uncomfortably near that there is a very curious sense of fantasy in walking about battlefields within full view of the enemy's positions, and without any sinister emotion.

There is tussocky grass beneath one's feet and only a few shell holes here and there to remind one that war is close. The German trenches, which are now behind the British front, are as neat as when they were first dug and organized and not flung into wild shapelessness by storms of shellfire, like those of the Somme and Flanders. Villages like Ribecourt and Masnieres still have roofs above their walls and the woods of Bourlon and Havrincourt Park and La Folie are not slashed to death by high explosives.

Sunlight was upon the forest of Bourlon today, and above that great dark mass of trees, rising over the undulating ground to the highest knoll was a long, low line of blue sky, wonderfully clear for an Autumn day, so that one had far visibility, and on the right the towers and spires of Cambrai rose clear and fine below the clouds.

It was difficult to believe the village of Bourlon was still in the enemy's hands after the desperate fighting in and out of the trees of the forest that straggles out to it. Before these battles it was inclosed and hidden in glase, but her (and it is only here) the concentration of the British shellfire crashed into that little woodland and lopped off branches and torn some of the trunks to tatters, so that they begin to have the gallowstree look of other woods of the war. A few dark masses among the trunks show where the cottages of Bourlon village stood.

Where two days ago Yorkshiremen, following some tanks, went into a most bloody fight and struggled to gain and hold these ruins against the nests of machine gunners and swarms of riflemen it was all quiet this morning, and there was no sign of strife about it. All the activity of the day seemed to be in the sky rather than on the earth, and owing to the wonderful visibility of the morning hours great numbers of airplanes were up flying about in the sky in fighting formation, crossing the German lines on reconnaissance and engaging hostile planes, which were trying to use the light of day to see any movement of troops behind the British lines.

Caught napping on the first day of the battle, the German air service has tried on later days to get back some kind of power on this front, and this morning some of their best fliers were about, having, no doubt, been drafted down from other parts of the front.

RAIDS ALONG FRENCH FRONT.

Heavy German Attempt in Champagne Defeated.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Today's official report of the War Office says:

Artillery actions occurred north of the Aisne and in the region of Sapeigneul.

In the Champagne north of Carnillet the enemy last night, after a violent bombardment, undertook a raid in great strength. Our troops repulsed him, inflicting heavy losses.

In the Argonne, west of the Aire, we raided the German lines and brought back ten prisoners.

Two enemy raids, one on the left bank of the Meuse, in the region of Bethincourt, the other on the right bank northwest of Vaux les Damloup, were completely repulsed.

There was active artillery fighting in Upper Alsace.

The War Office announcement tonight reads:

There was activity on the part of both artilleries along the whole front, notably between the Somme and the Oise, in Champagne, in the region of Massiges, in the Argonne, on the left bank of the Aire, in the region of Chaume Wood, and Bezonvaux, as well as in Upper Alsace.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—The Headquarters bulletin today says:

Army Group of the German Crown Prince.—On both banks of the Meuse the artillery firing revived in the afternoon. We carried out successful reconnoissances.

A French attack near Dieppe was repulsed.

CAN'T LIFT CENSORSHIP.

Would Not Serve Interests of Germany, the Reichstag Is Told.

More light was thrown upon the workings of the German censorship in the course of a discussion of that subject during the closing days of the last session of the Reichstag. It having been proposed by the Reichstag Committee that the censorship should be limited to military facts, and, in particular, that there should be no censorship of discussions about war aims and peace aims, constitutional questions, and matters of domestic policy, Herr Wallraf, Under Secretary in the Ministry of the Interior, replied, as quoted in Berlin papers received in London:

"One must realize clearly all that would then be open to free discussion—the sphere of foreign policy, our relations with our allies, our relations with neutrals, and even our relations with enemy States when thin threads begin one day to be woven between us and them. In domestic politics there would be free discussion of the incitement to strikes and riots, and even criticism of the Supreme Army Command would be possible, except as regards actual facts—for instance, criticism of the whole spirit of the leading of the army. Do you really think that, in view of our present situation, free discussion on such a scale could serve the interests of the Fatherland? Do you think so, in view of the sensationalism provoked by the war, and in view of the epidemic of indiscretions which is passing through our country? I cannot share this optimism."

LANSDOWNE URGES STATING WAR AIMS

accommodation and adjustment, at a later stage.'

"It is surely most important that this wise counsel should be kept in mind. Some of our original desiderata have probably become unattainable; others would probably now be given a less prominent place than when they were first put forward; others again, notably the reparation due to Belgium, remain and must always remain in the front rank; but when it comes to a wholesale rearrangement of the map of southeastern Europe we may well ask for a suspension of judgment and for the elucidation which a frank exchange of views between the allied powers can alone afford; for all these questions concern our allies as well as ourselves; and if we are to have an allied council for the purpose of adapting our strategy in the field to the ever-shifting developments of the war it is fair to assume that in the matter of peace terms also the Allies will make it their business to examine and, if necessary, to revise territorial requirements.

Prolonged War Means World Ruin.

"Let me end by explaining why I attach so much importance to these considerations. We are not going to lose this war, but its prolongation will spell ruin for the civilized world and an infinite addition to the load of human suffering, which already weighs upon it. Security will be invaluable to a world which has the vitality to profit by it; but what will be the value of the blessings of peace to nations so exhausted that they can scarcely stretch out a hand with which to grasp them?

"In my belief, if the war is to be brought to a close in time to avert a worldwide catastrophe, it will be brought to a close because on both sides the peoples of the countries involved realize that it has already lasted too long.

"There can be no question that this feeling prevails extensively in Germany, Austria and Turkey. We know beyond doubt that the economic pressure in those countries far exceeds any to which we are subject here. Ministers inform us in their speeches of constant efforts on the part of the Central Powers to invite peace talk [Sir Eric Geddes at the Mansion House on Nov. 9].

"If the peace talk is not more articulate and has not been so precise as to enable his Majesty's Government to treat it seriously, the explanation is probably to be found in the fact, first:

"That German despotism does not tolerate independent expressions of opinion; and, second, that the German Government has contrived, probably with success, to misrepresent the aims of the Allies, which are supposed to include the destruction of Germany, the imposition upon her of a form of government decided by her enemies, her destruction as a great commercial community, and her exclusion from the free use of the seas.

Declarations Which Would Aid Peace.

"An immense stimulus would probably be given to the peace party in Germany if it were understood

"(1) That we do not desire the annihilation of Germany as a great power.

"(2) That we do not seek to impose upon her people any form of government other than that of their own choice.

"(3) That, except as a legitimate war measure, we have no desire to deny to Germany her place among the great commercial communities of the world.

"(4) That we are prepared, when the war is over, to examine, in concert, with other powers, a group of international problems, some of them of recent origin, which are connected with the question of the freedom of the seas.

"(5) That we are prepared to enter into an international pact, under which ample opportunities would be afforded for the settlement of international disputes by peaceful means.

"I am under the impression that authority could be found for most of these propositions in Ministerial speeches.

"Since the above lines were written Sections 1, 2, and 3 have been dealt with by our own Foreign Minister at a public meeting held in honor of Premier Venizelos at the Mansion House. The question of the freedom of the seas was among those raised at the outset by our American allies. The formula is an ambiguous one, capable of many inconsistent interpretations, and I doubt whether it will be seriously contended that there is no room for profitable discussion that an attempt should be made to bring about the kind of pact suggested in Section 5, and, I believe, common ground to all the belligerents and probably to all the neutral powers.

"If it be once established that there are no insurmountable difficulties in the way of agreement upon these points, the political horizon might perhaps be scanned with better hope by those who pray, but can at this moment hardly venture to expect, that the new year may bring us a lasting and honorable peace."

ASQUITH PRESS JUBILANT.

Hails Lansdowne's Letter as a Blow to Lloyd George's War Policy.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The strongest impetus to a renewal of the heated discussions of the rival schools on the war policy of the Allies was provoked today from a most unexpected quarter by the publication of a long letter from the Marquis of Lansdowne, strongly pleading for a restatement of the Allies' war aims and an attempt to bring about peace before "the prolongation of the war leads to the ruin of the civilized world."

Lord Lansdowne's long and intimate connection with foreign affairs and diplomacy lends unusual authority to such a pronouncement at the moment of the meeting of the Interallied Conference in Paris and because of Premier Clemenceau's recent declaration against a league of nations, including Germany, and already there are indications of embittered controversy over it.

It is authoritatively announced that the Government had no previous knowledge of the letter, and the strongest supporters of the Government in the evening press suggest that the letter is very unwelcome to the Ministry.

Under the caption "Lansdowne's Strange Letter," and the sub-head "The Policy of Talking to the Tiger," The Evening News strongly demurs against Lord Lansdowne's suggestions, taking the ground that Germany's word can not be trusted in any matter, and that an attempt to argue with her would be a sheer waste of time.

On the other hand, the Asquith papers hail the letter as one of the most remarkable documents that the war has produced, The Star greeting it as the most formidable attack yet made on the Lloyd Georgian "knockout blow" policy.

The matter has created a considerable sensation in the lobbies of Parliament, and, it is understood, will be the subject of discussion in the House at an early date, probably Monday.

LANSDOWNE STIRS THE BRITISH PRESS

the victory of Prussianism. The Daily Chronicle editorially says:

"Not long ago President Wilson, in reply to the Pope's note, indicated that he saw no chance of one at present. What has happened since? Defeat in Italy and the triumph of German influence in Petrograd. Does Lord Lansdowne think these events have improved the prospect or is it rather a question of his judgment against President Wilson's? As between the two we should strongly prefer the President's judgment on a broad international issue."

Apropos of the Chronicle's denial of the report that Lansdowne's letter had been submitted to Premier Lloyd George before publication, it is interesting to note that another rumor, equally prevalent, was that Mr. Asquith had given the letter qualified approval. A Parliamentary correspondent says that the views of the Unionist members of Parliament were, generally speaking, decidedly hostile, but that many Liberals regard the letter as a wise and courageous act, worthy of the traditions of British statesmanship. It is a reaction, said one member, against a policy which is satisfied with the ephemeral success of today, and takes no thought of tomorrow.

Dr. Arthur Lynch said:

"In this letter Lansdowne has left America in the lurch."

As opposed to this, Commander Wedgwood said:

"This is the first step taken by any one in authority in this country to associate himself with the democratic aims of President Wilson and to lay down the lines of a true liberal policy in foreign affairs."

Sir Henry Norman said: "Our leaders ought not to have waited for President Wilson to address the German people. If this letter be allowed to appear without excisions in the German press I believe it may conceivably produce an answer to the hitherto unanswerable question. How can we win repatriation and security without the military occupation of Berlin by the Allies?

Llewellyn Williams, Liberal, said: "A definite pronouncement against the policy of a knock-out blow and in favor of peace by negotiation, a definite acceptance of the policy of a league of nations, in spite of Clemenceau's recent scornful repudiation of it. If Lord Lansdowne's policy is accepted it will mean a change of Government in England and France."

Arthur Sherwell called Lord Lansdowne's letter "a sign and portent and a clear call to the true spirit of the nation." He went on:

"It undoubtedly voices a great and growing body of thoughtful opinion, which is concerned to keep true ends from entanglement with false. If it restores the spirit and aims of August, 1914, it will be a memorable service."

LONDON ASKS, WHAT DOES AMERICA SAY?

If Lansdowne Issue Is Pressed at Paris Our Attitude Will Be Decisive, It Is Agreed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Lord Lansdowne's letter was undoubtedly deliberately timed to coincide with the opening of the Inter-Allied conference in Paris. Lord Robert Cecil yesterday indicated in the Commons that the council might issue a statement which would be the concerted response of all the allies and America to the Russian Bolshevik developments.

Such an answer, to be effective, would have to be a more complete and more concrete formulation of the allied war aims than has hitherto been promulgated, for the reasons referred to by Lansdowne. It is hoped in some quarters that out of any program of allied war aims laid down by the Paris conference, there will clearly emerge a policy of a league of nations. This is not understood to have originally formed part of the program of the conference, which was convened to discuss not war aims, but war policy.

This last term is presumed not to cover strategy, for which the small supreme war council was set up, and which for obvious reasons is peculiarly unsuited for discussion by a large body. The subjects will rather be such matters as food, shipping, economic policy, blockade, and perhaps munitions, with special political questions such as that presented by Lenine's attempted breach of the treaty of alliance. However, it is believed here that, considered in its broadest aspect, the last-mentioned subject can best be dealt with along the lines indicated by Lansdowne.

It's appreciated that some of Clemenceau's declarations since his accession power seem to constitute a barrier to such action even if it be assumed, which not everybody here is prepared to assume, that Britains' representatives at the conference accept the main hypothesis put forward by Lansdowne.

The present developments to some extent revivify the saying frequently heard at other periods of the war that Lloyd George is the man to make war and that Asquith or another is the man to make peace. In all the discussions I have heard of the subject today there has been this question: If the inter-allied conference takes up the subject raised by Lansdowne, what will be the attitude of the American representatives? In nearly all cases the answer is that it would prove to be the decisive one.

TATIANA NOW IN ENGLAND?

Coming Here to Lecture Says the Latest Story.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 30.—The Morning Post says it is informed by a correspondent of "the real way that Grand Duchess Tatiana escaped from Russia."

The story that she eluded revolutionists in Tobolsk, Siberia, by eloping with Count Fredericks to Kharbin, then to Japan, where she took passage for San Francisco, says the correspondent, is not to be taken literally. He goes on:

"The Grand Duchess had her hair cut short and, dressed as a man, she went through all the privations and discomforts of a railway trip from Omsk to Moscow, via Chellabinsk, Oufa Samara, and Penza. From Moscow the Grand Duchess went to Archangel, and there took boat to Bergen, arriving shortly afterward at Newcastle. She is now in England and will leave soon for New York, where she will lecture on conditions in Russia."

LANSDOWNE LONG IN FOREIGN OFFICE

Close Associate of Balfour—Has High Reputation Among European Chancelleries.

By FRANK DILNOT.

The Marquis of Lansdowne is one of the old nobility of Britain. He is more than that, being one of the most successful of Foreign Ministers his country ever had. He is now 72 years of age, but retains a vigor of mind and body which might be envied by younger men. Whatever criticism may be directed against his present proposals, they cannot fail to be carefully weighed, if only by reason of Lord Lansdowne's past record and associations.

Gladstone picked him out as a brilliant young aristocrat as long ago as 1869 and made him a Minister and he has held great governing offices practically continuously ever since. He was opposed to home rule and joined the Conservative ranks as a Liberal Unionist. He was Foreign Minister of Britain from 1900 to 1905 and as the right-hand man of Prime Minister Balfour was by many regarded as a likely successor in that office. There was strong personal friendship between the two men, who in political thought and intellectual calibre had much in common. Lord Lansdowne led the House of Lords for the Government in those days and in debate was the absolute master of that assembly. Lord Rosebery was his superior in graceful oratory, but there was no man who could successfully cross swords with the easy-mannered, swift thinking, mordant Foreign Secretary.

He was a little man, with a big, arched nose, a little mustache, and a touch of sidewhisker. He was erect and prim, and always wore a frock coat, with a black string tie. His voice was deep, and he was a master of clear speech, possessing, moreover, a salty irony which always made his speeches memorable, and occasionally painful, to his opponents. He, on the Unionist side, and Mr. Asquith, on the Liberal side, were the two most lucid and direct debaters since the disappearance of Joseph Chamberlain. Apart from his power of speech, he was known and respected on both sides in political life as a fair-minded man and one whose judgment in international affairs would be such as would be indorsed by both sides.

His long association with the Foreign Office and his close connection in the past with Mr. Balfour, the present Foreign Secretary, insure consideration for proposals affecting foreign affairs. During the Boer war he was for a time War Secretary and was severely criticised for the lack of efficient organization; but when he assumed control at the Foreign Office he rapidly secured approbation. It was in such a post that his personal talents would effectively be brought to bear. He is a man of charming manners, but adamant in will and quite indifferent to public opinion.

It is at his magnificent London home, Lansdowne House, in Piccadilly, that many of the gatherings of Unionist leaders in recent years have been held. Lord Lansdowne's reputation in the chancelleries of Europe has always stood high.

He was a protagonist in the great fights of the Conservative Party against the 1909 Budget of Mr. Lloyd George and the consequent Parliament Bill, which took from the House of Lords powers it had possessed for many hundreds of years. In place of being the Government leader of the Lords, he was then the leader of the Opposition, because the Liberals were in power. But his influence in public affairs was still great, because the Unionist peers behind him numbered 500, while the Liberal peers, led by Lord Crewe, totaled only 100. Lord Lansdowne's fighting speeches in this period will make him long remembered.

tions will be treated under the direction of the Ministers of those departments.

The general meeting ended at 11 o'clock, when the delegates left the Foreign Office.

The Italian representatives were the first to reach the conference hall. They were followed by the Envoys of Japan. The American War Mission, augmented by Ambassador Sharp, General Pershing, and Vice Admiral Sims, conferred at their hotel headquarters before going to the Foreign Office, which they reached promptly at 10 o'clock. The British delegates came right on the heels of the Americans. There were large crowds outside the hotel where the Americans and British are quartered and also in front of the Foreign Ministry, but there was no cheering or demonstration of any kind, those who gathered to see the representatives of the various countries seeming to recognize the seriousness of the business in hand.

Meetings of the Supreme War Council, in which only France, Great Britain, the United States, and Italy are represented, will follow the interallied conference. This War Council is a permanent body and will deal only with questions relating to military operations on the western front, which now includes Italy. Colonel House and General Tasker H. Bliss will represent the United States at the first meeting of this council.

RUSSIAN PROBLEM VITAL.

Talk of Using the Poles as Basis of a Countermove.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The dominating factor of the European situation which the all-allied conference must face, it is felt here, is the state of affairs in Russia.

Foreign Minister Pichon's paper, The Petit Journal, today states that the probable consequence of the Lenine-Trotzky negotiations with the Germans will be an ultimatum from the Maximalists to the Entente, demanding an immediate general armistice.

Whatever internal weakness may have contributed to cause the Italian disaster, the central fact remains that the Austro-German move was only rendered possible by the practical cessation of all hostilities on the Eastern front. Probably the supply of enemy troops, available for service in the West, will continue to increase. The points the Allies must discuss outside of immediate question of the military precautions and preparations necessary are therefore: First, is it possible to exert any action, jointly or individually, that may remedy the Russian situation? second, how and when could such action be applied? third, is there any comparatively stable force to be found in Russia through which or in connection with which action might be exercised?

It has been suggested that use might be made of Kaledines and his Cossacks, but their possible utility as a stabilizing force is greatly hampered by anarchistic action of the Ukraine soviet or rada, whose President, Winniczenko, has declared that all the Ukraine troops will be withdrawn from the front. As long as the rada continues in control of Kieff and Ukraine, Kaledines is powerless, even should the great part of his forces be loyal.

Winniczenko is really a tool in the hands of his predecessor, Professor Michel Kruszewski, first President of the rada, who was sent from Lemberg to Kieff University before the war, but has always retained his chair at Lemberg, with full emoluments—a case of German "peaceful penetration," which explains the Ukraine situation.

An alternative proposal likely to be submitted to the conference is the possibility of utilizing the Poles by a frank and comprehensive declaration on the part of the Allies that full Polish independence and autonomy is just as definite a part of their war aims as the liberation of Alsace-Lorraine.

Reconstructed Poland, including Russian Poland, a great part of Galicia, Polish Silesia, Posen, and Galicia, Poland, would have a population of 20,000,000 to 30,000,000, a majority of whose fighting men are at present forcibly enrolled in the German, Russian, or Austrian armies, but have never lost the sentiment of Polish patriotism and wish for complete independence.

Allied action on behalf of Poland would have a double effect at this juncture; first, as tending to provide a solid central force round which anti-German activities on the eastern front might rally, and, second, as being likely to cause disaffection and desertion in the ranks of Austro-German Polish regiments, which naturally hate their bondage, but have no definite aim before their eyes to induce them to risk everything to break it.

There is still on the southern Russian front an army of 100,000 to 150,000 Russian Poles under a Polish General, Gowbor Musnicki, constituted by Kerensky, to whom they declared their loyalty at the beginning of his struggle with the Maximalists. Should the Allies come out for Polish independence, their ranks, it is thought, would be swelled, and they would have an aim of national freedom, which is an unparalleled driving force for soldiers. At the same time their position on the southern front would enable them to co-operate with the Rumanians who are almost isolated.

EMPHASIZES AMERICA'S HELP.

Allied Unity Needed to Utilize It, Says Northcliffe.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—In discussing the Interallied Conference, in an interview in the Petit Parisien, Viscount Northcliffe says:

"The unity of control which will issue from this conference is essential for more than one reason, but especially because it will permit the Allies to use to its full extent the generous abundance of resources which the vast transatlantic Republic places at their disposal. The importance of American intervention only appears as yet but indistinctly and veiled to the eyes of Europe. It is too difficult to imagine what is happening 5,000 kilometers from here."

Viscount Northcliffe described the enthusiasm that he had witnessed throughout the length and breadth of the United States.

ENVOYS AT AMERICAN FEAST.

Colby Says United States Wants All Shipping Devoted to War.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Many distinguished Frenchmen united with Americans here in observing Thanksgiving Day.

Marshal Joffre, former Premier Viviani, and Capt. Andre Tardieu, the French High Commissioner to the United States, were at the same board with William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador; General Pershing, and Admiral Sims at a luncheon of the American Club, at which the members of the French mission to America and the members of the American mission to the interallied conference were guests. Among the Americans present were Bainbridge Colby, member of the United States Shipping Board; Vance McCormick, Chairman of the War Trade Board; Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Paul D. Cravath, who is acting as legal adviser to Mr. Crosby.

Laurence V. Benet, President of the American Club of Paris, presided. Mr. Benet's every reference to President Wilson, Marshal Joffre, Premier Clemenceau, M. Viviani, General Pershing, and Admiral Sims was cheered by the 250 guests.

Ambassador Sharp spoke upon the significance of the day.

Captain Tardieu dwelt upon the work of the Inter-Allied Conference. He said:

"What we want is a real concentration, under one united direction, of the allied military and economic strength. President Wilson has said it, Colonel House has repeated it. The Inter-Allied meetings have begun and the hour has come for decisive resolutions."

M. Tardieu urged a vigorous policy "in the rear" and alluded to the enemy's endeavoring to develop intrigues under the mask of internationalism.

"The internationalism of socialism is trying to drag to Stockholm too credulous theorists," he said. "The internationalism of religion is leading to intrigue of which the Vatican has made itself too often the instrument. The internationalism of money is using the legal communications of big public banks to nourish behind our fighters the corruptive efforts of Bolos."

Captain Tardieu, after warmly praising what England had done and what the Americans were doing, said that perhaps more painful sacrifices of habits and susceptibilities must be made to realize practically the "pool of direction, the pool of spirit, and the pool of wills."

Mr. Colby, who represented Colonel House, the latter being detained by Inter-Allied Conference business, said that the American Mission proposed to the British Mission that there should be no more trade, no more commerce, and that all shipping facilities should be devoted to a single object, a single aim, —that is, victory. He asserted that no allied ship or cargo would be dispatched that had not for its express object the maintenance of the fighting forces and the victory of the common cause.

M. Viviani, in concluding a brilliant speech upon America's relation to the war, said that Lafayette, representing France, did not go to fight by the side of Washington for America, but the principle of human liberty. So, he said, the Americans did not come to fight for France herself, but for the liberty of the world.

HAMMER ITALIAN POSITIONS IN VAIN

Von Below's Men Are Unable to Make a Serious Impression on Upper Piave.

But Defenders Put Up a Stout Resistance Against Thrusts Made in Great Force.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, Wednesday, Nov. 28.—The principle of German offensive methods is exemplified by the fighting which still proceeds along the great mountain ridge which joins the Piave Valley with that of the Brenta.

Monte Grappa, with its subordinate heights, is the western buttress of it, and Monte Tomba, with its outlying height, Monfenera, is the eastern, with Monte Pallone lying between them. It is a titanic barricade of crags and precipices, crevasses and stone slides, which lies across von Below's road to the illimitable riches of the great plain below.

On either hand of it river valleys run like roads, but ere he can avail himself of them that barrier must be forced somewhere. Von Below's first attempt, as I described it, after his efforts to cross the river had been frustrated, was at Monfenera and Monte Tomba, where he poured out Prussian and Pomeranian blood like water in effort after effort to rush the Italian defense off its feet and start again that swift and irresistible onward movement, which seems essential to any German success. He made of his best troops a hammer with which to drive in the Italian front, actually weakening much of the remainder of his line in order to put insuperable weight into that blow. How that hammer rose and fell, striking again and again!

I have already told that his losses were ghastly and the Italian heavy, but the Monte Tomba defenses held and the great blow failed.

Forthwith another portion of the German machine was reinforced and put into action, and again all the concentrated and prepared strength of the great Fourteenth Army under von Below's command was aimed at a single point.

Attack in a Gorge

The Piave had held, so this time it was the Brenta Valley and the adjoining slopes of Monte Grappa which were the scene of attack. Below Grappa and its outlying spurs and neighbors the valley is little more than a gorge with a stony river of snow water boiling along. It is defended mainly by positions on the heights on either side.

San Marino, a little nest of a hamlet of twelve huddled stone houses, a stucco church, and a tall, square campanile, lies in the neck of the gorge, and toward this in the first hours of attack the enemy came.

At the same time a mixed Austrian and German force attacked Monte Grappa itself with the purpose of clearing out the Alpini and mountain artillery which garrisoned its slopes above the Brenta valley, and all of a sudden this great mountain bulk, which seemed in its vastness to stand aloof from the battle that blazed upon Tomba, and upon whose scarce-trodden heights new snow was lying, was redhot with war.

The valley, which runs down from Feltre on the Piave to the Brenta valley in the rear, gave the enemy the advantage of the plain and easy communications, and they began, as always, with a tremendous canonade on the whole sector.

The gorge of the Brenta became a spout of shells, aimed at the Italian machine gun positions, and the Grappa front, where Monte Pertica flanks it on the north and Col del Orso and Monte Solaroio on the northeast, were searched from end to end with exhaustive fire by great masses of medium calibre artillery, in which the enemy is especially rich.

The Italian guns here were mostly mountain artillery, little guns which fire more rapidly than any I have ever seen, but so light and small that I witnessed ag unner lift the barrel off its carriage and carry it away. The answering fire was, therefore, negligible. It was only when big attacks showed themselves that the Italians were able to get some of their own back.

It was a country as little favorable as can be imagined for the bullheaded German method of trampling down the defense by the mass and momentum of large bodies of attacking troops as Prussians, who followed their shells down the Brenta gorge, went forward easily enough till they reached a point where the valley suddenly widens. There they met a blast of machine guns and were stopped as though at a dead wall.

Three times they withdrew to shelter, while their guns searched afresh for the Italian emplacements, and three times went forward again, always with the same result. A number of them, led by a Lieutenant who managed to crawl beyond the dead line of machine-gun fire along the stones that litter the river side, were observed and forced to take to the water by riflemen above the road. There the waters of Brenta took charge of them and hustled them down, drenched and frozen, into captivity.

Another German Shift.

Above on the mountain front precisely the same thing was happening. It was machine guns that did the trick. Upon Pertica attack after attack was literally cut down as it approached. There were enemy battalions that were cut to pieces while upon Col dell'Orso General Robilant's old Fifty-sixth Division, long since famous for its memorable fighting in the Dolomites, delivered a series of superb counterattacks with the bayonet, forced the enemy back in continuous hand to hand fighting and brought away a couple of hundred prisoners.

It was a clear repulse for the enemy, and his next attack was upon another point of the Grappa front, where the Col della Berreta lifts over the Brenta Valley east and a little south of San Marino. The fine flower of Austrian mountain troops was brought up, the famous Edelweiss, who wear their badge, a specimen of that depressing flower. The bombardment was varied by truly a frightful fire, directed beyond the defenders' lines, a curtain of shells designed to shut them in with the slaughterers and shut reinforcements out.

Then up came the Edelweiss, a whole division of it, to the attack. There was a moment when the situation was grave for the Italians. The Alpini and infantry, who held the line, were terribly outnumbered, and from the first moment their communications with the rear were broken, the telephone wires cut into short lengths by shells, the signalers shot down as they tried to speak with flags, and runners who started and were never heard of again.

There were also a certain number of gas shells beginning to flavor the incessant bombardment, sending up a dense, acrid smoke that drifted toward the defenders and blinded them as to what was taking place beyond the smoke.

Out of that darkness the Edelweiss came pressing up, taking their positions for a final rush in parties of one platoon at a time, getting their machine guns into position among the rocks and finally attacking with the usual bombing parties.

The leading Italian infantry and Alpini fought desperately in their trenches, and out of them there was never a moment at which they were not snowed under by weight of numbers. Yet they fought on and here and there even succeeded in clearing their front for a short time and attempting local counterattacks. But it was a pretty hopeless business, and in the minds of the commanders there was already dawning the knowledge that the question of retreating must be faced.

Reinforcements Just in Time.

The curtain fire was still roaring in their rear when from the right of the line the uproar of the fight took a new note, and along that battered front there ran news that reinforcements were coming up and that some were already there and counterattacking. It was true. They had come through the curtain of death, paying a toll of losses, half a dozen battalions of them, and not feeling any the kindlier to the Edelweiss for the trouble they had in getting there. They went into the fight with a dash which Italian troops seem able to command at any moment, and the Edelweiss never had another chance. The newcomers simply rushed them down the hill to the woods and fought them there in the smoke and over the charred wood underfoot, killing lavishly with the long sword bayonets which infantrymen are prone to slip from their rifles and use as daggers.

There can be no question as to the gravity of the enemy losses. The slopes above the wood and fringes of the burning wood itself were full of his dead and he had not gained an inch of ground. Edelweiss badges can be bought very cheaply in the Italian lines today.

The line of the lower Piave for the moment is relatively quiet. The Italian Navy is still at work with marines and guns in the southernmost sector, and the naval guns, firing at 10,000 yards, played a considerable part in frustrating General Boroevic's attempt to establish a bridgehead where he crossed the river at Zenson.

A typical piece of naval daredevilry has just been accomplished by Lieutenant Biancheri of the Italian Navy. He had an old steamer captured from the Austrians and renamed the Sauro, after the irredentist martyr, and, armed with a single gun, he steamed up the Sile, which is only navigable at all by courtesy.

Along the eastern bank were a number of houses which shelter Austrians. He eased his old ship past these and as he came abreast of each he gave it a shell at about twenty yards' range, spilling the lot of them into heaps of débris. The Austrians who survived spouted forth yelling from the ruins, but the whole thing was so unexpected that except for a spatter of rifle fire the Austrians let him get away unmolested.

Bombardment Night and Day.

SUNDAY, Nov. 25.—The nights now fall early and chill, with winds that breathe from the Alps, but they give no calm of darkness where the long line of Monte Fenera rises above the river and slopes up to the head and saddle of Monte Tomba. There is all night long a never-ceasing leap and gleam of gun flashes, momentarily silhouetting the great mountain shapes against the sky of dead black, with the firefly sparkle of high shrapnel and the flame fountains of bursting shells. Beyond the river slopes of Monte Oesen, above Valdobbiadene, twinkle constellations of sparks from motor guns, those elusive batteries which flicker from point to point of the enemy's front, grouping and regrouping to bring their fire to bear from new and unexpected points.

The night shift of the battle has come on duty and the intensity of the pressure upon the Italian positions never slackens. Day and night attack and counterattack sway to and fro across the disputed portion of the crest between the summit of Tomba and Narazine peak, on the eastern end of Monte Fenera, in a grapple in which battalions melt and vanish, leaving the slopes carpeted with dead.

The Italians are fighting as they have never fought before. I will refer to only two of the brigades employed on the mountain. I have seen them. After a week of this work they produce upon one the effect of men possessed by a sort of fierce ecstasy. The battalions that go up to the attack have lain all day watching the mountain flame like Vesuvius in eruption under the bombardment, and yet they go nonchalantly up to that hell, willingly, almost gayly.

Position on Treatise Front.

It is the point of the front at which the Italians fight at the greatest disadvantage. Here the east and west lines turn south, presenting to the enemy a right angle which he is able to shell upon each of its sides at once, while maintaining his infantry attacks upon the point of the angle, the breaking of which might force retreat in two directions. At the same time, of course, he continues his intermittent drives at the river line, also feinting or actually attacking at various points from Vidor to San Dona di Piave. All the later attempts to cross the river have been repulsed.

The position on Tomba, at the time of writing, is that the Italians have yielded ground on the centre of the crest and now lie on the southern slopes behind the summit, while on the eastern ridge of Monte Fenera and the western saddle of Tomba they still hold the top. The mountain is tree-covered on its northern slopes, so that the Prussians, when they move to attack, are able to get within 150 yards of the top before they need show themselves, while the Italians counterattacks are across a bare skyline lying naked to the fire of incessant shells and the thrash of machine guns.

The importance which the enemy attaches to success at this point is evidenced by his employment here of that formidable phalanx of troops got together for this offensive under von Below. Among the prisoners who have fallen into the hands of the divisions which are holding the mountain are officers and men from the Deutsche Jäger division, formed at Villach in the middle of October for service in Italy. It consists of eight Jäger battalions and one of infantry grouped in three regiments of three battalions each. Among them are a Jäger Guard battalion of Prussians, a Schützen Guard, mostly of Pomeranians, and General von Gorne's battalion of sturmtruppen.

It has been ascertained that the Second Active Jägers came directly from Riga, while some of the others and many aviators have been brought from the western front.

Prussians Insolent to Austrians.

The Prussian prisoners have confirmed what we had already heard from the Austrians, that between the Germans and Austrians there is no good feeling. The Prussians have come hither with a clear idea that their mission is to save the situation for a thoroughly beaten and disgraced army, and have made no secret of their opinions. Prussian soldiers refuse to salute Austrian officers, and Prussian officers have given to their allies a full demonstration of the arrogance, insufferable complacency and insolence which are the cachet of the officer class in their own country.

Prisoners also relate what was fairly obvious, that is, that von Below's whirlwind tactics of advancing swiftly at all hazards have cost him gruesome losses. One battalion was reduced to fifty men, and others were horribly cut up. There are points visible from the Italian lines where the northern slopes of Tomba are paved with field gray dead, the fruit of attacks pushed ruthlessly into the face of the Italian fire and of the Italian counterattacks when the infantry, Arditi or Bersaglieri went at them with the baronet.

Yesterday on the Brenta there was an enemy attempt upon the westward end of the mountain ridge that bars the space between the Piave and the Brenta. Germans and Austrians brought off what was virtually a surprise attack below Monte Grappa, driving down the valley to beyond the tiny riverside hamlet of San Marino.

Major Barraca, the Italian ace, has brought down his twenty-ninth machine. Three were brought down in one day. One of these was downed in a fight in full sight of both armies and ended when the German airman went plunging to smash in the Piave."

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY OF ALLIES IN ITALY

"American Military Authority" Says That the Invaders Cannot Break Through Now.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 28, (Delayed,) (Associated Press.)—Brig. Gen. George P. Scriven of the United States Army, accompanied by an aide and the American Military Attaché at Rome, has arrived at headquarters to study the Italian situation and make a series of reports to the American Government. Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, head of the American Red Cross in Europe, is also here to co-ordinate the work of his organization. General Scriven was received by King Victor Emmanuel, who invited him to dinner, where the situation was discussed at length.

Reports from the front show that the enemy is still persistent, but that little is left of his former vigor of attack, and that he is resorting to the old device of cunning. The Germans have posted placards in Italian, reading:

"Italians, we have come to assist the defenses of the Piave. Your defense is useless. Let us pass without further bloodshed. We shall be in Vicenza in three days."

In reply to this, Italian soldiers posted a placard in German, reading: "You will never pass."

An eminent American military authority summarized the situation in this way:

"While the danger is not yet over, nevertheless it seems to me, from a military viewpoint, that the enemy cannot pass, being confronted by the combined Italian, British, and French forces."

His chief military reason for this view is that the enemy no longer has his lines of communication freely open to the rear, as the Winter is breaking his communications in the north and interrupting if not destroying them to the east. Therefore, he believes, the enemy has reached the maximum and must decline from now on, while the Italians and their allies have all their communications from the west and south open and can augment their forces from now on. Consequently, it appears to this American that the enemy has failed in his main project of breaking through into the heart of Italy.

The foregoing, in addition to giving the American military point of view, probably accords with other high opinion.

Austrians in Fratricidal Combat.

Details have been officially received of one of the most sanguinary fights in the northern zone, in which two Austro-Hungarian regiments fought until they almost exterminated each other. The fight took place back of Asiago in the course of one of the main attacks against the Italians.

"The enemy advanced from the two flanks, and toward night a regiment of Czechs became engaged with a regiment of Galician Poles, both wearing a different uniform and speaking a different dialect. The rifle fire was followed by a bayonet charge and then a hand-to-hand struggle with grenades, lasting through the night, until the two regiments were disentangled after heavy losses, when it became known that they belonged to the same side.

Enemy Pressure Increasing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 28, (Delayed.)—Bitter Winter weather, with wind, snow, and thick fog, now prevails, greatly increasing the hardships of the terrific struggles on the Asiago Plateau. The activity of the artillery is undiminished—if anything, augmented. In the rear, from Rovereto and Campiello, the hurried passage of troops is noticeable.

The enemy feels the absolute necessity of capturing the stronghold of Monte Grappa and increases his pressure every day, while the Italians put new vigor into their resistance, basing it not so much on their lines of defense as on sheer determination.

The positions defending Monte Grappa are approximately in the form of a triangle, the northern apex of which is formed by Monte Montana Secca, while the base is a line running in the direction of Monte Grappa, Monte Pallone, and Monte Tomba. Inside this triangle are high valleys, across which the Italian trenches take an irregular course. On the right and left of the apex the enemy pressure is greatest, but so far the enemy has not obtained even partial success.

Gun Duels on the Whole Front.

ROME, Nov. 29.—Heavy artillery fighting is in progress all along the front, but no further infantry actions of importance are reported by the War Office today. On the Lower Piave River Italian batteries directed a destructive fire upon enemy boats.

BERLIN, Nov. 29, (British Admiralty, Per Wireless Press.)—"Italian attacks against our mountain positions on the west bank of the Brenta and on Monte Tomba, (on the northern front,) failed," says today's official communication.

HINDENBURG DIRECTING DRIVE

Semi-Official Italian Advices Say He Commands the Invaders.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Word reached Washington today through semi-official channels from Rome that Field Marshal von Hindenburg was in personal charge of the conduct of the Austro-German campaign against the Italians. This information, according to the dispatch, was obtained from a captured German officer and confirmed information to that effect previously obtained by the Italians.

"A correspondent of the Giornale d'Italia," said the dispatch, "telegraphs that a German officer taken prisoner confirms the report that Hindenburg has the supreme command of the Austro-German troops operating against Italy, and that his general plan has been foiled by the stiff resistance of the Italian Army. According to this plan, Conrad von Hoetzendorf's army was to roll down like an avalanche on the Sette Comuni Plateau, while the armies of Krobatin and von Below were to pour into the Brenta Valley, surmount the mountainous barrier, and descend into the fertile Venetian plains.

"The beginning of the colossal offensive set for the 14th of November with the arrival of Austro-German troops at Castelgomberto, but the Italian resistance before Meletta and Gallio upset the carefully prepared scheme of Hindenburg. Having failed to break through our lines between the Piave and the Brenta, Hindenburg is fortifying the Tagliamento, the left bank of the Piave, and the Cadore zones, compelling the inhabitants of the invaded regions to work, without distinction of age or sex.

TRAMPED 72 DAYS ESCAPING GERMANS

Lieut. O'Brien of Illinois Dodged Death Many Times in Flight from His Captors.

LEAPED FROM TRAIN IN DARK

Former Santa Fe Engineer Tunneled Under Live Wires with Bare Hands to Reach Holland.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Lieutenant Patrick O'Brien of Momence, Ill., south of Chicago, the first American member of the British Flying Corps to escape from Germany, has arrived in London. O'Brien eluded his captors by jumping from the window of a speeding train. He then became a fugitive for seventy-two days, and as his goal was within sight narrowly escaped electrocution from the charged wires along the Holland frontier.

After cabling to his aged mother, Mrs. Margaret O'Brien at Momence, to expect to see him soon, Lieutenant O'Brien called upon American Ambassador Page to seek advice regarding his desire to be transferred to the American Flying Corps. Last night O'Brien was dined by a group of admiring fliers, who, like scores of friends along the front, had believed he had been killed when he was reported missing on Aug. 17 last.

O'Brien, who is a sturdy man of 27, was flying in the American Aviation Squadron at San Diego, Cal., when he went to Victoria, B. C., and obtained a commission in the Canadian Army. Going to France the next year he distinguished himself by his great daring over the German lines. On the morning of Aug. 17 German gunners forced him to descend, but he landed behind his own lines.

Late that afternoon he went up again over the German lines, fighting the enemy. There were twenty German machines to six British in the encounter. O'Brien's machine alone engaging four German craft and accounting for one before he was shot through the upper lip. He fell with his damaged airplane from a height of 8,000 feet. O'Brien says he cannot explain why he was not killed. When he regained consciousness he was in a German hospital.

Leaped from Speeding Train.

Later the Lieutenant spent three weeks at a prison camp at Courtrai before he was started for the interior of Germany. There were three other prisoners under a strong guard in his compartment when O'Brien, as a ruse, had the window opened by complaining of the smoke. The train was now sixty miles inside Germany and traveling at thirty miles an hour, but O'Brien decided to take a desperate chance. He jumped from the train, skinning the whole side of his face, reopening the wound in his lip and losing consciousness. It was about 4 o'clock in the morning and the darkness shielded him. When he recovered he was lying in a field.

Then for seventy-two days he was a fugitive, traveling only at night. He trudged through fields and swam rivers and canals in Germany, Luxemburg, and Belgium before he reached the Dutch frontier. At the time of his flight he had a piece of sausage on which he subsisted for several days. After that his sole sustenance consisted of turnips and other vegetables found in fields.

O'Brien did not know any German, but he used a little French on a kindly Belgian who was so happy to meet an American in British uniform that he sheltered him for several days. The Belgian then gave him old clothes to cover his uniform and directed him to the nearest route to the frontier. O'Brien swam the River Meuse near Namur and the next day was challenged by German sentries, who decided he was a peasant.

But his narrowest escape was reserved for his last day as a fugitive, when he could see Dutch territory. To circumvent the charged wires O'Brien built a bridge in a nearby wood and threw it across the wires. But it broke under his weight and O'Brien received a shock which he says he can still feel. When he recovered he dug with his bare hands a tunnel under the wire, and, although it was slow progress, after several hours he had a hole big enough to crawl through, which he did unobserved.

Even then O'Brien was not sure he was in Dutch territory, so he concealed himself in a hay barn until the next morning. When daylight came the first thing he saw was people making wooden shoes. He then walked out into the open and hurried to the nearest British Consul, who arranged for his transportation to London.

O'Brien Formerly an Engineer.

MOMENCE, Ill., Nov. 29.—A laconic cablegram, "escaped from German prison; letter follows," prepared this town for the further stirring news today of the escape of Flight Lieutenant Patrick O'Brien.

The message quoted was signed "Pat," and was addressed to his mother, Mrs. Margaret O'Brien. It was forwarded to Cowley, Wyo., where she is visiting, by another son, John.

Before taking up aviation five years ago Patrick O'Brien was a locomotive engineer on the Santa Fe Railroad.

PREDICT RUSSIA WILL STICK.

Muscovite Officials Here Think Allies Can Bring Her to Reason.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Russian officials here do not believe Germany will succeed in her evident intention to remove Russia from the list of her enemies if energetic steps are taken by the Interallied War Council, now assembled in Paris. A well-informed Russian in the closest touch with the international situation so declared today.

"Russia is not yet lost to the Allies," he said. "She is in the throes of a mighty revolution, not yet appreciated in its immensity by the other allies, a revolution which has changed every standard of living, of thought and action in Russia.

"It was inevitable that, before the people could adjust themselves to the new conditions, to a real freedom, in the processes of demonstrating their freedom excesses would be committed. The Allies ought to feel grateful that the extremes of the French Revolution have not been repeated, that even the Bolsheviki profess to have the interests of the world at heart.

"More good can be accomplished by the Allies by addressing the people of Russia in reason, in persuasion, than by declaring that Russia, through the aspiration of her people to realize their freedom, have placed themselves beyond the pale of civilization. The latter declaration would be resented. Let them, rather, seek to convince the Russian people, while awaiting the restoration of a strong, intelligent Government, that the negotiation of an armistice would tend to defeat the very ends the Maximalists are endeavoring to bring about. The Allies have been defeated in Russia, not so much by force of German arms as by German propaganda.

"Appearances indicate that the Bolsheviki have increased their hold upon the armies, and that there is a prospect of an armistice with the German powers. These are surface indications only. The people of Russia have been deceived by German agents and the Allies must undeceive them. They must be convinced that such an armistice as is proposed makes a democratic peace more remote, that it tends to prolong rather than to shorten the war, and to increase the task of the Allies and America.

"The Allies must realize that the Bolshevist Administration is temporary, that it must of necessity be shortlived, and that its downfall will mark the passing from power of all the extremist elements. Out of the present situation will arise a strong Government of permanent duration."

Although no statement has been made in an authoritative quarter, the impression has gained ground here that the American Government favors a policy of conciliation, rather than one that might further alienate Russians from the Entente cause. It is believed the position Colonel House will take in the Paris conference in respect to Russia will reflect this view.

MONTREAL HUNTS SLACKERS

Police Roundup Put in Full Operation Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—The big roundup of Slackers in Montreal began today when the police force set its dragnets and started in to sweep the city.

"We are on the warpath," said Deputy Chief Grandchams. "I have given instructions to every officer of the force to round up those who are liable to military service, or who may be presumed to be liable for service."

All details were completed last night, and this morning orders were sent out to the police and detectives in all parts of the city to look out for slackers. The duties of the police are twofold. They have been furnished with a list of names of men who have refused to report for service, and these will be tracked down and taken into custody. In the second place, the police will be all the time on the hunt for men who are within the age limits of the first class, and such men will be arrested on sight and taken to the nearest police station.

The first part of the city to receive attention was the red light district. There has been a big raid in this neighborhood every night for the last week, and many eligibles have been put under lock and key.

All the civilian representatives of the military authorities on the exemption tribunals have been replaced by men who have seen service at the front. Under the new arrangement it is noticeable that the number of appeals against decisions of the tribunals has greatly increased.

Yet another evidence of the "tightening up" process is to be seen in the intimation to the officials of a local hockey club that the military authorities will strongly appeal in the case of every hockey player who has been exempted from service, as it is considered that too many of this class of men in the very best of physical condition are trying to dodge their duty through political influence or otherwise.

The announcement made last night that if the roster of single men did not yield the 100,000 recruits necessary the married men would be called has been followed by increased efforts to see that slackers are brought to book.

More than 35 per cent. of all the exemptions allowed so far by the boards in District 4 have been appealed, according to figures announced by the military authorities today, as follows: Exempted, 18,454; adjourned, 4,081; refused, 877; total, 23,412; appealed, 6,561.

Today's figures cover Tuesday, when 1,634 cases were dealt with. Of this number 1,144 were exempted, 95 were refused, and 395 were adjourned. In the cases of those exempted 673 appeals were made—about 60 per cent. The military representatives appeared in 192 cases and Captain Brosseau in 381.

CHARGE WAR-BUYING FRAUD.

French Accuse Goldsoun, a Soldier, of Getting Commissions Here.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Proceedings have been instituted by the military authorities against a French soldier named Goldsonn, who was attached to the French artillery mission to the United States in 1915 as an interpreter. The charge is that he obtained commissions amounting to several million francs on purchases he was instructed to make for the French Government.

When Captain André Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States, arrived in America he made inquiries into the activities of Goldsonn, and subsequently filed formal charges against him. The French military authorities have made arrangements for a commission to take testimony in the United States.

It is undrestood that Goldsonn returned to France in the Autumn of 1916, succeeded in having himself discharged from the army as physically unfit, and returned later to America.

CHAMBER FOR MALVY TRIAL.

Deputies Overwhelmingly Indorse Ex-Minister's Impeachment.

PARIS, Wednesday, Nov. 28, (Delayed.)—Although the Chamber of Deputies ordinarily does not sit on Wednesday, a special session was held today to discuss the report of the Committee of Thirty-three, which had been charged to examine if there was occasion to impeach Louis J. Malvy for crimes committed when he was Minister of the Interior.

By a small majority the committee had approved the impeachment. It avoided, however, any investigation of the charges, merely attaching to its report copies of a speech made in the Senate July 22 by Premier Clémenceau, M. Malvy's report on the proceedings in the Chamber on Oct. 4, when Editor Daudet's letter accusing him was read, and Professor Painlevé's declaration on Oct. 16 exonerating M. Malvy.

The Chamber adopted the committee's report by a vote of 512 to 2.

SAY RADICALS HERE BACK BOLSHEVIKI

Socialist Party in America Denounced by Alliance for Labor and Democracy.

CALLED MENACE TO NATION

New York Extremists Now in Russia Suspected of Abusing Our Passport Privileges.

That some of the radicals who went from New York to join the Bolsheviki in Petrograd may have violated the passport regulations of the United States was alleged in a statement issued yesterday by the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, of which Samuel Gompers is the head. The statement identified some of the men who have gone from New York to Russia as being leaders in the radical Socialist movement here and linked their going to Russia with the so-called People's Council, a pacifist organization, with headquarters in this city.

That there is a direct line of communication between the Bolsheviki in Petrograd and radicals in New York was one of the allegations made by Robert Maisel, Director of the Alliance, who said that the plight into which the Bolsheviki had led Russia was a justification of the stand of many former leading Socialists in condemning the pro-German activities of some of the present Socialist leaders.

"New York Socialists have contributed in no small share to the present chaotic state of affairs in Russia," said the Alliance's statement, "and if reports that reach this office are true, there is reason to believe that the passport privileges of this country have at least been abused in that connection.

"It is interesting to learn who are some of the prominent leaders of the Bolsheviki, and to learn their past connection with that element in the Socialist Party of New York that corresponds most closely to the Bolsheviki in Russia.

"For example, S. Epstein, former organizer of the Ladies' Waist Makers, and editor of their journal, now is a Bolsheviki organizer in Russia. J. Voskow, former organizer of one of the Jewish painters' unions, now is a Bolsheviki organizer in Moscow. J. Shubin, a former New York Jewish newspaper man of strong Bolshevist tendencies, left this country on Nov. 7, carrying, so he boasted, important documents from the so-called Workmen's Council here to the Bolshevist leaders in Petrograd. It also is reported that he carried letters from one of the newly elected Socialist officials here. Dr. Max Goldfarb, former labor writer on the Forward, also is in Russia.

"These are only a few of the more prominent ones. There have been hundreds who have gone to Russia from here, many of them with the deliberate intention of helping the Bolshevist movement. Of course, Trotzky's own relations in New York are well known. All of these people were heavily influenced by the Germanic Socialist doctrine of which Morris Hillquit is the leading exponent in America and which is a perversion of true socialism and a denial of true internationalism. It is dominated by the German conception, which is metaphysical in the extreme and which, when not consciously German, plays into the hands of Germany as effectively as though it were consciously operated for the German Government.

"This is excellently illustrated by the dictatorship of Lenine and Trotzky, who declare themselves the proletariat, denying to the actual proletariat any rights whatever, just as the German Emperor might declare himself the State.

"This inter-relation between the Bolsheviki of Russia and of New York simply goes to prove the similarity of types, regardless of locality, and to disclose the German origin of the whole movement, due in large part to the German domination and coloring of the Socialist philosophy.

"This is also why the Socialist Party in America, under its present leadership and with its present Germanized philosophy is a menace to our own country, and because it is a menace to our own country is also a menace to our war program and to the cause for which we fight. Until the Germanic metaphysical conception is taken out of the American Socialist movement it will continue to be a pro-German menace and must be regarded as such by true Americans."

AUSTRIANS FAIL IN ALBANIA.

Italians Repulse Attacks Near Avlona, Inflicting Heavy Losses.

ROME, Nov. 29.—Austrian attacks against the Italian positions in Albania at a point ten miles northeast of the Adriatic seaport of Avlona were repulsed yesterday with heavy losses, the Italian War Office announced today. The text of the statement reads:

Enemy attacks at the confluence of the Susica and Voyusa Rivers at dawn yesterday were repulsed with heavy losses.

NAILS TROTZKY FALSEHOOD.

Russian Minister at Stockholm Repudiates Alleged Dispatch.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 29.—At least one of the alleged diplomatic documents now being published by Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Foreign Minister, is a fabrication, according to M. Goulkevitch, the Russian Minister here. The document in question purported to be a telegram sent by Goulkevitch to Petrograd declaring that he had been informed from Madrid of the proposed seizure of Swedish diplomatic pouches and protesting against it on the ground that it might alienate the new Swedish Government.

M. Goulkevitch authorizes the statement that this dispatch as published in the Petrograd newspaper, Pravda, by the Bolsheviki is a deliberate fabrication. He adds:

"I never sent such a telegram to anybody. Any non-partisan reader can understand how absurd it is in view of the fact that I could not possibly have received such information from Madrid."

The Minister also issued a warning to Swedes to be on their guard against further efforts of the same sort by the Bolsheviki.

TURN TO SEA TO GET COAL TO THE EAST

Railroad Committee Wants Tugs to Tow Fuel There to Relieve Shortage.

ROADS AT BLOCKADE POINT

Resort to Priority, It Is Held, Would Simply Increase Congestion in East.

TO PROLONG LAKE SEASON

Navigation to be Kept Open as Late as Possible—Diversion to Northern Routes.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Nov. 29.—To enable the moving of more coal to the New England States, where a shortage is reported, and to relieve the congestion on the Eastern railroads, the General Operating Committee of the Railroads' War Board, at the close of its second day's meeting tonight, asked, through General Black, Chief of Engineers, and Dr. H. A. Garfield, Federal Fuel Administrator, that more seagoing tugs be furnished to move boats of shallow draught from the ports of Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York to New England points.

Companies operating steamship lines on the Great Lakes were asked by the committee to extend the navigation season as long as possible with a view to relieving the railroads.

Amplifying the order issued yesterday diverting traffic from the Pittsburgh gateway, an order has been sent to all Eastern railroads, the committee announced, providing "that all freight, westbound, from New England, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Harrisburg, and intermediate points be embargoed and diverted to northern routes."

The committee adopted a resolution asking the Eastern seaport lines to organize Overseas Committees, one for each of the ports of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Norfolk, "to secure close co-operation with the Allied Overseas Executive Committee and with the United States authorities and thereby obtain the best results in the rail movement of overseas traffic."

It was indicated that much of today's session of the committee, which was executive, was taken up with the New England coal situation and the effects on general railroad conditions of continued attempts to move coal by railroad into that district to relieve the shortage. After canvassing the situation the committee came to the conclusion that the water route to New England was the only means of solving the coal shortage problem there without creating a new problem in the greater blocking of railroad traffic.

"More serious congestion will occur this Winter unless this water route is opened up," says the committee in a statement issued tonight. Statistics presented by members of the committee, which is comprised of the operating Vice Presidents of the principal Eastern lines, are said to show that the Pennsylvania, Western Maryland, and Baltimore & Ohio Tidewater coal dumping facilities at the Port of Baltimore are only being used to about 25 per cent. of their capacity. The same condition, the committee found, prevails to a slightly less extent at Philadelphia.

"The Navy Department has commandeered 25 per cent. of the seagoing tugs owned by the Reading Railway," says the committee, "which has caused congestion on rail lines, due to the inability to move coal through all-rail routes."

In view of these conditions, the committee asked Chief Engineer Black and Fuel Administrator Garfield to take steps to furnish more seagoing tugs, and also steamers for the deep harbors of the northern coast.

COAL MEN HERE SEE SHORTAGE RELIEVED

Hope for an Increased Supply, Following Announcement of Garfield to Aid Fuel Scarcity.

Coal dealers in New York City yesterday expressed the belief that the fuel shortage here will soon be relieved. They based their expressions on the report from Washington that National Fuel Administrator Garfield had promised aid when the seriousness of the situation was called to his attention by Albert H. Wiggin, State Fuel Administrator. The hope was expressed that by co-operation with Mr. Wiggin a supply of fuel adequate to relieve suffering would soon be available.

Many small dealers in the city have been without coal for several days or more, running on a small allowance, and had no assurance that they could get any more fuel. There have been large yards, it was said, where the bottoms of the bins have been in sight.

It was pointed out by one coal dealer that while it is true that there are empty coal yards and a less supply on hand than ever before, public service corporations, manufacturers, and apartment houses have sufficient supplies to last until increased shipments begin arriving.

Arthur Rice of the Coal Merchants' Association said that the report from Washington that the Fuel Administration would see that coal was shipped here and that empty cars would be kept moving, was gratifying news to the trade.

Mr. Rice said that the Government had been buying more coal than was needed to meet present demands in the camps, and in so doing it had hoarded fuel. He thought it would have been better co-operation if the orders for the army and navy had been distributed over a period of months, instead of putting through orders that made a surplus of supply at some points.

Officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad said yesterday that that line was not responsible for any threatened shortage in New York's coal supply, as reported to the Fuel Administration at Washington by the New York State Coal Administrator.

"The only coal we have diverted," said President E. E. Loomis, "was at the express orders of the National Fuel Administration. At its request we have rushed coal particularly to the Northwest and more recently we have been urged to send all the coal possible to New England. Since Jan. 1, 1917, we have delivered more coal to New York than we did in a similar period in 1916. In the last three months we have unloaded more coal at our Perth Amboy piers, where coal for New York is handled, than in a similar period in many years."

The coal shortage situation is characterized as a menace to the war program of the nation in an editorial published in today's issue of The Railway Age Gazette. Coal operators of the country are attacked in the editorial for not attaining the height of production expected of them and for placing the blame for the shortage upon the carriers, declaring that the real blame rests upon the shoulders of the operators themselves. It says the Government Fuel Administration is not awake to the situation.

OKLAHOMA COAL ADVANCED.

Garfield Grants Operators 5 Cents a Ton More.

McALESTER, Okla., Nov. 29.—Oklahoma Coal operators and H. A. Garfield, Federal Fuel Administrator, have smoothed over their differences, according to a telegram received here tonight from William Wilkinson, President of the Oklahoma-Arkansas District, United Mine Workers of America, now in Washington.

A tentative agreement has been reached which will allow the operators an advance of 5 cents a ton, retroactive to Nov. 1, Mr. Wilkinson announced.

PARKWAY BATHS GO IN A SWIFT FIRE

Blaze a Spectacle for 100,000 Persons, Who Swamp Transit Lines.

TWO HOTELS DESTROYED

Gunboat Off Sandy Hook Aids Great Force of Firemen with Its Searchlight.

Blown along the Brighton Beach boardwalk by a sharp west wind, a fire that started at 6:20 o'clock last night under the office of the Parkway Baths, not far east of Ocean Parkway, was not checked until the baths themselves, two hotels, a drug store, a shooting gallery, and several small stands for the sale of knickknacks were destroyed. But for a shift in the wind, which turned the flames back upon the area which they had already devastated, the fire might have burned far down the boardwalk, notwithstanding the efforts of firemen summoned by five alarms from all over Brooklyn. As it was, the damage was estimated at more than $400,000.

The blaze was discovered by Policeman Thomas Prattock of the Coney Island station, who was walking along the boardwalk in front of the Parkway Baths, when he heard a crackling under his feet and looked down to see flames and smoke issuing from the landward side of the walk, under the offices of the baths. The bathhouse is headquarters for the Polar Bears, Arctics, and Snow Birds, three organizations of cold-weather swimmers, whose antics in the surf and on the beach had been watched by groups of boardwalk strollers in the afternoon; but they had all gone home and very few attendants were in the huge expanse of the bathhouse buildings when the fire was discovered.

Many Firemen Summoned.

Prattock turned in an alarm, and when Battalion Chief William Rodgers arrived with the first detachment of firemen he saw the Parkway Baths already ablaze and the wind threatening to sweep the fire further to the eastward. He turned in a second, third, and fourth alarm, bringing apparatus from all parts of the borough. With the new reinforcements came Deputy Chief O'Hara, in charge of Brooklyn and Queens. By the time he arrived the situation was so serious that a fifth alarm was turned in.

The building housing the Parkway Baths, with accommodations for 8,000 persons, runs for 200 feet along the boardwalk and 300 feet back into the sandy beach. This was all ablaze in a few minutes, and with it Hubb's Hotel, situated at the westward side of the baths building. At the beginning the flames were kept under and great clouds of black smoke swept eastward down the boardwalk, blotting out buildings only a few feet away and making difficult the task of the firemen, helped by comparatively few lights.

Gunboat Aids with Searchlight.

Out off the harbor entrance, toward Sandy Hook, a gunboat was on guard, and as signals came from the land she turned her searchlight on the drifting masses of smoke, giving the firemen such aid as was possible. Before long, however, the searchlight was not needed, for the huge bathhouse was ablaze. The flames leaped across the fifteen-foot alleyway to the eastward, aided in their progress by several wooden bridges, and caught the hot salt water baths, which had a hundred-foot frontage and the same extension back. Beyond this was the Brighton Inn, owned by Vincent Padula, and to the east of this Rawlinson's drug store. All these burned, and a shooting gallery beyond them, and the fire would certainly have gone further if the wind had not suddenly swung from the west to the south and then around to the east, driving the fire back on itself.

Meanwhile the light from the blazing wooden buildings had glared so widely that it could be seen from all parts of Brooklyn, and even from lower Manhattan. Far and wide families at leisure, through the holiday, turned out to look at the fire, and eventually a crowd collected which the police estimated at 100,000 persons.

Sightseers Swamp Transit Lines.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Elevated facilities were almost swamped by the crowds of sightseers, and many hundreds of automobiles crowded the boulevards and parkways leading down to the beach. Captain Byron T. Sackett of the Coney Island Station called his reserves to keep the crowds back, but eventually had to be reinforced by fifty Home Defense Leaguers and the reserves from ten more precincts before he could hold them under restraint.

Meanwhile the flames had been blown back to the westward and caught hold in earnest of two buildings to the west of the baths already badly scorched. These were Meade's Casino in the angle of the Boardwalk and Ocean Parkway, and the New Brighton Theatre, fronting on the parkway just inland. But here, aided by the freedom afforded by the wide street, the firemen were enabled to stop the blaze. The Casino had its window casings burned and considerable damage done to hangings and furnishings inside, where firemen fought the fire at close quarters. The roof of the theatre was burned off, but the rest of the building was saved.

The properties destroyed belonged to the Realty Associates, of which Frank Bailey is President. Samuel W. Gumperts, General manager of the baths, is now in Cuba, but an enterprising assistant, seeing the unaccustomed Winter crowds, opened the Eden Musee, under the same management, further up the boardwalk, and did a flourishing business.

Fire Marshal Brophy said last night that he had reported to Fire Commissioner Adamson that the blaze was caused by the rekindling of a fire which was discovered under the boardwalk in front of the Parkway Baths early yesterday afternoon. Peter Samaktes, a candy vendor, told the Fire Marshal that he had discovered fire under the boardwalk and after pouring several buckets of water on the small blaze he hed left for home.

MANY HERE FROM WAR ZONE

French and American Soldiers and Antillies's Crew Back from Europe.

Among those who returned from abroad on a passenger vessel which arrived at an Atlantic port yesterday was William T. P. Hollingsworth, Vice President of the American War Relief Clearing House. Before he left the other side Mr. Hollingsworth met several prominent Russians who had not been long out of their country. He said that it was their opinion that the Bolshevist heads could be dealt with more successfully if the Allies used the same methods as Germany. He would not discuss those methods, but said that they were not military. He added that in dealing with the Russian situation there should be a study of German financial methods.

Mr. Hollingsworth went over this time to attend the wedding of his daughter, Gladis, to Frederick Attwood, an American engineer.

Three envoys of French Fellowship, soldiers who have been decorated for valor, arrived on their way to Canada. Their object is to bring about a better understanding among the French Canadians regarding the war and the part the Allies are taking in the fight against autocracy. The leader is Captain Eugene Dutholt, who before the war was Professor of Law and Political Economy at the Catholic University at Lille.

"We are here to revive on the banks of the St. Lawrence the traditional friendship between us who speak the same tongue," said Captain Dutholt. "We bring the fraternal spirit of the common cause of the Allies. We will tell them how the laws of international right and humanity have been torn to pieces by the brutality of the Germans. France wants the Canadians who speak our language and are of our blood to know how much she appreciates their efforts and to stimulate them to greater endeavor."

Representative R. W. Parker of New Jersey, who was one of the ten Congressmen who recently visited the French battle front, returned, and Congressman Hicks is now the only member left in France.

PRISONERS GUESTS OF MRS. DE SAULLES

She Gives Thanksgiving Feast to the 52 Inmates of Mineola Jail.

TRIAL RESUMED TODAY

Lawyers for Defense Spend Holiday in Preparing 20,000-Word Hypothetical Question.

Mrs. Blanca De Saulles gave a Thanksgiving dinner yesterday at the Mineola Jail to her fifty-two fellow prisoners. She did not act as the hostess personally, however. She had her son with her, and she was said to be too much preoccupied with her anxiety over the verdict which the jury will give in her case, probably next week.

Mrs. De Saulles eagerly questioned persons to whom she talked yesterday about their view of the outcome of the case. She was confident she would be acquitted, but she was worried and wanted confirmation of her own hope from every one to whom she talked. When her boy arrived, she asked a man who was with him what he thought of the way the trial was going. He said:

"Well, there may be a disagreement."

"Oh, don't say that," she said. "Anything but that. I don't want to go through this again."

Her maid, Suzanne Monteau, who was present, was as much shocked by this possibility as her mistress. She said: "Would I have to testify again?"

She was told that she would. Mlle. Monteau had been handled very sharply during her cross-examination, and burst into tears on the witness stand. She exclaimed:

"I could not stand it, to have that District Attorney talk to me again."

Eager as to the Future.

Mrs. De Saulles's eagerness about her own future was manifested yesterday. In spite of the fact that she was reported by those who saw her to be suffering severely from the reaction after her two days' ordeal on the witness stand, followed by the testimony of the medical experts who went into hundreds of minute particulars in discussing her condition of health and her physical symptoms, Sheriff Phineas Seaman said that the young woman appeared to be in good spirits and more animated than usual, in spite of her appearance of weakness and exhaustion.

The boy had his Thanksgiving dinner with his mother and her sister Amana together in the quarters of Sheriff Seaman, while the other prisoners were dining below in a large chamber known as the "thirty-day" room.

The guests of Mrs. De Saulles yesterday were fifty male prisoners and two women. Their dinner, bought by Mrs. De Saulles, consisted of turkey, fruit, ice cream, and soft drinks in which they drank success to the defense in the trial. Amalia, the pretty and lively sister of the accused woman, supervised the cooking of the dinner and helped to serve it.

Two of the prisoners who enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. De Saulles are, like her, under charges of murder in the first degree. One of these is a Polish man 25 years old, who is charged on circumstantial evidence with killing his wife, whom he married under duress. Another is a man named O'Brien, also charged with killing his wife during a drinking bout. Another of her guests was Dominick Dimasco, who was recently tried for murder in the first degree for killing his wife and convicted of manslaughter. He has not yet been sentenced. Most of the other prisoners have only minor charges against them. One of the two women prisoners is charged with arson and the other with habitual intoxication.

Prisoners Toast a Hostess.

After they had eaten the dinner a committee of the prisoners was appointed to convey the thanks of all to her. For this purpose the pen of Austin Reilly, a prisoner, wholly known as "the educated barbituate," was employed. The letter was as follows:

Mrs. Blanca De Saulles, Mineola, L. I.

Dear Madam: We desire to thank you sincerely for your kindness and thoughtfulness toward us today. It is impossible to put into words our kindly thoughts to-ward you. However, it is our earnest wish and desire that your next Thanksgiving will be spent with your darling family and your noble little boy. Very sincerely yours,

JACK KARASEK,
WILLIAM SUMMERS,
JOHN COLEMAN,
WILLIAM KELLY,
JOSEPH WALTERS,
JACK KIRKPATRICK,
LOUIS McCAULEY,
ARTHUR TIERNAN,
Committee.

After she had finished serving the prisoners, Miss Errazuriz joined her sister and little Jack De Saulles, who was sent over for the Thanksgiving dinner with his mother by special consent of the family of De Saulles. While he was with his mother the boy dictated a letter to Santa Claus, which she took down for him. He asked for a toy stable and toy horses and a lot of other playthings.

The boy has no idea of the danger in which his mother is placed, but has recently begun to ask very many questions about the place in which she was confined. He was told that it was a hospital and that his mother was there because she was sick. This satisfied him for a long time, but he recently pointed out that there were chickens in the jail yard and asked if they belonged at a hospital. Gradually the boy, who is now 5 years old, came to learn that, whether his mother is under the Sheriff's orders or not, the other prisoners are, and that not all are treated as politely as his mother is. Yesterday somebody let the boy have the badge of a Sheriff. He went to one of the windows opening on the court-yard and called until he had attracted the attention of a few prisoners. Then he pointed at his badge and shouted:

"I'm the Sheriff."

While the boy knows that his father is dead, he has never connected this fact with his mother's imprisonment, according to his attendants. He came yesterday carrying a swagger stick, which he would twirl about on one finger. He asked Harry V. Dougherty, head of the Dougherty Detective Agency, who took him to the jail, if he did not remember that his father used to make a swagger stick pin.

Although Dougherty is the President of the agency, the relatives of De Saulles have insisted that he should take personal charge of the boy and not leave the child's safety to any of his employees Dougherty said yesterday.

"I have been watching the boy now for more than a year," during the divorce proceedings De Saulles said to me. 'My wife is getting a divorce from me. We can't get along together. I haven't anything to say against her at all, but if the kid should ever be taken to Paris there would be no chance on earth that I would ever get him back again. After that we had operatives constantly watching the boy while he was with his mother in the city and at her home in Westbury."

After De Saulles was killed other members of the family feared that an attempt would be made to kidnap the boy. Every time he has visited the jail he has been in charge of Dougherty. On the boy's first visit at the jail, a few days after the killing, Dougherty said that the boy and his mother appeared to be very distant, but that since then they had become increasingly affectionate.

Not a Holiday for the Lawyers.

Henry A. Uterhart and ex-Judge Louis J. Smith, counsel for the defense, were at the Garden City Hotel yesterday preparing for today's session in court with the alienists. The counsel for the defendant were dictating to stenographers the 20,000-word question, in which all the evidence for the defense will be massed.

District Attorney Weeks was in conference with experts for the prosecution, outlining his rebuttal of the medical testimony. The case of the prosecution was slightly weakened because of the fact that the District Attorney has decided not to put on the stand two county officials who were considered important witnesses for the State. While Mr. Weeks credits these two officials with perfectly good faith, he is unwilling to put them on the witness stand because of the fact that they have seen so much of the defendant it is feared her charm has created an unconscious bias in her favor which would be reflected in their testimony.

Mr. Weeks said yesterday that while the facts regarding the hypothyroid condition of Mrs. De Saulles might be true as outlined by the defense, his information was that the thyroid disease never produced amnesia, and would not produce the alleged blank in the memory of Mrs. De Saulles for a period of ten days.

Mr. Weeks expects his experts to testify that the mental condition of Mrs. De Saulles, as observed in the Mineola Jail, was not due to her quarrel with De Saulles over the boy, but her own act in shooting De Saulles, her subsequent arrest, and the reflection that she had placed her own life in jeopardy. The prosecution expects to discredit the contention that Mrs. De Saulles was in such a condition at the time of the shooting and ten days afterward that she was later unable to recall anything about what had passed during this period. He said:

"I never heard before of a condition of amnesia which allowed a person to act normally and rationally, as she did after the shooting, but prevented those facts from being registered in her memory. The hypothetical question framed by the defense will be turned over to the prosecution, which will add to it or change it, and then present it to the three alienists for the State, Dr. George H. Kirby, Dr. Isham Harris, and Dr. Pilgrim of the Hudson State Hospital.

Sessions of court will be held today and Saturday, but it is expected that the few remaining witnesses and the expert testimony will take up all the time at both those sessions. It is thought that Monday will be the earliest day when the case may go to the jury, and that a prompt verdict will be returned.

The trial will be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock.

HELD AS A SWINDLER.

New Yorker Arrested in Peoria for Fake Mining Transaction.

Special to The New York Times.

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 29.—The police of this city today arrested William Thurston of New York City just as Michael Chapman, a wealthy distiller, was handing over $10,000 in cash to Thurston as the final move in a deal involving the transfer of a gold mine in Nevada. Chapman drew the money out of the bank yesterday, explaining that he was going to turn a farm deal and make $2,000 in two days.

Bankers became suspicious of his carrying $10,000 in cash and a detective was assigned to follow him. The transfer of papers was made in a Galesburg hotel, when detectives waiting on the outside burst open the door just as the $10,000 was being turned over. Thurston was placed under arrest and returned to Peoria.

Thurston, according to the police, admitted that the deal was crooked. The police allege that Thurston is a member of a trio of expert confidence men who have been operating out of New York and Chicago. Thurston maintained two headquarters here, one an expensive suite of rooms at the Jefferson Hotel and another room in the underworld district, where he held conferences with confederates.

Va., and Atlanta, Ga. Similar complaints from California, Arizona, and other States also are charged against the Duncans.

JEWISH SOCIALISTS ACCLAIM ZIONISM

Big Meeting Sees Hope of National Home in Palestine Through British Pledge.

ASKS AID OF PRESIDENT

Convention Will Be Held in January to Mobilize Workers of the Race.

Zionists who are Socialists celebrated last night in Cooper Union the declaration of the British Government in favor of allowing the Jews to establish their national home in Palestine. A movement was started for a great international Jewish industrial army to return to Jerusalem as soon as political conditions allow, and do the pioneer work necessary for the return of Jews to Palestine. The audience packed the hall to the doors.

Beside the Stars and Stripes over the platform hung the flag of Zionism—the blue and white colors of the House of David. Baruch Zuckerman, General Secretary of the Peoples Relief Committee, presided. The speakers included Dr. Ch. Zhitlowsky, Dr. N. Syrkin, Ben Gurion, Ben Zevie, Dr. Hilel Solotaroff, and Joseph Slosberg, Secretary of the Almagamated Garment Workers of America.

The meeting adopted a resolution asking President Wilson to declare in favor of a Jewish home land in Palestine. It was also announced that a fund of $40,000 is to be raised with which to make the organization countrywide and to be used in organizing Jews of radical political tendencies so that they too will join the movement. The object of the meeting was to organize the Socialists and radicals of the Jewish faith, which it was said, means practically the Jewish working class, so that they would be ready to go to Palestine and upbuild the country. There will be no limit to the number in this army. The Socialists are optimistic. Those of the Zionist movement here believe that after the war even Germany will not place obstacles in the way of the realization of Jewish hopes.

"We hail from the bottom of our hearts the historic victory of the 2,000-year-old hope and belief of the Jewish people in its national rehabilitation," said the resolution adopted. "We greet with joy and a deep sense of happiness the official declaration of the English Government to the Zionist movement, in which there has been proclaimed the right of the Jewish nation to a national home in its historic motheriand.

"We solemnly declare before the judgment of Jewish history that it is now the most sacred duty of every Jew to devote all his spiritual and material forces, and when necessary his life, for the immediate realization of Zionism and the upbuilding of the Jewish home in Palestine. We, Jewish workers, Socialists, and revolutionists, take upon ourselves to form the vanguard of the national movement for liberty and of the organized proletarian Zionism, and to co-operate with all the forces at our disposal for the speedy mobilization of the Jewish working classes to, for, and in Palestine.

"We solemnly swear to take over and to control and to bring to a successful end the work of our fallen heroic pioneers, workers, and guards who have sacrificed their lives for the liberation and rehabilitation of the Jewish people in the Jewish land."

The speeches were made in Yiddish. It was said that many of those in the hall had come from Palestine or were the children of those who had been driven into exile. The speakers told of the centuries-old longing of the Jews to have a national home and to govern themselves, a respected nation, contributing its share to the civilization and enlightenment of the world.

When the fund was announced there was much applause, and as the Chairman finished a man shouted, "I will give $10." It was the first English spoken at the meeting. Others followed, and soon there was a crowd about the platform handing up bills. They were mostly of small denomination. Several hundred dollars was raised.

The movement will be organized at a Socialist Zion convention here in January.

College Club in Paris Big Success

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 29.—The American University Union in Paris, a club for American college men who are serving their country, although open only three weeks, has already registered men from eighty-four different colleges, according to word received by Roger Pierce, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, from George H. Nettleton, Secretary of the union. The original quarters at the Royal Palace Hotel have been outgrown and more room has been provided at an adjacent hotel.

CALL, UNDER EMBARGO, TO BE EVENING PAPER

Barred from Mails and City Distribution, It Will Serve Its Own Subscribers.

Branding the Postmaster General as this country's "thought controller," Charles W. Ervin, managing editor of The Call, at an election celebration by Bronx Socialists in Burland's Casino, 809 Westchester Avenue, last night, announced that, because of recent strictures by the Post Office Department and "terrorism" by New York newsdistributing corporations, The Call would become an evening newspaper after next Sunday and would handle its own distribution.

The celebration at which Mr. Ervin spoke was given to mark the Socialist victory in the Third Assembly District at the recent election, in which three Socialist Assemblymen and one Socialist Alderman were elected. The toastmaster, Mrs. Mary MacDonald, wife of a former managing editor of The Call, also stigmatized Postmaster General Burleson as a "thought controller." She and Ervin and other Socialist speakers attacked THE NEW YORK TIMES for what they said was its anti-Socialist attitude.

About 200 Socialists were present, and Ervin was cheered as the "champion of free speech in New York."

"I have just heard the cry, 'Long Live The Call,'" Ervin declared, "and I want to assure you that The Call is going to continue to live in spite of all the handicaps which it is meeting. Before I left my office tonight, I sent out a general notification that The Call would become an evening newspaper beginning next Monday. The nation's thought controller the Postmaster General, has sought to control it through cutting off the channels of its distribution. But we have backed the most important Government department off the map. Backed by Wall Street and the powers that prey, the corporations which have been distributing throughout the city recently started a course of interference and terrorism against us. This has forced us to form our own distributing company, and next Monday evening The Call will be for sale throughout the Bronx. The Bronx was largely responsible for the 150,000 votes which were cast for Mr. Hillquit and for the victory of woman suffrage. If you don't believe this, read the explanation given by THE NEW YORK TIMES. The Call has always been a prosperous newspaper until the thought controller came on the scene. If you continue to support it, The Call will defeat the purpose of every tyrant in America. Long live the Socialist movement, and long live The Call."

When asked, after the dinner, to explain his attitude regarding the Federal Administration and the war, Ervin, in addition to stating that he meant no attack on the former, added that he was making it his special duty to attack "Kaiserism in America." He also said he understood that Postmaster General Burleson's policies were not approved by "a large part of the Administration in Washington."

"I have always attacked Kaiserism," he said. "I attacked the German Kaiser and his militarism in 1913 when THE NEW YORK TIMES was praising him. I am not a pacifist. I am a fighter, and my ancestors fought in the civil war. Just now, however, I believe it most important for me personally to fight capitalism and Kaiserism in this country. If the Socialist Party were to be elected to control Congress and the Federal Administration, it would, if the country were attacked by Germany, take active steps to defend the nation."

Ervin said that he did not wish to be "interviewed," and protested against being quoted. He said that The Call's second-class mailing privileges had been taken away by the United States Post Office two weeks ago, and that the paper was now being mailed out of the city and paying full postage.

Socialist Assemblymen-elect Charles B. Garfinkle and Benjamin Gitlow also spoke. Gitlow said that, in the next election, the Socialists of the city would "give THE NEW YORK TIMES the biggest surprise it ever had."

Superintendent Maxwell Recovered.

William H. Maxwell, City Superintendent of Schools, who was operated on in the Flushing Hospital two months ago for intestinal trouble, has entirely recovered, and is now at his home in Franklin Place, Flushing. His attending physicians say that his recovery was remarkable. The operation was a very delicate one, and in spite of his advanced years Mr. Maxwell rallied, and it is now believed that he will soon be able to resume his duties.

DOCTOR TESTIFIES MRS. KING WAS SLAIN

Chicago Coroner's Physician Swears She Could Not Have Fired Shot Which Killed Her.

DOOLING ACCUSES MEANS

Tells the Court That Defendant Was Planning Forgery in Connection with One of the Wills.

CONCORD, N. C., Nov. 29.—Over the vigorous objections of the defense, Dr. W. H. Burmeister, pathologist and coroner's physician of Cook County, Ill., was allowed by the Court to testify today at the trial of Gaston B. Means that in his opinion it would have been impossible for Mrs. Maude A. King to have fired the shot which caused her death at Blackwelder Spring, near here, the night of Aug. 29.

An examination of Mrs. King's body at Chicago by Dr. Burmeister, after a local Coroner's jury had decided that her death was accidental, resulted in the starting of a new investigation and the subsequent arrest of Means on the charge of murder. Dr. Burmeister told the jury that the wound was in the back of the woman's head, that there were no powder stains, and that he believed it would have been impossible for a woman as stout as Mrs. King to have inflicted the wound upon herself.

Dr. Burmeister's testimony and the introduction of a number of letters, telegrams, and other documents, including a photographic copy of the probated will of J. C. King, husband of the dead woman, while Americus B. Melville of Chicago, Mrs. King's former lawyer, was on the stand, were the outstanding features of the second day of the State's presentation of its case.

Assistant District Attorney Dooling of New York told the Court that one of the letters was put into evidence in an effort to prove that at about the time of the discovery of the alleged second will of Mr. King Means was earnestly seeking to get into communication with a man named Sprague, who had served a prison term for forgery. Under the terms of the second will, it is alleged, Mrs. King would have received an additional large sum of money from her husband's estate, the funds now being held for charity.

While Mr. Dooling had been in the courtroom since the trial began, he did not take an active part in the case until today, when he began to assist Solicitor Hayden Clement in the examination of witnesses, and almost solely conducted the examination of Melville. Counsel for the defense asked whether Mr. Dooling also was to appear as a witness. Solicitor Clement replied that the matter had not been determined yet, and that he would temporarily cease to act in the rôle of attorney. This ended the incident.

Attorney Melville testified that he handled the settling of the estate of Mrs. King after the death of her husband, and also transacted much business for her. He met Means in 1913, being introduced by Mrs. King, who told him that Means was her business agent, and that she had an agreement with him by which he was to receive one-half of all the money he "saved" for her above $10,000 a year. Her income from the estate, it was testified, was $17,000 a year.

A paper, purporting to be a statement made by Means to Mrs. King, was presented in evidence. It showed profits of $26,000 on various transactions in 1915, which yielded Means $8,000 under the agreement. On cross-examination the witness said he never saw any evidence that Mrs. King was in any way dominated by Means.

Dr. Burmeister was called to the stand late in the day after I. J. Howard of Charlotte, N. C., had told of sending Means an automobile, which was paid for in cash from a large amount of bills Means had on his person. The Chicago physician was vigorously cross-examined by counsel for the defense, and they elicited from him a declaration that in his judgment a pistol held against human flesh and fired would not leave any powder stains.

By some in the courtroom this line of questioning was interpreted to mean that the defense would rely upon the theory of suicide rather than upon the contention that Mrs. King had placed her revolver in the crotch of a tree, and that when she slipped on a root and fell, breaking her ankle, the gun fell from the tree and discharged when it struck her head.

Most of the documents introduced while Melville was on the stand were offered it was explained, largely to identify Means' handwriting and many of them were not read. They will be taken up later after the defense has had an opportunity to examine them, it was announced.

It was learned tonight that Mrs. Anna L. Robinson, the aged mother of the dead woman, had arrived in Concord from Asheville. She is stopping at a hotel, and is known to have told the proprietor that she did not wish to see any one, particularly her daughter, Mrs. Mary C. Melvin, who arrived earlier in the week, and is in constant attendance at the trial. The prosecution plans to put Mrs. Robinson on the stand tomorrow.

Means continues his smiling, unruffled demeanor and is apparently as confident of an acquittal as ever. He sits constantly beside his attorneys, frequently conferring with them and offering suggestions on points upon which to question witnesses.

ARREST GERMAN WHO FLED PRISON CAMP

Carl Sabel, One of Ten Escaping from Fort McPherson, Was a Door Attendant Here.

Carl Sabel, a petty officer of the German Navy, one of the ten interned Germans who escaped from the prison camp at Fort McPherson, Ga., on Oct. 23 last, was captured in New York last night. He is the last of the Germans who escaped under the leadership of Lieutenant Hans Berg, the officer, who brought the British liner Appam into Hampton Roads, Va., as a prize of war in 1916, to be rounded up. He probably will be returned to Fort McPherson in a few days. When arrested Sabel was employed as a doorman of a Fifth Avenue store, the name of which is withheld by the Secret Service.

The arrest of Sabel by Secret Service agents was the end of a quiet chase which has extended half-way across the continent. When the Germans under Berg tunneled out of Fort McPherson they seperated, some going south, others west, and the rest north. Berg and Hans Loescher, the latter an officer who served on the raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, fled south with the intention of crossing into Mexico and identifying themselves with one of the German colonies in that country. They were arrested by Secret Service agents as they were about to cross the Rio Grande, near Laredo, Texas, on Nov. 7 last, and are now back at Fort McPherson. Both had large sums of money when arrested.

Sabel parted with Berg and Loescher in Atlanta. He assumed the name of Frederick John Belmont, and under that name obtained the position of doorman at the Fifth Avenue store in front of which he was arrested. William J. Flynn, Chief of the Secret Service, in announcing the capture of Sabel last night, said he was not permitted to say how the Secret Service gained possession of the information which led to the arrest of the German sailor.

Sabel, after his arrest, admitted that he was the last of Berg's company of Germans. He is a well educated young man, and speaks several languages. He did not make any statement as to the source of the money supplied himself and others at the time of their escape.

Information is now in the possession of the Government which tends to confirm a report that a woman aided the Germans to escape from Atlanta once they had succeeded in getting out of the prison camp. The tunnel through which they escaped was fourteen yards long, and required two weeks to dig. This woman, who is said to be a New Yorker, arrived in Atlanta two days before Berg and the other Germans escaped, and went to board at a house less than fifty yards from the Fort McPherson barracks. So far as is known, the Government agents have not arrested the woman.

KILLED BY OVERTURNED CAR

Mrs. Lucius Henderson Victim of Auto Accident—Husband Escapes.

Mrs. Helen Studebaker Henderson, wife of Lucius Henderson of 10 Faneuil Place, New Rochelle, and daughter of the late Jacob F. Studebaker, one of the founders of the Studebaker Corporation of South Bend, Ind., was instantly killed yesterday morning when the automobile in which she and her husband were being driven from this city to their home skidded and overturned in Boston Post Road, near New Rochelle. Mrs. Henderson was pinned beneath the car, the chauffeur and her husband escaping with slight injuries.

Aid was summoned at once from New Rochelle, but when physicians arrived and the body of the car was lifted it was found that Mrs. Henderson had been crushed by its weight. She was prominent socially in this city, her home, South Bend, Ind., and Chicago.

GOULD DINES IN CAMP.

One of 10,000 at Army Thanksgiving at Wrightstown.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., Nov. 29.—Corporal Kingdon Gould, the son of George J. Gould, who is a member of the Division Headquarters troop at Camp Dix, was one of the 10,000 men who did not get a pass to spend Thanksgiving Day at home, and he messed with the men of his troop today and seemed to enjoy the dinner. The fact that he could have induced one of the men of the troop to exchange furloughs with him and did not make this request brought favorable comment from the other soldiers.

There were 12,000 of the boys who "dined out" today, practically all of them getting away from the camp yesterday afternoon. But those who remained had "the best meal ever furnished to an American army," according to Captain C. J. Kalhero, of the Cooks' and Bakers' School.

As an illustration of what the best meal was, he cited the menu prepared for the boys of Company A, 308th New York Infantry, which consisted of oyster cocktail, roast turkey, roast ham, cranberry sauce, sweet and white potatoes, pumpkin and mince pie, mixed candies and nuts, fruits, ice cream, cigars and cigarettes, coffee, and sweet cider.

General Kennedy and most of the officers at the camp remained here for dinner. Tonight there were special entertainments provided for the men in the Y. M. C. A.

On Saturday 8,000 men will make the trip to Franklin Field, Philadelphia, to witness the football game between Camp Dix and Camp Meade teams.

FEAST AT WADSWORTH.

32,000 New York Soldiers Make Gallant Attack on Turkey and "Fixings."

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 29.—A dinner that had none of the regular fixings left out, a theatrical program with a Broadway flavor, community singing that ran from ragtime to the songs of the soldiers, and an athletic field day was the sort of warfare served up to the Twenty-seventh Division today. It was the second Thanksgiving the former guardsmen had celebrated in service in two years, and though last year's affair on the border was counted a great success, today's onslaught on menus certainly was a greater success.

From sunup to sundown, some sort of entertainment was going on, and although the men were at liberty to go into Spartanburg over the holiday without passes, the fun at camp was so jolly that scarcely a man left the reservation.

Among those who came down to participate in the jollification was Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., after whose father the camp was named. Senator Wadsworth, an ex-member of the former Troop M of the First Cavalry, was at the border this day a year ago, and he said tonight that he hoped to be with the Twenty-seventh next year when, according to the current issue of The Wadsworth Gas Attack, camp publication, the Thanksgiving menu will consist of "wieners and sauerkraut from the royal wine cellars of the Imperial Palace."

Here is the menu that the 32,000 healthy young men faced unflinchingly:

Olives, Celery Hearts.
Sweet Mixed Pickles.
Roast Spring Turkey, Giblet Sauce,
Oyster Dressing, Cranberry Jelly.
Creamed Mashed White Potatoes.
Candied Yams.
Creamed Spinach.
Pumpkin Pie, Mince Pie.
Chocolate and Lemon Cake.
Vanilla and Chocolate Ice Cream.
English Walnuts, Tokay Grapes,
Imperial Apples, Oranges.
Bread and Butter.
Cafe Noir.
Cigars and Cigarettes.

Safe Toys

Just as the Fourth of July has become safe, so have the toys of Christmas.

Rocking horses are taboo; instead one will see horses for little boys, made on much the same principles as the old "patent rockers" with a solid base, and no matter how hard he rocks, he is safe.

There are other motion toys—swings into which baby can be tied perfectly securely, and self-propelled Kiddie Kars, low enough to make a tumble no mishap, and so constructed as to develop not only the leg muscles, but to co-ordinate the head and hands in steering.

They are safe, and the most appreciated gift a small toddler can receive.

BELL CONTROVERTS HUMISTON CHARGES

Camp Upton Commander in His "Final Word" Defends Morality of Troops.

NEARLY READY FOR FRANCE

Soldiers, He Asserts, Constitute a Remarkable Body, "Self-Respecting and Morally Clean."

Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commanding at Camp Upton, last night issued a statement regarding the latest charge made by Mrs. Grace Humiston regarding moral conditions at the camp. General Bell denounced the charge and said that his statement was his "last word" regarding it. General Bell took occasion, in his statement to praise highly the men under his command. "Unless weather prevents," he said, "they will soon be ready to begin training beside their brothers in France." General Bell's statement follows:

"Camp Upton, N. Y., Nov. 29, 1917.

"Respectable persons have sufficient reason to be tired of reading more on the subject of Mrs. Humiston's unfounded charges of immorality at Camp Upton, excepting those who are naturally inclined to believe ill of others regardless of facts. I hardly think any intelligent person acquainted with the facts really believes that even one young girl has died at Camp Upton because she was about to become a mother, much less seven. Not a particle of real evidence has yet been produced indicating the existence of immoral conditions at Camp Upton. Though she claims to be freely consulting and co-operating with my comrades in arms at Governors Island, who personally know nothing whatever of such moral conditions at Camp Upton, Mrs. Humiston refuses to consult or co-operate with me, though I have complete personal knowledge thereof.

"At my solicitation she promised ten days ago to talk with me on the subject at an early date, but she has thus far failed to keep her promise, and now announces that she will disclose what she knows to the Secretary of War alone, and to him only in case he listens sympathetically. Adams testified that Mrs. Humiston did not want me to know that he was here with 'Miss Francis.'

Bell Praises His Troops.

"Incidentally, neither Mrs. Humiston nor Governors Island have ever given me or my camp a hearing. Mrs. Humiston, a shrewd lawyer, accustomed to carefully weighing the credibility of testimony, listened to random talk. Based on naught but such gossip she publicly made grave charges against the morality of the camp.

"I have never known a body of men as self-respecting, as morally clean as these. The pride they exhibit in avoiding anything which might reflect discredit upon themselves or their camp is as remarkable as it is gratifying. The most enthusiastic body of men in this camp is the handful of regular officers it contains. They are enthusiastic over the results of our first experiment in creating a national army. They have never dreamt that such a cheerful spirit of subordination, or pride in good behavior, or zeal to learn could be exhibited save by the exceptional members of long-established, crack military units which have acquired a high degree of esprit de corps. Their good behavior is really extraordinary; their zeal to learn only less astonishing than their progress. Unless weather prevents, they will soon be ready to begin training beside their brothers in France.

"Under such circumstances as are enumerated above, I should not feel justified in saying another word in reply to Mrs. Humiston's baseless charges, were it not for the fact that there are many thousands of parents, brothers, sisters, and other relatives of soldiers in this camp who, disgusted at seeing her unjust charges condoned, may wonder why some one does not refute them. I am responsible for the welfare of the men in this camp. I am their natural defender. Their relatives have a right to expect me to defend them.

"In her recent interviews for the press, Mrs. Humiston alleges in effect that conditions in Camp Upton must be immoral, because she believes that men and women registering as brother and sister, or as man and wife, have secured and can secure rooms for immoral purposes at the hotel in Camp Upton. She prides herself upon having proved this belief to be well-founded by succeeding in getting a room at this hotel assigned to a forty-year-old man and a sixteen-year-old girl, registering as man and wife. A room was assigned them. The clerk, who assigned it, states that he asked if they were man and wife and received an affirmative answer.

"He took no other action, whatever, to develop the facts as to their real relations. He claims to have suspected them at first, but to have had his suspicions allayed by the frankness and straightforward manner of the man who claimed to have come to visit a relative in the camp, expecting to return to Brooklyn that night, but missed the train. This has frequently happened. The clerk did not even report his suspicions to the manager. His conduct was inexcusable. His services have been dispensed with, not because it is believed he had any actual intention of doing wrong, but because he is too lacking in perspicacity to be trusted with such a responsible duty under such necessities as exist here.

Camp "Hotel" a Makeshift.

"The circumstances narrated in the last paragraph are certainly suspicious in appearance. But they really have little value as evidence in substantiation of Mrs. Humiston's contention that she succeeded in proving the existence of immoral conditions here by securing the assignment of a room to her proteges through their registration as man and wife. The actual facts concerning this hotel will constitute far better evidence than any one isolated circumstance.

"It is not a hotel at all in the usual sense of the word. It is a grocery, restaurant, and luncheon counter, with a few rooms in the second story which can be rented as lodgings by transient guests. There are not more than five or six such rooms. There is little or no privacy to be had about the place. It would be impossible for immorality, in its ordinary sense, to exist there without its soon becoming extensively known. No one can be found about this camp who has ever observed any indication of such immorality.

"The first guest was registered on Nov. 17. The total number of rooms which have been assigned to different persons since that date is sixty-eight.

"No rooms have been occupied by a brother and sister together; no rooms have been sought for joint occupancy by a brother and sister; no room would be assigned to a brother and sister for such occupancy, even if asked for. 'Miss Francis' is the only young girl who ever occupied a room.

"Of the sixty-eight rooms assigned, a total of fourteen have been occupied by persons registered as man and wife. Of these, nine were occupied by officers and their wives, well known in this camp. Five have been occupied by citizens registered and claiming to be man and wife. Four of these couples are well known at the camp to be man and wife. One room was occupied on the fourth day after the establishment opened its doors by a couple registering as man and wife from Jamestown, N. Y. I have been unable to secure any additional information as to the identity or actual marital relations of this couple. I have personally made this investigation and am solely responsible for the accuracy of the facts stated above.

"A statement has been quoted from 'Miss Francis' in some of the daily papers that Lieutenant Brown, one of the officers who examined her, had offered her money. The statement was made in such way as to insinuate that his motive was questionable. This was a shameless attempt to pervert the facts and a conscious effort to create a false impression. The young lady claimed she had not a cent, not even a ticket to return to the city. Lieutenant Brown, pulling what money he had had out of his pocket, generously offered to assist her in getting away from the camp. This offer was made in the presence of Major Lloyd C. Fiscom, who was present during the entire examination. This is the last word I shall say touching this incident."

CAMP PNEUMONIA SPREADS.

General Gorgas Orders Vigorous Steps to Check It at Macon.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Vigorous steps are being taken on recommendation of Surgeon General Gorgas to check the development of pneumonia at Camp Wheeler, Macon, Ga., where there has been a sharp epidemic of measles, accompanied by 300 cases of pneumonia.

General Gorgas, who has just returned from an inspection trip to Camp Wheeler says the height of the measles epidemic has passed but there had been sixty deaths from pneumonia during the last month and that as pneumonia does not develop until a week or ten days after the incidence of measles a considerable number of deaths from pneumonia can be expected.

"A large proportion of the cases of pneumonia were evidently contact cases and I am anxious on this score, fearing that we may be beginning here an epidemic of septic pneumonia," he said.

As a result of his inspection trip, General Gorgas has insisted that each man in the camp have fifty feet of floor space, that additional shelter be supplied, that no new men be brought into the camp until the epidemic has subsided, and that an observation camp be established. General Gorgas asserts that the tendency to pneumonia has been increased by the fact that the men have been exposed to cold weather for a month "with no other protection than their Summer clothing," but adds that clothing is now rapidly coming into the camp and about two-thirds of the men have been supplied with woolen garments.

Steps have already been taken to separate the men to a greater degree and by supplying more tents the number of men to each tent will be reduced from nine to five.

The supply of sufficient clothing has been delayed by the necessity of equipping first those divisions in northern latitudes and those which have been sent abroad. The men at Camp Wheeler now have a good supply of warm underwear and heavy outside clothing was shipped some days ago; it should be arriving at the camp now, but congestion of railroad traffic has caused some delay in its delivery.

SOLDIERS AT McCALL HOME.

Governor Shares His Thanksgiving Dinner with Four Corporals.

WINCHESTER, Mass., Nov. 29.—Governor McCall shared his Thanksgiving feast at his home here today with four young Corporals of the national army from Camp Devens.

He asked divisional officers to extend his invitation to soldiers who would be unable to reach home for the holiday, and Corporals Samuel J. Dunn and H. E. Johnson of Saratoga, N. Y.; A. W. Harrington of Watervliet, N. Y., and George Stuart, Jr., of Colorado were selected.

It soon developed that Corporal Stuart, who entered the army from New Haven, Conn., was a college mate at Yale with the Governor's son-in-law, Alfred Chappell, and before the dinner was over many mutual acquaintances were discussed.

PAY INTERNED MEN ONLY FOR WORK DONE

Department of Labor States That German Merchant Crews Get No Compensation.

TREATED AS IMMIGRANTS

Formal Denial Made of Any Food Favors to Men Held in Hot Springs Camp.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Denial was made by the Department of Labor today that Germans interned at the concentration camp at Hot Springs, N. C., received compensation. These men were taken off the German merchant vessels in American ports when this nation entered the war. They receive pay only for actual work performed at the rate of $20 a month, with additional pay of $5 a month for those acting as foremen. Officers are permitted to receive not more than $10 a month from friends.

"The inmates of this camp," said the official statement, "are not prisoners of war. They comprise officers and crew of the German merchant vessels which were interned in the ports of the United States at the time of the declaration of war. As aliens they were amenable to the immigration laws, and as alien enemies' under the terms of the President's proclamation they were also subject to the provisions of the Revised Statutes on which such proclamation is based. Their deportation, which would follow in the ordinary course of events, was impracticable in view of the international situation.

"It early became apparent that provision must be made for some central concentration camp which would be adequate to house these aliens who were temporarily detained at various immigration stations throughout the country. After a careful survey of available sites the department selected the resort at Hot Springs, N. C., which offered an admirable location from the standpoint of isolation as well as that of climate, accessibility to the railroads, and a hotel of adequate proportions for all immediate needs. More recently additional buildings have been constructed, so that now quarters, similar to those which would be provided in immigration stations for first-class passengers arriving at ports of the United States, are furnished officers, and lodgings similar to that which would be given steerage or third-class passengers, are furnished to the crew men.

"Contrary to the general impression, these aliens receive no compensation from the Government except such as is allowed them for work actually performed. Those who engage in construction work of one sort or another are paid at the rate of $20 a month, with an additional allowance of $5 per month to those acting in the capacity of foremen. The interned officers have been permitted to receive from any source not to exceed $10 and the crew men not more than $5 a month. Receipts in excess of these amounts are placed to the credit of the aliens in a postal savings bank or otherwise disposed of as desired. Permission is, of course, granted for legitimate purchases of clothing and other necessaries.

"Sanitary conditions are maintained under the direction of an experienced officer from the Health Service, who has been detailed for this purpose. Under the direction of the Young Men's Christian Association suitable facilities have been provided for recreation of a healthful and wholesome nature. Arrangements are also made that married men may have opportunity to see their families once a week, under the supervision of Government officers, in quarters provided for this purpose.

"There is no warrant whatever for the statement that these aliens are allowed an excessive amount of food. Three meals a day of plain but thoroughly palatable and substantial food are provided for each man. A limited number of eggs is furnished. For the most part evaporated milk such as seamen prepare on shipboard is used. There is no waste, and the same measures of economy and conservation which are being urged upon every American housewife are being practiced at Hot Springs."

The denial thus issued by the Department of Labor deals only with officers and men of the interned merchant ships, who are under its jurisdiction, and does not apply to officers and men from interned German warships, held in concentration camps under the jurisdiction of the army. Secretary Baker has explained that these officers and men are allowed compensation, in accordance with international law, and that Germany is expected to deal similarly with American soldiers and officers who are taken prisoner. The interned German naval officers and men do not receive cash, but obtain a credit, with which they may make purchases.

MISSED ONLY 'HOME FOLKS.'

New Englanders Helped Men at Camp Devens to Enjoy Real Holiday

AYER, Mass., Nov. 29.—"It lacked nothing but the home folks," was the report of their holiday that 6,000 troops detailed to guard Camp Devens gave to their comrades who flocked back to the cantonment tonight after a day spent at the family table in various sections of New England. Numerous organizations, co-opearting with individuals in surrounding cities and towns, joined the army cooks in giving the boys left behind a real holiday feast.

Hundreds of automobilists took the soldiers on spins over the snow-covered country, and nearly every company, it seemed, had its dance some time during the afternoon or evening.

Forty barrels of apples were sent into camp, and there were so many home-made pies that in many detachments each soldier had a whole pie to himself. From soup to cigars nothing was missing from the feast, and in many of the barracks the men had home folks for guests.

BIG DINNERS AT THE FRONT.

Great Quantities of Turkey Disappear "Somewhere in France."

PARIS, Nov. 29.—American soldiers stationed in Paris and the suburbs, as well as those at training camps and bases, sat down today at noon to an old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner. Specially detailed officers had been scouring the country for the last two weeks buying up all available turkeys, which averaged twelve pounds in weight.

The dinner menu for the men stationed in Paris included soup, turkey, potatoes, turnips, peas, white bread, butter, apple and peach pie, apples, raisins, nuts, figs, dates, and coffee. Individual turkey portions ranged from a pound and a quarter to a pound and a half.

A small group of American soldiers quartered at a French barracks, who had been receiving French rations, also had a special dinner. While the men did not enjoy a holiday today, reveille was omitted and other rules were relaxed for the day.

Protection depends as much upon the form of a policy as upon the size. What is the best form?

It is, on the contrary, one of the most momentous stock disposal movements in the history of the Clothing Business, and it is inaugurated in the midst of a season which has had no equal for high prices, for rising markets and for merchandise shortage; it offers Clothing of Known Merit and Highest Reputation at absolutely Remarkable Reductions. It has been arranged by us for the single purpose of disposing, as quickly as possible, of clothing purchased by us in anticipation of a rising market; stocks of clothing which have not moved with the speed to which Brill stores are accustomed because weather conditions have been highly unseasonable and because more than a million men are wearing Uncle Sam's Khaki and have no earthly use for civilian clothes. LIST DRAFT NEGROES NOT ANSWERING CALL

Sherrill Names Men Who Failed to Respond to Red Cards for Military Service.

SUMMONED A MONTH AGO

Adjutant General Believes Address Changes May Have Caused Some to Fail to Report.

Adjt. Gen. Sherrill yesterday gave out the names of negroes who had failed to respond to the red cards sent to them by the various local selective boards in New York City calling them to military service on Oct. 30. Adjt. Gen. Sherrill said he had no doubt that many of those named had left New York City without leaving their change of address, which accounted for their failure to answer the summons, and hoped that publication of their names would assist in having them respond or that their friends or relatives on being acquainted with the fact that they had failed to answer the call would notify them should they know of their whereabouts. Mr. Sherrill asks all citizens to furnish information as to their present addresses. When apprehended the men will be taken before their local boards, which will determine whether or not they are to be treated as willful deserters. The names, given addresses, and order numbers of the men are as follows:

ALL POLICE TO HELP ROUND UP DRAFT MEN

Gen. Crowder Notifies Peace Officials Everywhere That They Must Arrest Evaders.

CALL ON POSTMASTERS, TOO

Burleson Instructs Them to Furnish Addresses and Be Prompt in Delivery of Notices.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Major Gen. Crowder, the Provost Marshal General, has formulated plans, approved by the War Department, under which every police official of the nation is to become part of the army building machine. Through the local boards this great agency for utilization of the police in running down deserters or evaders of the draft law will be put into operation from 5,000 separate points. Postal authorities also will play an active part in helping to carry out the regulations.

The attitude of the Government was outlined today in the announcement by General Crowder of the followlng new regulations:

"Those who fail to return the questionnaire, or to appear for physical examination, or to report change of status, or to report for any duty, or to perform any act at the time and place required by these regulations, or by directions by local or district boards in pursuance thereof are guilty of a misdemeanor under Section 6 of the selective service law. Under authority granted in Section 6 of that law it is hereby made the duty of all police officials of the United States and of any State, or any county, municipality, or other subdivision thereof, to locate and take into custody such persons and to bring them forthwith before local boards to determine whether their cases shall be reported to the Federal Department of Justice for prosecution, and to serve the summons to witnesses issued by local or district boards.

"Persons who, after induction into military service, with intent to evade such service, willfully fail to report to local boards for military duty, or fail to entrain for a mobilization camp, or who absent themselves from entrainment or from their parties of selected men en route to a mobilization camp, are deserters and are subject to military law. It is hereby made the duty of all such police officials to apprehend and arrest such deserters and proceed against them.

"A reward of $50 is payable for the apprehension and delivery to a military camp, post, or station of a deserter from the national army when the person making such delivery presents the certificate of a local board."

The postal authorities will work hand-in-hand with the local boards in every direction, and every possible clue will be run out to trace the registrants in order that they may have no possible excuse for their failure to return their questionnaire within the seven-day period prescribed by law.

This order has been issued by direction of the President, calling on the postal authorities to aid in this work:

"Postmasters and all postal employes shall promptly forward all mail of local boards, district boards, and other officials connected with the administration of the selective service law, bearing the frank of the Provost Marshal General.

"They shall also give every aid to local boards and other such officials in securing the address of registrants, and upon request of local boards Postmasters shall furnish to them the forwarding address of all registrants whose mail has been forwarded to an address in possession of the postal authorities for the confidential use only of the boards and persons charged with the administration of the Selective Service law and these rules and regulations.

"Upon the request of the Governor of the State Postmasters shall receipt to local boards, upon a list prepared by the latter, for any of the notices prescribed by these regulations to be delivered to the Post Office arranged in the order in which they appear upon auch list so to be signed by the Postmaster."

This has been supplemented by an order issued to 56,000 Postmasters by Postmaster General Burleson as follows:

"Postmasters should exercise every effort to make delivery of letters addressed by local or district exemption boards to registrants under the Selective Service act, and particularly the notices which those boards send to registrants calling them to places of entrainment. Serious consequences ensue to a registrant who fails to respond to this latter call, as the law classifies him as a deserter, and unless an explanation is made he must be dealt with as such. It is therefore of the greatest importance that Postmasters see that such notices reach the addressees if possible."

NEW PRUSSIA REFORM BILL.

Proposed Measure Has Restrictions That Hamper Lower Classes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 29.—The new Prussian Suffrage Reform bill has been introduced, and may be regarded as another compromise or a clever piece of juggiery.

Every male Prussian, over the age of 25, is to have a direct vote by secret ballot, but this provision is accompanied by restrictions which are apparently aimed directly at Social Democrats and the working class generally.

Thus a voter must have lived three years in Prussia and one year in the municipality or electoral district, instead of six months as formerly. In Berlin, where in votes the Social Democrats outnumber the other parties, further restrictions are proposed regarding the movement from one electoral district to another whereby the right to vote is lost.

The press seem satisfied with the bill, but admit that the battle is only just begun and will be a long one.

NEW STRIKE IN ARGENTINA.

Workers Aim at Taking Control of the Railways.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 29.—Traffic on the General Railway of Buenos Aires is almost at a standstill because of a strike of the employes. Workmen employed at the General Produce Markets and those of several frozen meat companies are also on strike.

All the railway workmen's associations, it is reported, plan to merge for the purpose of defending the workers and for preparing them to assume the management and direction of the railway industry in accordance with the principle that the means of work belong to the workers.

Find Girl Unconscious in Street.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 29.—A well-dressed young woman, who gave her name as Amy Byum, 128 West 164th Street, New York, was found unconscious by a policeman late last night near the Lackawanna terminal in this town. She was taken to Mountainside Hospital. Upon recovering consciousness, she said she had come to Montclair to visit a family named Simmons, but they were not at home. It was while on her way to the railroad station again that she was stricken suddenly ill and fell unconscious.

NEVER SAW SOLDIERS DEVELOP LIKE OURS

General of Division Says Our First Contingent in France Has Done Remarkable Work.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 28, (Associated Press.)—The development of the men of the first American contingent in France in the science of war was described today as truly remarkable by the General commanding the division, who has been in the service for years.

"I have been in the army since I was a boy," he said. "During that time I have observed many American and many foreign soldiers, but never in my life have I seen anything equaling the men now here. When my division landed we had shock-headed boys, (I call them shock-headed because they were just that,) by the hundreds. They were clerks, mechanics, day laborers, farmer boys, old and young, from every walk of life. Some spoke English and some did not. There were Poles, Bohemians, Russians, Jews, Gentiles. But in this short time they have all become first-class soldiers, energetic to the extreme, and have fallen into the ways of army life as I never thought possible.

"They are game to the core and their one idea is to beat the Germans, and give them a good beating. There isn't a streak of yellow in the whole lot and their morale, even in the trenches, is fine.

"Here is an example. One night recently an officer called for volunteers to go patrolling in No Man's Land. He asked for twenty men. The whole company volunteered on the spot. Twenty were picked, and lamp-black was provided for these. I put on their faces so that the light would not shine on them. During the blacking one private, who had been in the army for four months, stopped a moment, turned to a comrade and said: 'Gee, if I can run this into one of those boches I bet he'll get blood poisoning, and I hope he does.' The boy knew the place he was to patrol was extremely dangerous and that he might be a casualty within thirty minutes.

"At another time I had just passed a line of soldiers walking along a road in the rain, when I came across one who was hatless, mud-covered, and limping. I stopped my automobile and asked him what was the matter. The soldier stood on one foot, the other being injured. He saluted, and said his horse had started to run into a stone wall, so he threw him down, but fell under him. That's the spirit we are getting. The man was badly hurt, but even that did not make him forget his training of a few weeks.

"I was returning at that time from the hospital, where I saw a few wounded men. Some of the men's proudest and most valuable possessions on earth are bullets and pieces of shrapnel which thoughtful surgeons saved for them on extracting. Every man wanted to exhibit the cause of his wound. Their thoughts were all about recovering, rejoining their regiments and getting a chance to pay back the enemy in his own coin."

The uniform of American soldiers is undergoing a further change. It is a small one made necessary by conditions. A large number of troops have turned in their long overcoats to receive in exchange coats of the same material but much shorter. The new ones strike the men above the knees, while the old ones, issued in the United States, usually hit them at the ankles. Because of the mud it was found that the long coats soon became caked and heavy. They flopped about the legs of the soldiers, hindering the free movement of the wearers. Many of the men who have not received the new coats have shortened the old ones.

The business of cutting and transporting wood has become one of first importance with the American force. For several weeks large detachments have been deep in the forests in France, some near the Swiss border, others near the coast, and some far south. Products of their labor are being shipped by rail and motor to various localities for use in heating and cooking.

So great has been the scarcity, which is now beginning to be alleviated, that troops on their hikes have been marched through nearby forests where very man picked up pieces of wood to carry back to the billets. In this way the marching troops brought into the billet towns many cords of wood.

American ordnance experts have figured that the Germans in raids on American trenches have expended thus far more than $100,000 worth of ammunition.

The killing of two American soldiers and the wounding of five others last week were due to a heavy German shell, which hit a loaded ammunition wagon. Some of the men were on the wagon and others were nearby when the shell, which was a chance shot, struck. The wagon with it cargo was blown up. Some of the wounded are in a serious condition, and all are in a hospital.

CHARGES UNFAIR METHODS.

Complaint Against Curtis Publishing Co. to be Taken Up Dec. 6.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Announcement was made by the Federal Trade Commission today that it had designated Charles F. Moore, examiner, to hear testimony and take evidence in the formal complaint issued against the Curtis Publisbing Company. The hearings will be held in New York, beginning at 10 A. M., Dec. 6.

The Curtis Publishing Company is accused of "using unfair methods of competition in violation of Section 5 of the Trade Commission act." This alleged violation, the complaint asserts, consists of refusal on the part of the Curtis Company to sell its periodicals and publications to any dealer who will not agree not to sell or distribute the periodicals and publications of certain competitors of the respondent.

"MODERATION SERIES" NO. 5

Too Much Food Is Bad for Man —and So Is Too Little

WE can overindulge in almost anything, such as tea and coffee drinking, and even in the use of water. There is such a thing as "Aquamania" (water lunacy) and we also have food drunkards. Everyone knows that the intemperate use of alcoholic beverages is unquestionably injurious, just as every sane man knows that the temperate use of a mild Barley-Malt and Saazer Hop brew, such as BUDWEISER, is the drink of moderation. BUDWEISER sales exceed other beers by millions of bottles, because it is brewed in the good old honest way. Quality has for 60 years been the secret of its success.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN FETED BY CITY FOLK

Homes, Clubs, and Hotels Vie in Giving Them a Thanksgiving Treat.

5,000 FED IN THE GARDEN

Stage Stars Volunteer at Many Entertainments—Dance in Armory Stopped.

Soldiers and turkey, turkey and sailors! That about expresses the material side of a Thanksgiving made notable in New York yesterday because not since civil war times, if then, have persons so opened their hearts to men in the uniforms of the country's service. All during a day of feasts and entertainments and lavish hospitality of all sorts there was sounded a deeper note of "sending along the boys who are to do the job" which served to knit together the fighting men and the civilian population in bonds of mutual understanding and appreciation that grizzled men in the service felt last night was to be a very real force hereafter.

America's men were not alone welcome in the hearts and the homes of the city. Great bodies of the soldiers and sailors of our allies, and wandering strays among them, as well, were gathered in everywhere, quite as a matter of course. They, too, were made to share in the purely American institution of official and national gratitude.

If New York had a rival in either its organized or its spontaneous hospitality, that rival was in the suburbanites and the more strictly country folk who dwell in the environs of the training camps. These had few clubs and hotels and institutions in which to welcome the men in khaki or the men in blue, but they had their homes. Everywhere those homes were thrown wide open, nor did their doors close till the last possible man in uniform was pressed into a seat at a heavily laden table. Whatever the price of turkey yesterday—and its cost was at real war prices—there was enough of it for every army and navy man.

Find Impromptu Guests Quickly.

An example of the impromptu way things were done was to be found at the Hotel St. Regis, where an elaborate feast had been arranged for 150 men from the Sunset Division at Camp Mills. R. M. Haan, the proprietor, had prepared a vaudeville program as well and had sent a representative to the camp to provide transportation for the guests. Somehow the plans went awry, and at 4 o'clock, when the dinner was to have been served, but four soldiers appeared. It looked bad for a few minutes, but the four were turned into a recruiting party. They stationed themselves in Fifth Avenue to gather in comrades. Twenty minutes later they marched into the hotel, 150 strong, and men of all branches of the service crowded about the tables.

Though every camp and every service station had released all officers and privates who could be spared from duty, those whom the exigencies of the service kept at their posts were not forgotten. In all the camps there were turkey and the things that go with it, and every man had his fill. Even the guards about the waterfront barred zone were remembered—and fed.

The presence of men in uniform at the tables in hotels and restaurants and clubs and homes worked one radical alteration in the Thanksgiving customs of other times. There was mighty little to drink. The military guests are barred by regulations from partaking and most hosts had the tact and the kindness not to set forbidden fruit before them. As a result something of the hilarity of peace days was missing perhaps, but that there was ample of earnest sentiment of rejoicing to replace it every one testified.

Though it was a day of big, satisfying dinners primarily, there was as well a plenitude of diversion of all sorts to which amateurs and professionals contributed their services in generous numbers. Vaudeville numbers, concerts, bands and singers added their bit to the entertainment that followed both public and private dinners, while hundreds of entertainers took advantage of the element weather to take strangers in uniform about the city in their automobiles.

The theaters in both afternoon and evening were crowded with uniformed guests, many of them privates from far places who witnessed a great New York production for the first time.

5,000 Dine in the Garden.

Perhaps the most ambitious of the entertainments was that in Madison Square Garden, where the Patriotic Service League held open house from 2 o'clock in the afternoon to midnight. A uniform was all the ticket a hungry man or a lonesome one needed. It was estimated that 5,000 in relays partook of the edibles and the entertainment. Mrs. Leopold Alfaro, Chairman of the committee of hostesses, captained a body or 250 young women clad in white and decorated with red, white, and blue sashes, who welcomed and served the guests. Cigarettes and cigars were handed to the men as they rose from the tables and took seats in the arena, where military band concerts, moving pictures, and boxing bouts amused them. Edward Steele Jones, Chairman of the Dinner Campaign Committee, and Miss Rebecca M. Solomons, Chairman of the Home Dinners Committee, reported that every man who came had been provided with all he wanted of turkey, baked potatoes, mince pie, ice cream, coffee, and mineral waters.

The entertainment features were in charge of John K. Gleason of the Friars Club. The entertainers included George M. Cohan, Louis Mann, Frank Tinney, James J. Corbett, Mme. Dora de Philippi, Miss Helen Zagat, Baby Roslyn and sister, and many other well-known performers on the dramatic, operatic, and vaudeville stages. Enrico Caruso was a visitor during the evening and occupied one of the arena boxes in company with several other members of the Metropolitan Opera House organization.

The music was provided by bands from the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, the Naval Reserve training station at Pelham Bay Park, and the naval station at Bensonhurst. Representatives of the Friars, Green Room, Lambs, Harvard, Rotary, and Yale Clubs assisted in providing entertainment.

Another who offered hospitality on a big scale was Adolph Lorber, Broadway restaurant proprietor, who met 1,200 officers and men of the Sunset Division with several Fifth Avenue buses at the Pennsylvania Station and, after showing them about town, served them dinner at his restaurant, which he closed to regular patrons. Marcus Loew treated the guests to a show on the New York Theatre roof later, and Daniel G. Reid send them 2,400 packages of cigarettes.

Among other hotels and restaurants which entertained military men in varying numbers were Mandel's, 31 West Twenty-sixth Street; Drake's, 111 West Forty-second Street; the Waldorf, where Frank H. Maynard of 400 Park avenue was host to 250; the McAlpin, where Jacob Sperber and Edwin Polasky were hosts; the Great Northern, where the Catholic War Council gave dinner to fifty; the Silver Lunch, at 803 Sixth Avenue; the Pavilion d'Orient, where Armenian soldiers and sailors were entertained by their friends; Halloran's, at Sixth Avenue and Fourteenth Street; the Knickerbocker, where Mrs. James G. Regan "mothered" 500 sailors from the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Mr. and Mrs. Nat Goldstone had 20 soldiers at the Ansonia; a hundred were guests of the Newton and Miss Matilda Auerbach; the Rev. S. D. Townsend invited 40 to the Endicott, and Miss B. M. Uhlfelder had 23 soldiers at Bretton Hall and later at the Garden Theatre. August Janssen had 150 men in uniform at his restaurant, Broadway and Twenty-eighth Street, where the Rotary Club also entertained a large party.

Stop Dance in Armory.

Twelve hundred soldiers and sailors who had gleefully eaten a Thanksgiving dinner given in the Twelfth Regiment Armory by the National Service Commission were disappointed when they were not allowed to continue the dancing, already begun, with the women and girls who were their hostesses. The dinner was over, the tables had been pushed out of the way, and as the band struck up a one-step soldiers in khaki and sailors in blue started around the floor with the girls who had served at the tables and the older women who had chaperoned the dinner. Then there was a blast on a bugle, calling everybody to attention, and an officer shouted that Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer had issued orders forbidding any dancing in armories.

On all sides there was the buzzing of bitter disappointment. The band stopped playing, the hosts and hostesses gathered together in little groups and stated their opinions of the order without much modification, and the soldiers and sailors, after a period of hesitation and uncertainty, eventually made their farewells and drifted out of the armory in couples, squads and groups.

"Perhaps they are going to places where they can dance," said J. Varnum Mott, one of the officials of the entertainment; "going just where the Government doesn't want them to go, and where we are trying to keep them from going. But we are going to provide dances for them even if the State will not allow us to use its armories."

Amelia Bingham, who was in charge of the Program Committee, said that the order was "a crying shame." It is not only an insult to every one of those fine boys who are going to fight for us women," she said, "but an insult to every woman who has given her time and her work to this cause. One would think from this that they were beasts. If we can invite them into our homes, as I have done, why cannot we dance with them?"

Rowland Haynes, director of the National Service Commission, said that it was not a matter of that dance only, but a vital consideration connected with the social standing of every soldier who comes to New York. "Our commission has in many ways been striving to help these boys who are away from their homes," he said. "We have introduced them into our homes and to the wives and daughters of our best families. It is human nature to want to dance, and if they cannot dance in the right place they will dance in the wrong one."

Before the party got around to the stage of dancing everything went well. The dinner was a large affair, and was heartily enjoyed, not only by the soldiers and sailors who were guests, but by the civilians, men and women, who entertained them.

Soldiers at Union League Club.

The Union League Club entertained 200 men from Camp Upton in the clubhouse, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street. William R. Willcox and George T. Wilson spoke, and Charles Evans Hughes and Chauncey M. Depew were among those who welcomed the guests.

At the Lybia Café, 139th Street, near Seventh Avenue, the club was host to 150 negro troops from Camp Upton. Among the speakers were Charles W. Anderson, former Collector of Internal Revenue; James H. Anderson, editor of The New Amsterdam News, and George W. Harris, editor of The New York News.

At St. George's Club in Stuyvesant Square about fifty soldiers from nearby camps and a number of sailors and marines from French ships in and near an Atlantic port were the guests of honor. An entertainment and dance followed. The Freundschaft Society at 905 West Fifty-seventh Street entertained fifty soldiers and fifty sailors and gave them the freedom of the clubhouse at the conclusion of the dinner. The New York Athletic Club at 55 West Fifty-ninth Street entertained a large number of enlisted men. The National Arts Club had twenty-five guests, the Columbia University Club about fifty.

Officers from Camp Dix, Wrightstown, N. J., were guests at the Engineers' Club, 32 West Fortieth Street. A musical program followed the dinner. Many officers from Camp Mills were entertained at the Racquet and Tennis Club, 27 West Forty-third Street, and forty men from a Montana Regiment at the Players' Club in Gramercy Park.

The Rotary Club entertained 300 soldiers, many of them from the Pacific coast, at the Hotel Majestic.

Cardinal Farley sent greetings and blessings to soldiers and sailors who attended a dinner of the National Catholic Service Club; Thomas J. Colton was host to 150 at the Catholic Club. Other national service clubs offered hospitality to enlisted men. Among those whose families entertained in their homes were Mrs. James B. Taylor, 903 Park Avenue; Mrs. George D. Pratt, 640 Park Avenue; Mrs. Morris Loeb, 273 Madison Avenue; Mrs. William Scott Pyle, 375 Park Avenue; David R. Reynolds, 1 West Sixty-fourth Street; Mrs. W. E. Loeb, 547 West 157th Street; Mrs. H. C. Frick, 1 East Seventieth Street; L. B. Elliman, 122 East Sixty-fifth Street; Fred Hausman, 110 Madison Avenue; Mrs. G. D. Horton, 104 West Seventieth Street, and Nathan Straus, 27 West Seventy-second Street.

Three hundred soldiers from Camp Upton and the "Sunset Division" at Camp Mills were the guests of the Rocky Mountain Club at "Hitchy Koo" yesterday afternoon and afterward at dinner in the clubhouse, at 67 West Forty-fourth Street. Raymond Hitchcock led the men from the theatre to the club.

Each shaving kit, in which was a picture of and a message from Princess Henriette, sister of King Albert of Belgium, was given each guest. The message read:

"I would be so glad to see and help some of your boys coming to France. Do say if they are in trouble or want anything, a faithful friend of America, who has a debt of gratitude to pay, would be happy to help and comfort them."

Not to be thwarted when they learned that the National Service Commission was unable to send men to eat the 120 dinners which they had prepared, members of the Young Women's Hebrew Association commandeered friends' automobiles, loaded the dinners into portable ovens and drove with them to Camp Mills, where they found willing and appreciative guests to avail themselves of the good things provided.

DINES NEWPORT NEWSBOYS.

Mrs. F. W. Vanderbilt Gives Her 24th Thanksgiving Feast.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 29.—Three hundred or more news and messenger boys enjoyed a dinner in Masonic Hall this afternoon through the kindness of Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, which marked the twenty-fourth affair of this kind she has given. An orchestra played patriotic and popular songs, which the boys sang.

Mrs. Vanderbilt observed food conservation by giving the boys instead of candies, ice cream and a bag of apples and oranges to take home. Even cranberry sauce was omitted from the meal because of sugar shortage. The Rev. William Safford Jones of Channing Memorial Church asked for three cheers for Mrs. Vanderbilt.

"How many of you boys have fathers, brothers, or relatives in the army or navy?" he asked, and one-half of the number stood up.

"How many of you boys would like to be in the army or navy?" he next asked. Every boy, including those using crutches, stood up.

ALL CHURCHES OFFER WAR THANKSGIVING

Preachers Grateful for Bountiful Harvests and Quick Response of Citizens to Nation's Call.

STAND BY GOVERNMENT

Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish Pastors Devote Sermons to the Great Struggle.

Thanksgiving sermons preached in the churches of the city yesterday echoed the sentiment of President Wilson's proclamation—that America should be thankful because she has a chance now to do for all mankind what she did for herself in 1776. There was also an echo of the first Thanksgiving days in gratitude rendered for the big crops of the year—a gratitude that the big crops will help to beat the Germans.

A special feature of the services at Trinity Church was the unfurling of a service flag with 450 stars at the close of the service. Each star represented a parishioner of Trinity or one of its chapels. The flag was placed on the altar and blessed, after which the congregation joined in singing "America."

Dr. William T. Manning, rector of the church, who is soon to take up duties at Camp Upton, said that some might think this a strange time for America to be giving thanks. "But," he added, "in the midst of the anxieties, the trials, the unknown possibilities of this war, we have really the deepest cause for thanksgiving." He said that America should be thankful for her big crops, which enable this country to give needed aid to her allies. He said America should also be thankful "because our eyes have been opened to see with absolute clearness our duty in this war," and because we are now "able to do for other nations what we did for ourselves when we promulgated the Declaration of Independence."

At the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Dean Robbins took for his text the parable of the loaves and fishes, and made a comparison between the words of Jesus directing that every broken piece be gathered and nothing be lost and the wastefulness of the United States in the use of food.

"As a nation we are not provident," he said, "and the text has a great lesson for us. All over the land we are beginning to realize the wickedness of extravagance, and we rejoice that the evil is being checked. To gather up the broken pieces is an admonition we are beginning to heed, and for this we are thankful today. Another thing for which we should be thankful today is, not that we are very prosperous, but that we are a free people, united with other people for freedom all over the earth."

Anthems of the Allies.

After the recessional, the congregation stood while the national anthems of the United States, Great Britain, and France were played.

The annual memorial service for deceased members of the Catholic Benevolent Legion was held at St. Patrick's Cathedral. The Rev. Dr. Francis E. Albert acted as celebrant of the mass, and was assisted by Father James J. Talbot as deacon and Father John Quinn as subdeacon. In his sermon Mgr. Lavelle, rector of the cathedral, spoke of the rôle of Catholics in the war.

"The Catholics of the United States have much to be thankful for on this Thanksgiving Day," he said, "for while the census figures of the nation show that the Catholics of the country make up between 17 and 18 per cent. of the whole population, it is estimated officially that of all the American soldiers now at cantonments and now in the field, 25 per cent. of the whole number are of the Catholic faith. These figures show that there are now in the service of the country about twice as many Catholic soldiers as the Catholic population would call for.

"I want to quote a remarkable statement made a few days ago by an American army General, setting forth reasons why the American people on this day should be thankful in spite of the horrors of war, grateful for the spirit of patriotism that prevails throughout the length and breath of the land. These reason are: A minimum of sickness at army camps, hundreds of thousands of troops transported across the ocean without the loss of a single life. Despite the elements and a deadly enemy who is anxious to strike from below, the nation has been able to report that not an American troop ship has been lost or a soldier been killed in being transported to the other side."

Guarding Morals of Soldiers.

Mgr. Lavelle spoke of the need of more Catholic chaplains, saying there was need for 500 or more. He said also that more chapels must be built at army cantonments, and added:

"Perhaps the greatest cause for our rejoicing at this time is the attitude of the Government officials in safeguarding the morals of the men engaged in national service. Since the beginning of the world it made no difference about the composition of a soldier, just so he was brave. But our Government has done, and is continuing to do, a great service in throwing about our boys all the safeguards they possibly can, to save them from harm when away from active war duty. The Government has acted wisely in enforcing regulations regarding drink, and now it is going further than any government has ever dared to go before by enforcing rules that practically insure our boys in cantonments and in the field against the corruption which has in the past undermined the health and wrecked the bravest of men who ever wore a uniform. But it is up to us to see that when boys leave the cantonments on brief visits to their home cities they are made really at home. Greet them with open arms and see to it that when they are away from the grind of army service they are kept away from temptation. We must give our time as well as our money to see that all soldiers shall be supplied with all the comforts they really need and all the Government wishes them to have."

Dr. C. H. Parkhurst, pastor of Madison Square Presbyterian Church, said that the one big result being accomplished by the pressure of war upon the American people is the development of a sense of nationality. He said that in the degree that the war has shown up this infirmity of the nation it would serve to cure the malady.

"We need the strain of the last six months to show that as a democracy we do not make an encouraging exhibit," he said. "We have been learning some things about our national condition that we had scarcely suspected. We knew we had opened the doors very widely, had practically taken the doors off their hinges and invited all peoples of every sort and description to come and make themselves at home, and without waiting until they had acquainted themselves with the elemental principles of democracy permitted them to have a hand in administering the Government.

Slow Fusing in the Melting Pot.

"And when they appeared before the courts for naturalization papers, and upon being asked what was the capital of the United States, said it was Hoboken, we solaced ourselves by the reflection that Rome attributed its ultimate strength to the heterogeneity of its population, and that we had vitality enough to fuse into homogeneity contributions from all over the seas in one melting pot. This pot we have, but it is considerably filled with unredeemed chunks of humanity. That renders difficult the attainment of any comprehensively popular will and renders difficult loyal acquiescence to the demands of that will when expressed."

President Wilson received a pledge of the support of the Jews of the country in his prosecution of the war at a Thanksgiving service of the Institutional Synagogue held in the Mount Morris Theatre, Fifth Avenue and 116th Street. Representative Isaac Siegel, who presided, said that the pacifist views attributed to certain elements of the Jewish people did not represent the general attitude of the Jews of the country.

"There are 62,000 loyal Hebrews in the drafted army throughout the country," he said. "Four thousand are already with General Pershing in France, over 13,000 are at Yaphank, 3,100 at Camp Mills, 3,500 are at Camp Grant, Chicago, and over 3,000 at Camp Gordon, Georgia."

Addresses were made by Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, Justice Edward Lazansky, Past Commander in Chief Maurice Simmons of the Hebrew Spanish War Veterans and Nathan Straus. Mr. Straus was several times cheered by his audience. He said that he was formerly opposed to war, and when asked to raise funds for the veterans of the Spanish War told General Miles he did not approve of war. But in the present struggle for humanity, he said, he was an ardent supporter of the cause of America.

Would Transport Pro-Germans.

"I feel so terribly about the slackers," he said, "that it takes my strength away. We have not only got to fight those in this country who talk pro-German but those who think pro-German. I would be glad to subscribe funds to secure a boat to take every pro-German over to Germany."

Mr. Straus said he was proud to be on a committee to raise funds for "our brethren at the front. And by 'brethren,' he said, 'I mean Christians, Jews, whites and blacks. They are not the same color, but they are the same under the skin."

Rabbi Goldstein said he shuddered when he thought about an element in Russia "flirting with German autocracy." Justice Lazansky told his hearers that, whether any one was or was not opposed to war, he owed it to his country to abide by the decision of the duly elected representatives of the people of the nation.

Mr. Simmons recalled the fact that the United States has revoked a treaty with Russia because it did not recognize full rights for Jews.

"Shame on the Jew who would raise a hand to cripple the United States in this war," he said. "After 2,000 years of persecution and the scattering of the Jews throughout the world, comes now the word from the Allies that small nations will be free.'

"Do you stand with the President and our ultimate restoration to Jerusalem or do you stand with the madman of Potsdam?"

Among the other special Thanksgiving Day services were those held at Christ Church, where the Rev. Dr. J. R. Atkinson, preached on "America, the Champion of Democracy"; Old First Presbyterian Church, where the Rev. Dr. Duffield preached on "Over the Top"; Temple Beth-El, where Rabbi Schulman spoke on "The Moral Value of a National Thanksgiving"; Church of the Messiah, where Dr. John Haynes Holmes spoke on "Thanksgiving or Penitence"; Church of the Divine Paternity, where the Rev. Dr. Allan McRossie spoke on "The American Soldier at the Front," and at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, at the Broadway Tabernacle, and at St. Bartholomew's.

Dr. S. Edward Young, pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, preached on "Why Give Thanks This Year?" There was a special musical program.

Thanksgiving services were held at the Bowery Mission, celebrating the thirty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the mission. In the afternoon addresses were made by the Rev. R. F. V. Pierce, "the Bishop of Wall Street," and by Dr. F. Ernest Johnson of the School of Christian Work. At night the Rev. Theodora Sedgwick of Cavalry Protestant Episcopal Church and the Rev. Frederick F. Shannon of the Reformed Church of the Heights, Brooklyn, were the speakers. After each service a dinner was served to "Bowery men."

Dr. Malcolm James McLeod, pastor of the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, presiding at the Marble Collegiate Church, said that one of the things for which America should be thankful was that she had a chance to fight the Germans until they lost the idea that every one else in the world was poor trash.

"Though we are at war," he said, "I doubt if there is a nation on earth that has greater reason for gratitude than we have right here in America. Think, for instance, of the loyal spirit of our soldier and sailor boys. How proud we are of them! Ought we not to be supremely thankful that not a lad has been lost in transporting our troops across the Atlantic? Ought we not to be thankful for the glorious work of the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A.?

"I believe that what we need to fear most today is not the German army, but the German spy talking peace. The outlook of a chance that Germany has of winning this war—and she knows it—is to sow the seeds of friction among the Allies through an insidious peace propagandism and, then getting good-natured, gullible Americans to believe it. The Kaiser himself is the chief pacifist today. He abhors the war, he says. How tender-hearted he has become! No, the war must go on to a knockout. Life will not be worth living if we lose."

DAY OBSERVED IN LONDON.

Page and Others Attend Thanksgiving Services in Hudson's Old Church

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Thanksgiving was observed in London by the flying of American flags, an informal dinner at the American Officers' Club, and a picturesque united service on behalf of the United States and Great Britain in the historic church of St. Ethelburga. It was this church in which Henry Hudson was a parisioner and made communion before starting on his first voyage of discovery to the New World more than 300 years ago.

Ambassador Page and Consul General Skinner were represented officially at the service, which was attended by several distinguished Englishmen and a number of American residents of London. The quaint old church, which is one of the landmarks of the city, was decorated with American and British flags. The service included prayers for King George, President Wilson, Great Britain, and the United States, and the singing of "Hail, Columbia," "The Star-Spangled Banner," the "Battle-Hymn of the Republic," "God Save the King" and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

The Rev. W. F. Cobb, the rector, in his sermon spoke of President Wilson as a worthy successor to Washington and Lincoln, and as in some respects even stronger than they. No man, he said, ever so well expressed the great cause of freedom and justice for which America and Great Britain are striving, united in a bond such as now exists between the two countries, a bond of the heart, which never can be undone.

DINNERS FOR THE POOR.

Beneficiaries of Peace Times Not Forgotten in Thanksgiving

Though the major share of the city's Thanksgiving hospitality went to men of the army and navy, those who have been the chief sharers in beneficence in peace times by no means were forgotten. The Salvation Army held its usual "mummy" dinner and service, at which it seeks to find a way through stomach or heart to reclaim some of the confirmed drunkards who seek its shelter. Eleven converts on the platform testified from their own experiences of the possibilities of reformation, and a lone woman joined in the prayers of Bowery derelicts to be saved from the clutches of the drink habit. The woman said her vice had lost her husband, home, and children.

There was both a plentiful turkey dinner and a religious service in the Tombs, and all the city prisons and county jails had similar observances. Most, if not all, the hospitals had special menus with turkey a prominent feature. The high price of turkey led the Catholic Protectory in the Bronx to substitute ham for turkey for its 2,500 girls and boys, but all the trimmings of a regular Thanksgiving feast were there, except that jelly was substituted for the prohibitive-priced cranberry sauce.

Many well-known women helped to make the Children's Society's celebration a source of real joy to the little ones who were fed and amused in the society's rooms. The St. Andrew's Society, which maintains the one-cent coffee stands, stretched its purse to provide more than 2,000 dinners, and joined with many other welfare organizations to distribute baskets in the homes of the poor.

With the membership of the Newsboys' Home depleted by enlistments there were only 200 of the regular "home" boys to partake of the annual dinner. The annual check of $1,000 from Baron William Waldorf Astor was more than enough for the feast.

1,500 SAILORS MISS A TREAT.

Sent to Sea with Turkey Dinners Awaiting Them in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Fifteen hundred turkey dinners intended for sailors from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station went uneaten today, leaving disappointed hosts.

The explanation of the officials at the station was that 1,500 of the 5,000 men who had accepted invitations were sent away suddenly on sea service without opportunity to notify their hosts.

QUAKERS' SEASONED BACK FIELD FAR TOO STRONG FOR CORNELL IN ANNUAL GRIDIRON BATTLE

CORNELL BATTERED BY PENN VETERANS

Nervy Novices from Ithaca Fight Bravely but in Vain Against the Quaker Eleven.

LOSE BY SCORE OF 37 TO 0

Red Team Gets Off with a Rush at Outset, but Three Efforts to Kick Field Goals Fail.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Cornell's green, unwieldy football eleven journeyed to Franklin Field this afternoon to keep up the appearance of the traditional rivalry with Pennsylvania and was battered down to defeat by a score of 37 to 0. In the wreck of the Ithacans' war-time team, which took grueling punishment on a snow-covered and mud-splashing gridiron, there was one bit of consolation—they had the satisfaction of knowing that they were doing their best for their college home, while the husky lads in whose places they were playing were off somewhere doing their best likewise in a sterner and graver game.

Pennsylvania, with a backfield of schooled veterans and with a superior line, riddled the Cornell team with thrust after thrust, assault upon assault, until they had scored five touchdowns and booted over a field goal. There was nothing for Cornell to do but stand up and take her medicine, and this the boys did with a gameness and courage which will make Captain Fritz Shiverick and all the other Cornell veterans who are now wearing the khaki, proud of this band of clumsy youths who jumped to Coach Sharpe's call when the war stripped the Cornell gridiron of all its best talent.

Eleven youths never fought more desperately in a lost cause. Even in their overwhelming defeat the Cornell team commanded the greatest admiration from the Thanksgiving Day crowd of 15,000 which was banked around Franklin Field. A faithful band of Cornell rooters, not more than 200 of them, cheered the big Red eleven in defeat as enthusiastically as they could have cheered them in triumph.

Crowd Much Smaller than Usual.

There was the unusual sight for this annual fixture of rows of empty seats around the gridiron today, seats which would have been jammed by the youths who are far away from the fireside and the turkey. But all the pretty girls were there, and the proudest were those whose escorts wore the khaki. Instead of going to the game today with the college boys who live next door, the girls were in charge of their fathers or their uncles. Against their furs they wore great red chrysanthemums or bunches of violets and orchids. The day was sunshiny and warm, the snow covered ground furnishing the only touch of winter. Pennsylvania did its best to keep up the glitter of the gridiron's spectacle, but there were many in the crowd who could not avoid sombre reflection concerning those who were absent.

Cornell started out as if the Red team was going to hand out the greatest surprise of the football season, for throughout the first period the Ithacans outplayed Pennsylvania, playing with a rush which seemed to be irresistible. Three times during that first quarter Cornell with a furious attack came within striking distance of the Penn goal, and three times Hoffman attempted to kick goals from the field. All three attempts failed, two of them being blocked, while the other failed because the ball was muddy and slippery.

The failure to gain anything by their great efforts seemed to unnerve the inexperienced Cornell players. At first they were dumfounded when Penn fell back before them. They were just as astonished as Penn. In the first quarter Cornell made five first downs, rushing the ball 69 yards to Penn's 47. The realization of strength keyed the Cornellians up to fighting pitch, and they were hammering away at the Quakers in surprising fashion when the Ithaca line suddenly collapsed and let the Penn players through to block a punt. Then the whole complexion of the game changed. The blocked punt resulted in a touchdown, and the Pennsylvania eleven picked up courage, and from that time on had Cornell on the run.

Try for Field Goal Is Blocked.

Just as the first quarter ended Penn had the ball in midfield. Bert Bell smashed through the Cornell line for seven yards, and Penn was then set back 15 yards for holding. Berry was forced to punt when the Quakers failed to gain anything with a forward pass and Nethercott got the ball on Cornell's 33-yard mark. Cross, the Cornell left half back, then dodged his way through Penn for a spectacular run of 25 yards, racing clear of all his tacklers except Bell, who brought him down. When Carry and Hoffman were unable to penetrate the Penn line Hoffman dropped back to punt from midfield.

Maynard, Penn's left tackle, broke through with a rush and blocked the kick, the ball rolling away over the muddy field toward Cornell's goal line. Then began a wild race for the truant ball. Heinie Miller, Penn's Captain, outraced the other players, and as he flashed along at top speed, he scooped the ball up on the thirty-yard-line, continuing his flight until he had slipped away from the Cornell tacklers and had tumbled over the goal line, his togs caked with mud. This unfortunate break was the undoing of Cornell. If the Ithacans had had any chance at all, it was gone now. That touchdown, after which Berry kicked the goal, seemed to take all the heart out of Cornell.

After the next kick-off Penn started in and ripped the Cornell line to bits. The inexperienced Cornell forwards were thrown into confusion, and Berry, Joe Straus and Light punctured the red line in an all-powerful march down the field until Straus plunged through for another touchdown. This procession by Penn covered sixty-five yards, and every step of the way Cornell fought back in a hopeless fight. After each scrimmage the Ithacans unraveled themselves from the heap of players, covered with mud from head to foot. On the play before the touchdown was scored Cornell was completely fooled when Berry dropped back as if to make a try at field goal. Instead Berry made a pretty forward pass to Bell, who rushed to the one-yard line, and Straus carried the ball over on one headlong dive.

Hoffman's Toe Valuable.

Throughout the third period the Cornell players again made a desperate fight, and their resistance was so stubborn that Penn was unable to score in that quarter. Hoffman got away several long kicks in this session, and each time that Penn worked the ball down into the Cornell bailiwick, Hoffman's foot came to the rescue and booted the ball far into Penn's territory. Cornell gained consistently in this period by punting.

All the time Penn kept pegging away at Cornell so persistently that the strength of the Ithacans was ebbing constantly. It could easily be seen that it was only a question of time before the superior Penn eleven would get under way and crush their opponents into submission. Cornell knew it, too, but the Ithacans' spirit and courage was an inspiring thing to watch.

Beginning with the fourth period Cornell began to crumple, and Penn's attack met with weak opposition. Lining up at the beginning of the last quarter on the 30-yard line, Light took the ball and darted through the left side of the Cornell line on a mad rush which did not end until the Penn back sprawled his mud-covered body over the goal line for Penn's third touchdown. Cornell was pretty well spent now and Penn came on with a rush. The Quaker backs, Straus, Light, Berry, and Bell picked great gaps in the line of red and shot deceptive forward passes over the heads of the bewildered Ithacans.

Cornell's game but unskilled eleven was being banged and smashed in every direction to complete the Pennsylvania holiday. There was no holding Penn now. Keyed up to a high pitch by success, the Quakers ran wild through the youths from Lake Cayuga. The sharp staccato yell of Cornell echoed in the ears of the overpowered Cornell players as they faced the terrific battering.

Another Touchdown Recorded.

After the next kick off, when Cornell was unable to gain Hoffman punted out of bounds on his own 45-yard line. Line smashing by Straus and Berry, a forward pass of 15 yards from Berry to Bell, and then another aerial outbreak, Berry to Bell, landed the ball on the six-yard line, and Howard Berry catapulted his way through the tiring Cornell players for another score.

Again the performance was repeated. Penn ripped off big gains through the crushed Cornell forwards. Bell skirted the Ithacans' left end for a 25-yard dash and then Berry hurled a 20-yard forward pass to Miller, who nailed the ball on the 12-yard line. On came Berry again with an irresistible rush, jamming his way over the goal line again. The Penn full back booted over the goals from touchdowns with deadly regularity.

The score was now 34 to 0, and the cheers of triumph from the Pennsylvania stands drowned the yells of encouragement which came from the handful of Cornell's faithful.

Cornell was a sad-looking aggregation, bruised and plastered with mud. Penn kept up the unrelenting advance, brushing the Ithacans aside like so many tenpins. "Fight, fight, fight!" howled the Cornell rooters, but by this time most of Cornell's fight was gone. Down the field came Penn, slamming Cornell back for yards at every plunge, Straus, Berry, and Light bowling along with ceaseless fury.

Penn again rushed the ball down to the 15-yard line, and the backfield was so tired that Bell ordered Berry back and he kicked the ball through the uprights for a field goal.

GEORGIA TECH IN A GALLOP.

Crushes Auburn, 68 to 7, Keeping Slate Clean for Third Year.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado closed its third consecutive season without defeat by annihilating the Auburn Plainsmen this afternoon, 68 to 7, the worst defeat ever handed an Auburn football team by any other eleven.

The scoring also put Georgia Tech in the front rank as the best scoring team in America, topping the Navy, who prior to today's game led them by nineteen points. End runs by Guyon and Strupper, line bucks by Hill, and forward passing by Guyon were the features. Guyon sped over twenty-five yards at a clip several times, while Strupper got a 45, a 50, and 65 yard broken field sprint.

Tech worked twelve forward passes successfully. Auburn's tally came as the result of a forward pass from Ducote to Donahue, which gained 20 yards, the latter, after catching the pass, speeding through a broken field 40 yards more to a touchdown, aided by wonderful interference, which spilled all Tech tacklers.

The tackling of Guyon and Strupper also featured in addition to their offensive play. Fully 20,000 fans witnessed the game.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Georgetown defeated the Allentown, Penn., Army Ambulance Corps football team of former college players here today, 27 to 0. Two field goals by Captain Maloney and Half Back Gilroy's broken field running were outstanding features of a game played on a wet and soggy field.

PITT CLOSES THIRD SEASON UNBEATEN

Warner's Panthers Conquer Penn State, 28 to 6, Keeping Their Slate Clean.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 29.—The University of Pittsburgh football team maintained their Eastern supremacy today when they won their last college game of the season, with Penn State, by a score of 28 to 6, giving tehm a clean slate of victories in the last three seasons, since Glenn Warner took hold. It also makes five straight victories over the Blue and White.

The visitors bothered the Panthers in the second and third periods with several trick plays and shift formations that gained ground, but the Blue and Gold line always held when their goal line was in danger. The one touchdown scored by Penn State came on a triple pass in the second period, and in this style of play Gross, Way, Rauch, and Czarneckie excelled. The line plunging of Gougler and McLaren was remarkable, and in the last period of play these two men broke down every bit of defense Penn State possessed and smashed their line for gains of fifteen and twenty yards. The end runs of Easterday were the best seen here this year.

McCarter was sent over for the first touchdown after three minutes of play and a little while later a double pass from McLaren to Gougler enabled the latter to cross the Penn State line. Then came the visitors' score in the second period. The play was even in the third fifteen minutes.

Two touchdowns were scored by the Panthers in the last period, Gougler and Easterday crossing the line after McLaren had gained enough ground by hitting the centre for the others to score. Gougler and Sies converted all Pitt's touchdowns into goals, while Coniver failed in his attempt at goal after Czarnecki had raced over the line on a triple pass.

AVIATORS DOWN SAILORS.

Watkins Leads Mineola Eleven to 14 to 7 Victory Over Naval Team.

Led by Ray Watkins, a former Colgate football star, who played quarter back, the Aviation Corps Station at Mineola, L. I., football eleven triumphed over the team of the Naval Reserve Training Station of Pelham Bay, N. Y., at the Polo Grounds yesterday by the score of 14 to 7. This victory, in the final game of the tournament, gives the aviation pupils of Mineola championship prestige in the New York Athletic Club's Army and Navy Posts Metropolitan District Football League.

The teams, both of them made up principally of former college gridiron players, furnished a large crowd with one of the best service games seen on a local gridiron this season. The victorious eleven, despite the treacherous, slippery field, played brilliantly throughout, and won the game on its merits. The Naval team, however, made frequent fumbles, some of them caused by the condition of the turf, but more of them due to jumbling of signals, which marred and retarded their efforts to overcome the first period lead of the black-sweatered team from Mineola. The appeals of the 800 bluejackets of the Naval Training Station, who arrived late, went unanswered, and the final whistle found the jackies trailing by seven points in the score, but fighting to the last ditch.

Watkins was the individual star, and his performance thrilled the spectators. He was a factor in almost every play started in each of the four periods, and his line bucking, his long runs around ends and through holes in the naval team, together with his accurate kicking, served as the cornerstone of the Aviators' victory. The comparatively diminutive ex-Colgate player injected himself into the game right after the kickoff, and, with well-chosen plays, guided his teammates on a successful series of line plunges which sent Clark, formerly of Muhlenberg, over the Navy line for the first score of the game.

From this Watkins kicked the goal. The former Colgate player shortly afterward sent a forward pass accurately to Johnson for a gain of twenty-five yards, but the latter was tackled before starting on a run. In another series of fast plays the Mineola team again toppled over the opposition, and on what would have been the fourth down Watkins was forced over the line with the second Aviation touchdown. He kicked the goal himself.

In the second quarter the Aviators seemed well on their way to another touchdown completely outclassing their opponents with a massed attack, until Peacock, also a former member of the Colgate eleven, intercepted a forward pass from Watkins and dashed thirty yards to a touchdown. Peacock then kicked the goal and raised the hopes of the Navy's supporters, but they were dashed in the remaining two periods by the consistency with which the Mineola eleven made futile the desperate efforts of the jackies to score again.

In the last two quarters the keenest playing of the game came, with both elevens contesting hard for every inch of ground, but the Aviators consistently showed themselves superior and kept the ball almost constantly in Navy territory. Particularly in the last period did the teams strive hard for additional points, but the Navy team, reinforced with fresh reserves from the bench, held the Aviators safe until the whistle.

Sunflower Eleven Beats Missouri.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 29.—Smashing its way through the line almost at will, the University of Kansas football team today won its football game with the University of Missouri by a score of 27 to 3. Missouri at no time was a dangerous opponent for the Lawrence eleven. Pringle, the Kansas left half, made two of the four touchdowns.

SYRACUSE VICTOR IN WEST.

Successfully Invades Nebraska Field, Winning by 10 to 9.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 29.—Syracuse won from Nebraska on Nebraska Field by a score of 10 to 9 today. Nebraska's failure to kick goal after the final touchdown prevented the game from ending a tie. Nebraska scored first in the first quarter, while Syracuse did not register a counter until the third quarter. Syracuse forced her way down the field for a touchdown in the third, kicked goal, and later scored on a drop kick.

Meehan kicked goal for Syracuse and also scored on the drop kick. Nebraska scored on a drop kick in the first, Dobson trying from the forty-yard line. In the fourth quarter Nebraska made a touchdown following a twenty-yard forward pass. Shaw failed to kick goal.

Metzger's Eleven Defeats W. and L. by a Score of 14 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 29.—Washington and Jefferson this afternoon defeated the Washington and Lee eleven by a 14 to 0 score in a game played on a quagmire in a cold, drizzling rain. McCreight, who replaced Smith early in the game, made all of the points during the last part of the fourth period.

The first touchdown followed the intercepting of an attempted forward pass by Carroll, who was downed on the seven-yard line. McCreight leaped the scrimmage line for the score. Later, Henry blocked Larkin's kick, attempted while near his goal, and Reese recovered the ball on Washington and Lee's five-yard mark. McCreight again went over for a touchdown after the ball had been rushed to the two-yard mark. McCreight kicked both goals.

Washington and Lee was on the defensive far within its own territory during the greater part of the first three periods and had no scoring opportunities.

BLACK'S TEAM IN A DRAW.

Camp Devens Men Hold Newport to Scoreless Tie.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Percy Haughton's football team from Camp Devens played Cupid Black's Newport Naval Reserves to a 0 to 0 tie score in the snow at Braves Field this morning, the soldiers being saved from a bad beating by a good goal line defense.

The Devens team, with many former Harvard 'Varsity men in the lineup, crossed the middle of the field only once, this on a 41-yard run by Thacher and then immediately lost the ball on the Navy's 27-yard line by fumbling.

Charley Barrett of Cornell was Newport's great ground gainer, but slipped up in the second quarter when, after a 25-yard run he dropped the ball four yards from the Army's goal. Barrett also missed a try for field goal from the 26-yard line in the first period, the ball striking one of the uprights. The Navy gained 239 yards to 50 yards for the Army, which covered only nine yards in addition to Thacher's run.

Black's team made two advances of 40 yards and one of 68 yards, once losing the ball on downs on its opponent's seven-yard line, later being set back from 20-yard line for holding, and at the end of the game throwing a forward pass from the 11-yard line, but the play failing of completion.

FORT HAMILTON RUNS WILD.

Lieutenant Hayes Star in Victory Over Fort Hancock Eleven.

The soldier football eleven of Fort Hamilton easily triumphed over the Fort Hancock team in their game yesterday morning at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. The final score favored the soldiers of Brooklyn by 69 to 0, and this margin clearly illustrates the manner in which the Sandy Hook team was outclassed and outplayed. Almost from the starting kick-off the Fort Hamilton representatives made their superiority manifest, and when once they started scoring, the Hancock line was mowed down like chaff before them.

The big cog in the Fort Hamilton machine was Lieutenant Hayes of the 13th Regiment, Brooklyn. A former Muhlenberg player, Hayes was in every play on the field, and his line plunging, for gains of from ten to fifteen yards, led his teammates in most of their scores. Lieutenant Hayes also scored one touchdown, and tallied nine goals from touchdown. The line-up:

Ft. Hamilton, (69.)	Position.	Ft. Hancock, (0.)

FORDHAM DEFEATS UPTON ENGINEERS

Maroon Rides Roughshod Over Soldiers and Rolls Up a Score of 35 to 0.

Fordham capped its football season on Fordham Field yesterday afternoon with a victory over the eleven of the 302d Engineers from Camp Upton by a score of 35 to 0. Measuring the game by the relative power in the two teams, the score should have been much larger in favor of the Maroon. Fordham, however, was handicapped by lack of cohesion in its attack during the first half, and this saved the soldiers from a more disastrous beating. The engineers had no attack and little defense that was adequate to stay the assault of the heavy Maroon backfield men, and it was evident after only a few minutes of play that the size of the score which the Maroon would roll up was really the only issue at stake. As far as really threatening Fordham, the Upton men had neither the physique nor the knowledge of team work to make their attacks hold any terror.

It had been heralded from Fordham that the Maroon was to play Frank Glick's eleven, but this proved to be a false rumor, which was doubtless as much of a surprise to the Fordham men as it was to the spectators. To be sure, Upton had one or two men from Glick's eleven in its lineup, but the team was really the outfit from the 302d Engineers, a regimental team which had not met defeat this season, while Glick's eleven was a divisional team.

As football goes, even in this period of war-time activity, when the game has been struck hard, the contest could hardly be called worth while, from the standpoint of either Fordham or Upton. The Maroon was weakened by the absence of some of its star players and appeared to be a bit disrupted. The football was ragged and lacked any livening quality in the entire first period.

During this time Fordham could score only one touchdown, and this came after Frisch, the star back of the maroon, had injected his brilliant play into the contest near the close of the second quarter. Just a few minutes before time was called he raced seventy yards for a touchdown and gave the Fordham stand its first opportunity to let its multitudinous voice ring across the gridiron. From then on, Fordham feasted its eyes on the play of Frisch, who was capable of making big gains nearly every time he carried the leather. The final Fordham touchdown was due to another of his brilliant runs. This time he again covered seventy yards, slipping through the entire soldier team on his way to the goal line.

Although the first half had been tame, the second half fairly bristled with excitement, but it was not so much a matter of football as it was of fisticuffs. Near the middle of the third quarter Frisch was tackled hard after running back a punt and for a time there threatened to be a free-for-all affair. Just who started the trouble will remain a mystery, but at any rate it was only a second before the players of each team began to take up the cudgels of battle. Harry Fisher, the referee, and Mr. Cook, the umpire, succeeded in quelling the outbreak after a time and banished McGrath of Fordham from the field. This bit of sideplay to football engendered bad feeling between the elevens, which was not lessened by the fact that Fordham now and again was a bit rough and squalls threatened on several later occasions. They blew away, however, without any noticeable exchange of blows.

One difficulty which led up to the boxing bouts was the fact that the Upton soldiers were not conditioned to play such a strong and heavy team as Fordham. While the Maroon was not by any means playing the highest type of football, the men were at all times struggling fiercely, and sometimes perhaps a bit viciously, but on the whole it could not be said they were roughing with that the prime intention. The lack of condition of the Upton men was evident in the many injuries which resulted from plays through the line.

The Maroon showed its best football at the opening of the third quarter. It was plain from the manner in which they started to tear asunder the opposing line that a heart-to-heart talk with the coach between halves had instilled a better quality of football into the team. Upton kicked off and Fordham began a battering assault that drove the soldiers back into their own territory and right up to the shadow of their goal posts. Frisch, Galligan, Coletti, and Ryan all contributed in the advance and the score was accomplished when Brennan shot out a forward pass of twenty yards to Du Moe, who raced over the line for Fordham's second score.

Near the close of the quarter Fordham again got its battering ram working, to the confusion and dismay of the soldiers, and while Upton once succeeded in hurling the assault back from near its goal posts, Fordham would not be denied, and a few minutes later was again pressing along to another touchdown. The quarter ended with the ball on Upton's ten-yard line, and it was only a minute's work at the start of the fourth quarter to make the touchdown a certainty.

From then on the defeat of the soldiers was turned into a rout.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 29.—In a spectacular contest this afternoon Holy Cross College finished its football season by beating Springfield College, 13 to 7. In the final period Mitchell again made a touchdown for Holy Cross. Linden scored the only touchdown for his team in the last quarter.

Early in the first period Bertsnider, full back for Springfield, went out of the game with a broken ankle.

EASY FOR MOUNTAINEERS.

Outplay North Carolina A. and M. and Pile Up Score of 21 to 0.

Special to The New York Times.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 29.—West Virginia toyed with the North Carolina A. and M. football team here this afternoon, piling up a score of 21 to 0, which seemed to satisfy the local players, and after which they did not extend themselves. The North Carolinas made but three first downs.

Forward passes from Rodgers to Harrick, King, Ice, Hager, and Mills were repeatedly called for, and on nearly every occasion they worked for big gains. Three times West Virginia lost the ball almost upon the A. and M. line, and was thus prevented from further piling up the score.

Once King fumbled just as he went over the line; on another occasion the ball was lost on downs when A. and M. made the best defensive stand of the game on her three-yard line. Early in the game Faquette, the A. and M. half, grappled a West Virginia pass just behind his goal, and, with an open field, dashed to the West Virginia 18-yard line before Rodgers caught him from behind. The game was played on a muddy field and fumbles were frequent, though they had no decisive bearing on the result.

OHIO STATE IS UNBEATEN.

Finishes Season with Easy Victory Over Camp Sherman Eleven.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 29.—Ohio State University, big ten champion, kept her season's slate clean by beating the Camp Sherman, Ohio, all-star eleven here this afternoon by 28 to 0. The 'Varsity had little trouble in passing and made big gains around the wings, playing an open, running game almost throughout. The army was kept largely on the defensive, Rupp's forty-yard spring standing out as the feature of its play.

A crowd of 10,000 paid $15,000 into the Camp Sherman trust fund to see the game and a military exhibition by selective draft soldiers, a feature of which was a platoon of boxers, trained by Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, who is Camp Sherman's boxing instructor.

ERASMUS CONQUERS POLY PREP ELEVEN

Brooklyn's Scholastic Champions Victorious by 13 to 0 as Season Closes.

FORDHAM PREP IS BEATEN

Coach McCarty Says Officials Favored Brooklyn Prep and Orders Team from Field.

Brooklyn Interscholastic football concluded yesterday with four games on the leading gridirons of the borough across the bridge. Erasmus Hall High School's eleven, the season's champions, was opposed by the Poly Prep team at Washington Park in the afternoon, and, though forced to extend itself because of the surprising form of the Poly Prep team, the Brooklyn championship aggregation emerged victorious by a score of 13 to 0.

In the morning on the same gridiron Brooklyn Prep won the Manhattan-Brooklyn private schools' championship title by scoring over the Fordham Prep eleven by a score of 14 to 6. This game was somewhat of a disappointment and ended five minutes before the scheduled time for the whistle when Coach McCarty ordered his Fordham team to leave the field. The Fordham coach said that he took this action when he became convinced that the officials of the game were prejudiced in their decisions. At Ebbets Field a double-header was held and resulted in New Utrecht High School defeating Commercial iHgh School 14 to 6, and Boys' High School triumphing over the Manual Training High School team by a score of 13 to 0.

The Erasmus Hall-Poly Prep game furnished the feature of the day. By scoring this victory the Buff and Blue eleven clearly illustrated their right to the Brooklyn title. The field was in poor condition and the result was that both teams had many fumbles. This condition, however, was turned to the advantage of the Erasmus Hall team in that they were quick to recover fumbles and stave off threatened danger to their goal line.

The team from Dyker Meadows showed up creditably against the championship eleven, but was outplayed in every stage of the game with the exception of the second quarter. In this period a Poly Prep score was averted by the timely interruption of the whistle after the team had rushed the ball down the field for forty yards.

Erasmus Hall High School's team scored its first points in the third quarter on a fumbled punt. A long forward pass, Gobel to Mahr, and the latter's run of fifteen yards, gave the champions their first touchdown and MacPhee kicked the goal. In the fourth quarter, shortly before the final whistle, penalties forced Poly Prep back on its goal line and in a wild scramble after a bingled forward pass Mahr fell on the ball for Erasmus Hall's second touchdown.

The lineup:

Erasmus H., (13.)	Position.	Poly Prep, (0.)
[illegible]	L.E.	Lucas
Wolf	L.T.	Petherbridge
Mueller	L.G.	Farran
Haasmot	C.	Green
Wilkinson	R.G.	Stratton
Franklin	R.T.	Kendall
Souville	R.E.	Lundbeck
Meistrel	Q.B.	Schell
MacPhee	L.H.B.	Pinner
Goebel	R.H.B.	Schiebler
Mahr	F.B.	Carroa

Touchdowns—Mahr, 2. Goal from touchdown — MacPhee. Substitutions — Lane for Lucas, Lucas for Lane, Jelliffe for Carroa, H. Botting for Whitan, Salmon for Wolf, Green for Mueller, Ross for Franklin, Franklin for Ross, Oldaker for Franklin, Whitan for Meistrel, Meistrel for Whitan. Referee—R. J. Shearer, Dickinson. Umpire—J. C. Hennessy, Brown. Linesman—Ed Donnelly, Trinity. Time of quarters—12 minutes.

By ordering his football players off the field five minutes before the final whistle, Coach McCarty of Fordham Prep automatically conceded the private schools championship of Manhattan and Brooklyn to the Brooklyn Prep team. This game was played on the Washington Park gridiron in the morning, and at the time that the Bronx team left the field Brooklyn Prep was leading in the score by 14 to 6. Coach McCarty withdrew his team from the game after alleged unfairness by the officials in rendering their decisions. The Brooklyn Prep eleven showed surprisingly good form and outplayed the Bronx team, particularly in the second and final quarters, when the Brooklyn Prep points were made. Fordham Prep's only score came near the end of the game, when a forward pass, Kearns to Garvey, resulted in the latter going over the Brooklyn Prep goal line.

The line-up:

Substitutions—Ughetta for Boynton, T. Brennan for O'Grady.

Referee—R. Hart, Princeton. Umpire—S. Darby, Syracuse. Head linesman—M. W. Kearney, Holy Cross. Time of quarters—Ten and twelve minutes.

The football elevens of New Utrecht and Boys' High Schools emerged victorious in a brace of games which furnished the Thanksgiving Day attraction at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon. The New Utrecht eleven, in its victorious game with Commercial H. S., put forth the best playing of the afternoon, and there were times when the team was pressed hard by the Commercial team in its effort to overcome an early lead. George Smith, at quarter back, played the star rôle for New Utrecht, and accounted for both of the team's touchdowns. He started his school in the lead in the first quarter, when, after successful line plunges, the ball was brought to Commercial's 5-yard line, and Smith went over for a touchdown. Hettrick kicked the goal.

Shortly after the start of the second quarter Smith's drop kick placed the ball on Commercial's 1-yard line. From there it was gradually rushed back to midfield, where, on Korinsky's fumble of a punt, Smith recovered the pigskin and raced 30 yards for another touchdown. Hettrick again kicked the goal. In the third quarter Commercial scored when, after rushing the ball to New Utrecht's 20-yard line, Jonassohn and Shuter successfully worked a forward pass. Shuter was within easy distance of the New Utrecht goal line when he received the ball, and just stepped over the line for Commercial's touchdown. Manley missed the goal.

Effective line plunging and long runs arounds ends for large gains by Spiers and Daniels enabled the Boys' High School eleven to trounce Manual Training High School in the first part of the double bill by a score of 13 to 0. Both teams played disappointingly, and at times the game was uninteresting. Spiers and Daniels each tallied touchdowns, and Daniels also scored a goal from touchdown, all the scores coming in the third quarter.

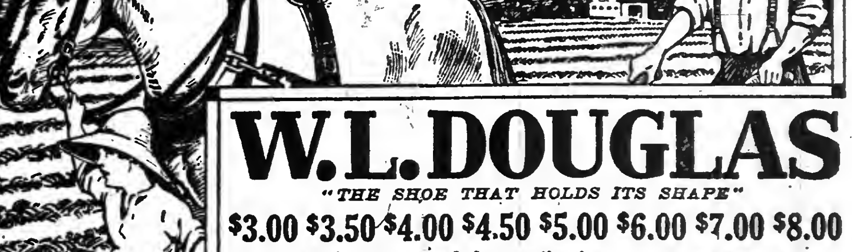
GAME NETS FUND $20,000.

Training Station Eleven Defeats Fort Sheridan at Chicago, 27 to 0.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—The Great Lakes Naval Training Station football eleven easily triumphed over the Fort Sheridan officers, by 27 to 0, at Stagg Field today. The proceeds of the game, approximately $20,000, will be equally divided between the Officers' Association and the Jackies' Recreation Fund.

The officers' eleven, composed of former university stars, was no match for the jackies, who had possession of the ball most of the time. "Pat" Smith, former Captain of the University of Michigan eleven, and Erickson, formerly of St. Olof's College, played a brilliant game for the navy men.

The attack and defense of the officers was ragged and there was a lack of team work. Jesse Spaulding, former Yale star, started the game at full back but before it was over more than fifteen substitutions were made in the lineup.



Although W. L. Douglas was "bound out" to learn the trade of shoemaking, he was called upon to do many things which had no bearing whatever upon the making of shoes. DARK HORSE GIVES MAXWELL A DUEL FOR MEDAL IN LAKEWOOD GOLF TOURNAMENT

MAXWELL MEDALIST ON LAKEWOOD LINKS

Youthful Aronimink Golfer Has Qualifying Card of 74 in Fall Tourney.

REEKIE NEXT, WITH A 76

Upper Montclair Player Gets Into Trouble at Seventeenth Hole and Loses Chance to Win.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Nov. 29.—By returning an admirable 34 for his last nine holes here today Norman H. Maxwell of Aronimink, the present United North and South amateur golf champion, won the qualifying medal in the annual Fall tournament of the Country Club of Lakewood. Maxwell went out in 40, which gave him a card of 74 for the full round, two strokes better than was acomplished by W. M. Reekie of Upper Montclair.

Reekie was the dark horse of the tournament. None of the players knew much of his ability, but the United States Golf Association evidently was not so ignorant, since it found that Reekie was a three handicap man, and had been considered at such rating for a number of years. He is a product of Scotland, and plays golf both naturally and well, albeit he does not take part in any tournaments.

The Upper Monclair man had a splendid chance to win the medal, but tossed it away at the seventeenth hole, where he needed four putts after reaching the green in two extraordinary shots. Reekie played steadily and handled his shots with the judgment of a master of the game. ell was out in 39, the best score registered for the first nine during the day, but he needed 37 to come back, thanks to his stroke 04 bad putting.

Maxwell Off in Rush.

Maxwell started his round as if he were going after one of the records left here in past years by the old man of the links, Walter J. Travis. The youthful champion wasted only one stroke in the first six holes and he got that stroke back by sinking a ten-foot putt for a birdie 3 at the fourth hole. At the seventh, however, Maxwell exhibited a bit of nervousness and missed a short putt. This temporarily threw him off his game and he wasted strokes at the ninth and tenth before he got going again, with a birdie 2 at the eleventh.

From the eleventh hole to the last green Maxwell played brilliantly and with only one bad shot, that an overapproach putt at the twelfth. He pulled his tee shot wide for the thirteenth, but pitched dead to the cup on his second and was down in par 3. At the fourteenth and fifteenth Maxwell cut a stroke from par at each hole and he continued to the end with equally successful play.

His card was:

Out	4	4	5	3	4	4	5	5	6—40
In	4	2	5	3	3	3	5	5	4—34—74

Few other players besides Maxwell and Reekie were able to break eighty during the day. C. A. Van Vleck, Jr., of Baltusrol, with seventy-nine, was one of them, and the other was Herbert M. Forrest, a local player, who still is toasted at the clubhouse for having made the 400-yard eighteenth hole in two strokes on April 30, 1915. Van Vleck made a bid for equal recognition at the home hole today when he dropped his second shot within three feet of the cup, but he had to be content with a birdie three instead of equaling Forrest's cherished eagle two. Van Vleck had a bad outward round, needing forty-three strokes for that part of his journey. Had he played as well going out as he did coming back he might have had something to say about the medal.

Marston in the Gallery.

Max Marston, who has played in several tournaments here in the past, was one of the gallery. He is convalescing from a severe illness, which forced his discharge from the naval reserve. He says that he cannot play more than two holes of golf now without feeling the effect of the exercise. He hopes to be able to get back into the service within a few months, and, of course, at the same time back to the sport of golf.

As is the case here during each tournament, the players found it easier to register low scores on the second nine holes, and there was a wide difference in their efforts. P. S. McLaughlin of Scarsdale will testify to the difference in the outward and inward journey. He needed fifty-one strokes to get to the tenth tee, and then used up only thirty-nine coming back. In partial explanation, he said he was trying for everything on the first nine, and did so poorly that he "babied" his ball up to the holes on the second nine.

Although several of the experts who usually take part in this tournament were missing, the scores were low on the average. Four players under eighty is scarce in most tournaments. Gardiner W. White of Flushing was to have taken part, but telephoned yesterday that he could not come because of the illness of his wife.

The first and second rounds of match play for four flights will be held tomorrow, and the semi-final and final rounds in all divisions Saturday. There will be a handicap medal play affair Saturday, too.

KOLEHMAINEN HOME FIRST.

Wins Berwick Marathon for Third Successive Year, Beating Henigan.

Special to The New York Times.

BERWICK, Penn., Nov. 29.—Hannes Kolehmainen, the flying Finn, triumphed today for the third successive year in the annual Berwick marathon. This year was the first in which he was pushed to the finish, and it was the national senior cross-country champion, James Henigan of Boston, who ran neck and neck with him over the ten miles. Kolehmainen used his reserve strength for a sprint in the last quarter of a mile and beat him out. Otto Laakso of Brooklyn finished third. Henigan announced before the race that it would be his last one, and that he would quit running to enter the army.

SPORTS FOR CAMPS PLANNED

A. A. U. to Hold Games for Soldiers and Sailors.

Before the end of the week officials of the Amateur Athletic Union will begin on a program of athletic championship competitions to be held at the various camps and cantonments throughout the country. This work, indorsed at the recent annual convention of the A. A. U., must wait on the appointment by the new President of the association, C. A. Dean of Chicago, of his National Championship Committee. This will be announced within the next few days, it is expected, and immediately the task of introducing the athletic activities at the many camps will be undertaken.

There are thirty-two of these mobilization and national army camps and cantonments in the various sections of the country, not to mention the naval training bases which are included in the resolution to promote athletic competitions, adopted at the recent A. A. U. meeting. The task of organizing this scheme to give the soldiers and sailors championship athletics of their own is no easy one. It would not be surprising if a month elapsed before the initial set of games in the series were promoted.

President Frederick W. Rubien of the Metropolitan Association, who is also Secretary Treasurer of the national body, was enthusiastic over the success of the proposition. "The main idea," said Mr. Rubien, "is to get the boys in the camps in the physical condition necessary for the task they have assumed in sharing their country's burden in this war. At the same time recreation of a pleasant sort will be afforded the soldiers as they get their bodies in good physical condition.

"In addition it is the present intention of the officials behind the movement to donate for each of these championships some token of supremacy which will afford an added incentive for the soldier-athletes. This feature, however, is comparatively unimportant. The big thing just now is to get the competitions properly mapped out and then, with the plans that will be devised, it is expected that the project will be successful."

President Rubien said that no formal steps toward getting the approval of Secretary of War Baker to the idea had been taken as yet. He also denied that a committee had been appointed to seek advice from Secretary Baker as to how best to spend the $5,000 appropriated by the A. A. U. for the competitions. Mr. Rubien declared the matter would be brought to the attention of Secretary Baker within a few days.

The A. A. U. officials plan to conduct competitions in boxing, wrestling, and cross-country running at each of the thirty-two camps. These sports are selected merely because they are the ones at present in season. The tentative plan calls for the continuation of the sports throughout the length of the war, and, as the seasons come in, swimming, handball, tug-of-war, and track and field meets will be held.

All competitions will be under supervision of the National Championship Committee of the A. A. U., and will be held simultaneously, or as near so as it is possible, at all of the camps. Civilian athletic instructors and Y. M. C. A. officials already at the camps will be acquainted with the rules and plans of the events and their aid will be enlisted in running off the tests, which will be held in elimination fashion. This means that each company will have its games to produce champions, then each battalion. Subsequently each brigade and regiment will have trials to decide the leaders, and this will bring the competition down to a question of champions of the divisions or camps.

Regulation A. A. U. championship medals will be awarded to the various winners, but the design of these have not as yet been determined. One of the most acceptable among the designs offered is a medal on the bar variety, which will give the successful competitors a souvenir of each of the events in which they excel. To the champion of a company will be presented a medal, according to this design, and if he is successful in the battalion competition to the medal will be added a bar with a suitable inscription.

GEORGIO CAPTURES YONKERS MARATHON

Late Starter from the West, However, Makes the Fastest Time Over Long Course.

Joseph Georgio of the Paulist A. C., whose previous efforts have been confined to ordinary long distance races, gained a place among noted Marathon runners yesterday by winning the eleventh annual Yonkers Marathon race of the Mercury A. C., over a 25-mile course that started and finished at the corner of Jerome and Yonkers Avenues. Georgio began the race as an experiment and was prepared to stop if he found the contest over the hilly roads too tryin. The pace he set was altogether too fast for the mediocre field of twenty-six that answered the call, and after cutting out a big lead in the first five miles Georgio ambled along at his own pace and cantered home in front more than five minutes ahead of H. Spies of the Morningside A. C., who took second place, about thirty yards in front of J. Brooks of the Mohawk A. C.

Remarkable as was the victory of Georgio in his first attempt over such a long route, it was put in the shade by the achievement of Frank Gillespie of Chicago, the only Westerner who essayed competition with the local runners. Gillespie had miscalculated the time necessary to reach the starting point on the edge of the Yonkers race track and when he arrived the contestants who had been started at 12.30 were already well on their way. Nothing daunted the Westerner, who stripped and donned his running clothes, setting off in pursuit of the field twenty-five minutes after the others had been sent on their way.

Gillespie, who has a ten-mile championship of the Central Association to his credit, showed running ability far superior to the men he was chasing. In the first ten miles of the race he gained fourteen minutes on those in front of him, and swinging along with a long, easy stride cut down all but five of the twenty-six starters. He finished in sixth place. The character of his performance may be realized by the fact that his time taken from the actual starting was 2 hours, 49 minutes, 24 seconds, more than ten minutes faster than that credited to Georgio, whose winning time was 2:59:51.

In all the eleven years of the Yonkers marathon, which ranks second in importance to the Boston race, it is doubtful if such a poor field has competed. The weather was ideal and the bracing atmosphere contributed to fast time, yet there was no one able to keep pace with Georgio after he took the lead away from his clubmate, G. Kirkwood, who was in the van for the first mile. Harry Parkinson, winner of the event in 1915, made no effort to keep up the pace, and through J. Brooks of the Mohawk A. C., who was third last year, was always in the first division, he could not cut down the leader's advantage.

Two circuits of a course about six miles, embracing Webster and Jerome Avenues, were first negotiated, after which Georgia was leading by three-quarters of a mile. He covered the first five miles in 31:12 and then miles in 62:32. D. Trivioviidis was second and Harry Spies, third, at the end of the two first circuits, with W. Boak and J. Brooks, both Mohawk A. C. men, following closely.

After reaching the starting point for the second time the runners were sent on a long lap which led them to the Hartsdale Inn. Georgio had only to race along in front, but there was a tussle for the places. The strain was too much for Trivioviidis and he was passed by both Spies and Brooks. The latter apparently did not overexert himself, to improve on the position he gained a year ago, but ran as though he preferred the prize offered for third place.

There were long gaps between the runners after the third man had finished. Only thirteen of the starters finished in the four hours allowed for placing the men. One of these was the bewhiskered O. S. Weeks, who, though nearing the half-century mark, kept at his task with vigor enough to land in ninth place and beat Parkinson, who met with a fall and complained that he had not been properly coached on the journey. Weeks, who is a member of the Hollywood Inn A. A., won prizes as the first Yonkers man to finish and also the first local clubman. Several walkers essayed competition with the runners, but none of those who affected the heel and toe gait had arrived when the officials closed up their scoring books.

The order of finish:

	H.M.S.
1. J. Georgio, Paulist A. C.	2:59:51

SCORING SYSTEM CHANGED.

New Method Adopted for Cycle Race Beginning Sunday Night.

A new scoring system for the six-day cycle race, which starts at Madison Square Garden Sunday night, was announced last evening by Manager William H. Wellman. Points will be awarded every afternoon and evening, during the three hours of the guaranteed sprints, from 2:30 to 3:30, and from 8:30 to 10:30.

Six places are to be counted in each sprint during these hours, and the points uring the first five days will be awarded as follows: Six for first place, 5 for second, 4 for third, 3 for fourth, 2 for fifth, and 1 for sixth.

On Saturday afternoon the leader in each sprint will be credited with 12 points, while second position will net 5 points; third, 4; fourth, 3; fifth, 2, and sixth, 1. On Saturday night, in the final hour sprint, at every mile first place will receive 72 points, while the distribution of points for the other five positions remains unchanged, second place receiving 5 points, &c.

By this system it will be impossible for any team to pile up a winning lead before the final evening, unless it laps the field. In such an event it will be necessary for the fortunate combination to keep up with the field in every sprint in order to hold its advantage. Yesterday's holiday was not a day of rest for the thirty star riders who are entered in the grind. They all worked out at the Newark Velodrome or covered a distance on the road.

Tea and Staib Lead Harriers.

Finishing in first and fifth positions as a team in the members' blind handicap, five and one-half miles road race of the Glencoe A. C., yesterday, Michael Tea (scratch) and G. Staib (0:30) won the first prize, with a total of six points. Second prize went to H. Mayer (2:00) and F. Pugliatt, (3:00,) this pair finishing in third and fourth positions, respectively. E. Farrell (scratch) and E. Lillis (scratch) finished in second and sixth places and won third place.

Dumont First on Plainfield Links.

Leading his field at five down against par M. J. Dumont captured the honors in the holiday golf competition at the Plainfield Country Club yesterday. The event was an eighteen-hole handicap against par, which is 71. A. J. Watson, with six down, was second, and J. W. Baker and G. F. Schoonmaker, at nine down each, tied for third place.

Hearne First in Auto Race.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 29.—Eddie Hearne won the fifty-mile automobile Liberty Sweepstakes at Ascot Park today and made a world's record for the distance on a one-mile speedway. His time was 41 minutes 54 1-10 seconds, an average of 71.5 miles an hour. Milton was second, Chevrolet third, and Belden fourth.

COCHRAN IS FAR IN VAN.

Leads in 18.2 Billiard Match with Mayer by 1,950 to 1,043.

The old saying about there being no second in a race may be resuscitated for the 2,500 point 18.2 billiard match between Welker Cochran and Joseph Mayer at Maurice Daly's Billiard Academy. Cochran is now so far in the van that his lead is measured in hundreds of points. The score, including yesterday's games, is now 1,950 to 1,043 in favor of the Chicago expert.

Cochran continues to display billiards of high standard. In the afternoon match yesterday he defeated Mayer by 250 to 210 and in the evening he triumped by 300 to 180. Cochran averaged 22 8-11 in the afternoon game and in the night contest his average was 37 4-8.

Mayer showed much better billiards than heretofore in the afternoon game. His average mounted close to that which Cochran set, and it was a keenly waged contest before the Chicago representative succeeded in securing the victory. Mayer at times had the ivories under fine control and nursed them for good-sized runs, one totaling 68 and the other 64.

In the evening Cochran romped away with the game. After starting poorly, he struggled along far behind Mayer until the last two innings, when he burst into two runs that topped the hundred mark. The first was 113 and this was followed by another of 115.

The scores:

JERSEY BEATS NEW YORK.

Defeat Empire State Team in Soccer Match by 2 to 1.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 29.—New Jersey captured the honors in the annual inter-state soccer match with New York at Clark's Athletic Field in Eas Newark, this afternoon, when the visitors, winners in 1915 and 1916, sufered defeat by the score of 2 goals to 1. The rival teams shared the honors of the first half, during which each scored once.

A penalty against Post, the Jersey right full back, yielded the first point for New York. Van den Eynden of the Interborough R. T. eleven negotiated the free kick half an hour after the start. eNw York did not long enjoy this brief triumph for within three minutes the Jerseymen made the score a tie through a tally by Brierley of the Scottish Americans, fraom a pass by Vandeweghe.

The teams remained on even terms until the middle of the second half. It was then that A. Vandewoghe of the Paterson F. C., formerly with the New York Football Club, shot the winning goal after brilliant individual work. Wilson of the Clan McDonalds saved New York on two critical occasions in the second half from further scoring.

PENALTIES AID BETHLEHEM.

Two Tallies Result from Them and N. Y. Loses at Soccer, 3 to 2.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 29.—Two penalties awarded to the team of the Bethlehem Football Club, champion of the American Football Association, deprived the soccer eleven of the New York Football Club of what promised to be a hard-earned victory in the series of the National Football League here today, and Bethlehem won by the score of 3 goals to 2. New York led at half time by 2-0, the goals having been shot by Petrie and Koelsch.

Not long after ends had been changed trouble began to brew between the rival teams and Robertson of New York, after being struck twice, had to leave the game, and with him went Casey of the home team, by order of the referee. Fifteen minutes later, McKelvey tallied the first point for Bethlehem, after which came the two penalties given against New York. These were both successfully negotiated by Fleming.

EBBETS APPEALS TO CLERGY

Argues That Sunday Baseball Should Be Permitted.

President Ebbets of the Brooklyn Baseball Club has sent a circular letter to all the clergymen of Brooklyn explaining the position of the club in advocating Sunday baseball, and asking the views of the clergy on the subject.

The letter, in part, follows: "We desire to submit for your consideration the reasons why we advocate the amending of the old blue law for the purpose of legally playing baseball games on Sunday afternoons; said law, which was enacted in 1787, reads as follows:

"'All shooting, hunting, fishing, playing, horse racing, gaming or other public sports, exercises or shows, upon the first day of the week, and all noises disturbing the peace of the day, are prohibited.'

"It is a fact that the law is a dead letter with respect to every activity against which it is directed except baseball games at Ebbets Field.

"During the thirty-five years of the Brooklyn Baseball Club we have repeatedly been requested by the public to play championship games at our grounds on Sundays (which would be conducted in a proper and orderly manner without interfering with church hours or the repose of the community). These requests come mainly from those who cannot spare time from business during the week; who have only Sundays for recreation and to witness their favorite pastime; we have endeavored to comply with the wishes of this large and constantly increasing number of Brooklyn residents, but always have been enjoined by the enforcement of the aforementioned law; therefore, with the thought of securing the requests of the public in some tangible shape, we circulated a petition to the Legislature requesting the legalization of Sunday baseball, and obtained with little trouble between 40,000 and 50,000 signatures.

"We are living in a far different community to that of 130 years ago, when this law was adopted, and we are confident that a vast majority of the respectable, law-abiding, church-going citizens and public officials of the present day want the aforementioned blue law amended in order that they may not only witness the harmless game of professional baseball on Sunday, but also enjoy other forms of recreation which are now permitted.

"Statistics of cities where Sunday baseball is played prove that the church has not been interfered with; that the morals of the community have been improved; that less intoxication prevails, and that many clergy and public officials who were first opposed to Sunday baseball now approve it."

Suydam Wins Turkey at Traps.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Nov. 29.—Harry Suydam of New York, shooting from scratch, won the special Thanksgiving Day shoot this afternoon at the Laurel House Gun Club traps with a score of 96 out of 100. P. S. P. Randolph was second with 92. An eighteen-pound live turkey was the winner's trophy. Other shooters were J. Holman, C. K. Billings, Archibald McClure, Andrew Murphy, and others.

George Snare won in the first event at twenty-five birds, with a score of 23 from scratch. In the second event a tie resulted between J. A. McDonald, Charles T. O'Brien, and J. W. Dow, and on the shoot-off McDonald won the prize. In the third shoot the turkey went to A. Gilmore, with a score of 21.

STEIN'S EYE KEEN AT N. Y. A. C. TRAPS

He Leads Gunners in Holiday Shoot at Travers Island, with 154 Breaks.

It was the intention of the New York Athletic Club to have a 200 clay pigeon handicap shoot over its Travers Island traps yesterday. As an exceptionally large field reported for a holiday shoot the committee decided to cut the program to a race at 160 targets. Five scratch and five handicap prizes were offered, no one gunner being allowed to take more than one trophy.

Conrad Stein was the high scratch gunner of the afternoon, taking first prize with a card of 154-10-160. Then came T. A. Lawrence, A. C. Bennett, Dr. G. H. Martin, and A. L. Burns, in the order named. The high handicap gunner was W. B. Ogden. The balance of the prizes were won by R. M. Owen, G. M. Thomson, L. W. Thompson, and J. P. Donovan. The handicap prizes were won on a shootoff, in which more than a dozen gunners competed.

The day was ideal, and practically all of the nimrods had excellent scores. No less than eleven gunners had full scores of 160 targets.

SHEPPARD TRAINING ARMY.

Prominent Athlete to Coach Soldiers at Camp Shelby, in Mississippi.

Melvin W. Sheppard, who several years ago was among the world's leading half-mile runners, has taken up his duties as athletic director of Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Miss., where the Thirty-eighth Division of the United States Army is training, under command of Brig. Gen. E. H. Lewis. Sheppard is the first among the prominent athletes identified with the Amateur Athletic Union to receive such an appointment.

Sheppard has carned the reputation of being one of the best athletes ever produced in this country. He was the holder of several championship titles, including Olympic records, and also had to his credit a number of records for various distances on the track. The former Irish-American A. C. star is well equipped to discharge the duties of his new position. He formerly coached the athletes of the Sixty-ninth Regiment in this city and the Millrose A. A.

The soldiers in training at Camp Shelby are members of the National Guard units from West Virginia, Kentucky, and Indiana. Sheppard will commence his duties as director of athletics at the camp as a civilian aid, but will probably receive a commission later on.

JACK PITCAIRN IS DEAD.

Was a Picturesque Figure in Pennsylvania Billiard Circles.

With the death of Andrew Jackson Pitcairn recently a picturesque figure passed away from the billiard and baseball circles of Pennsylvania and more particularly Pittsburgh. Jack Pitcairn was known by billiard and baseball enthusiasts throughout the Keystone State. Until his retirement several years ago he had been a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and in that capacity was known by prominent men, very many of whom he could outplay at the cue game and with all of whom he could chat about the two branches of sports in which he and they were interested.

For many years Pitcairn had been a boxholder at Barney Dreyfuss's ball park, Forbes Field, and spent many a training season with the Pirates when they patronized Hot Springs. After he retired from active duty on the railroad Pitcairn devoted most of his time to attending baseball games when the Buccaneers played at home and playing billiards at Pittsburgh, where he could hold his own successfully against the best amateurs the Smoky City had to offer. Pitcairn was a nephew of the late Robert Pitcairn, superintendent of the Pittsburgh division of the Pennsylvania Railroad and later general agent of that district. At the time of the Johnstown flood Pitcairn had charge of a train running between Pittsburgh and Altoona, and when the flood swept the city performed heroically in helping in the rescue work.

Kentucky Title for Centre College.

DANVILLE, Ky., Nov. 29.—On a field ankle deep in mud, the Centre College football team established an undisputed claim to the intercollegiate championship of Kentucky here today by defeating Georgetown College 18 to 0.

YALE LOOKS TO FUTURE.

'Varsity Material Evident in This Year's Cub Eleven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29.—Yale's football season closed Saturday, and before the formal disbanding of the squads, efforts were made to map out a general policy for another year. Dr. Arthur Brides, who has been head coach of the freshman and the informal upper class elevens, has wound up the year with two teams in tip-top shape. His coaching has enabled the Athletic Association to feel reassured that a tip-top eleven can be placed on the gridiron next Fall, provided the association desires to permit a 'Varsity team, and to arrange a formal schedule.

The material which Dr. Brides turned over to the association today, on concluding the season, includes the strongest freshman eleven Yale has had, with the single exception of the team captained by Ted Coy, which included the stars Carroll Cooney, Dutch Goebel, Ted Lilley, Buster Brown, Dummy Logan, and Steve Philbin. The freshman eleven, which today met Princeton in a game attended by more than 10,000 people, and one in which Yale ruled easily favorite, was perhaps an even better balanced team than that of Coy, for it contained no weak spots.

Although the star of the backfield is John French of New York City, the former Pomfret School star, his companion back, Bob Lay, also late of Pomfret, and Don Dines, the former Andover player, compose a remarkably effective trio in ground gaining, and Jim Neville, field general, brother of Joe, whose touchdown won Yale's games from Harvard and Princeton last year, has proved first-class. He is Yale's lightest football player in many years, weighing only 140 pounds. He succeeded John Baker, another Pomfret player, only two weeks ago.

Yale's freshman line, averaging 173 pounds, is staunch and fast. Captain Acosta, centre, is Yale's most brilliant recent snap back. Welsh, the former Choate School guard, and Trippe, who came from the Hill School, form a pair of flanks who are easily 'Varsity class. Munger, late of Exeter, and Leon Walker, who was Acting Captain most of the Fall, a former Hotchkiss player, are of the rangy and fast style of tackles, although heavy and strong. Dilworth, who made a reputation at end at St. Mark's School, and Walton Scully, his companion, together with Ed Shevlin, reserve end man, comprise three excellent players for this position. Of the Informal eleven, Charley Stewart, 'Varsity substitute last year; Stradella, the basket ball star, and Hamill are three backfield players who will step directly into 'Varsity positions. Borders, an end, who punts exceptionally well, Vorys and Sidenburg, guards, are also sure of 'Varsity trials another year if there is a 'Varsity eleven.

Although all the members of both these elevens, as well as all Yale's athletic teams, belong to the college military units, not one of the freshman team is yet 20 years old, and the entire eleven will be exempt from the draft until next Fall. It is certain, however, that some will volunteer should the war last during another football season. A proposition which will be considered before another football season opens is, however, that of combining the freshman material with that of the upper class teams, the informal squad, and making the best of the situation by gridironing one team. It is by no means certain, however, that this plan will be adopted, as a strong sentiment exists at Yale in favor of the keeping the freshman squad intact.

VIOLET PASSERS AT WORK.

Big Squad Reports to Coach for Basket Ball Practice.

Practice for the basket ball squad is now under way at New York University, with forty candidates reporting. Harry Haring, coach of last year's five, again will guide the destinies of the Violet.

Only one regular from last year's 'Varsity team is back. On the other hand, the freshmen have several all-scholastic players among them. Egan, the foot-ball star and forward on the basket ball team since coming to college, may hold down his old position. Baker, a guard, and Marin, a forward, who were first-string substitutes last year and played in a number of games, are back again this year.

In looking about for a centre, Coach Haring is considering Baker, whose size and speed fit him for this position. The other positions on the team will be filled from among the many men who have responded to the call for candidates. Among the aspirants this year are Billo, Gardiner, Fernandez, all members of the football squad. These men, together with Baker and Egan, who also are on the football team, will report for the first time this week, now that the football season is over.

Of last year's crack quintet all but one would have been back had this been a normal year. Phillips, the guard, was graduated, and of the others Captain Storey is a Lieutenant at Spartanburg; Cann is an ensign in the navy; Carroll is a Lieutenant in the Aviation Corps and Mooney is in the Naval Reserve.

Coach Haring expects to have an exceptionally fast freshman team. A special schedule has been arranged for the 1921 men, and from the abundant material a fast five will be picked. The rookies have in their midst Brown of Boy's High, Lawrence Holman, a brother of Captain Holman of C. C. N. Y., and Goldstein and Schuman, all of whom are all-scholastic players.

Practices will be held four times a week. The first game with C. C. N. Y. comes on Dec. 15. Manager Robert Post has announced the following schedule for the 'Varsity:

Dec. 15, C. C. N. Y. at C. C. N. Y.; Dec. 21, Lafayette at home; Jan. 5, Rutgers at New Brunswick; Jan. 11, Amherst at home; Jan. 19, Army at West Point; Feb. 2, Navy at Annapolis; Feb. 9, Syracuse at home; Feb. 16, Colgate at home; Feb. 22, Syracuse at Syracuse; Feb. 23, Colgate at Hamilton; Feb. 27, Lehigh at South Bethlehem; March 2, Swarthmore at home.

The freshmen dates are as follows:

Dec. 15, C. C. N. Y. at C. C. N. Y.; Dec. 21, Dickinson H. S. at home; Jan. 5, Hoboken H. S. at home; Jan. 11, Webb Academy at home; Jan. 19, Army at West Point; Feb. 9, Newton H. S. at home; Feb. 13, Montclair H. S. at Montclair; Feb. 16, Morris H. S. at home.

TRAINERS AT NEW STABLES.

Leaders on Grand Circuit Change Scene of Activities.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 29.—A survey of the harness racing activities made here shows that many of the prominent Grand Circuit trainers have changed the scene of their efforts and will not be found handling the same stables next year that they were associated with during the past season.

The local reinsman, Billy Andrews, who was obliged to give up training the Pastime Stable horses in 1915 on account of severe illness, has again taken up the work where he left off and is now in harness at Thomasville, Ga. Ben White, succeeded by Andrews, will train a public stable, in addition to several of his own personal horses. Kaintuck Floyd, who has been free lancing for a couple of seasons, has signed with S. A. Fletcher of Indianapolis. This makes three trainers now for the big Hoosier Stable, Lon McDonald doing the regular teaming, with Floyd and Henry Thomas handling the colts and fillies.

Fred Egan, who has trained for J. H. Elspass of Denver for a number of years and who brought out the great pacer Braden Direct, has just closed a contract with George H. Estabrook, another Denver horseman, and Fred will be seen on the Grand Circuit in 1918 with the Colorado-owned nags. Egan relieves Ollie Graves, who was seriously injured at Columbus this year and whose health has become worse.

Walter Traynor, who has been handling the horses for the Pittsburgh matinée crowd for several years past, has signed with Henry J. Schlesinger, the Milwaukee millionaire horseman. It was first reported that Ben White would have charge of the Schlesinger Stable, but this was premature.

Jack Leonard, who last season campaigned the horses of the Old Colony Stable, at South Weymouth, Mass., and had among others the sterling trotter M. L. J., well remembered by North Randall fans, has resigned his commission there, but to date has made no arrangements for 1918.

HIGHLAND LAD WINS HANDICAP AT BOWIE

W. A. Burttschell's Three-Year-Old Runs a Fine Race Under Piloting of Stirling.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 29.—W. A. Burttschell's three-year-old colt ran one of his best races today when he captured the Thanksgiving Handicap, which was the feature of a holiday card that attracted a good crowd to the track. Highland Lad had to carry 120 pounds and received weight from only one horse in the race, J. F. Sweeney's Hauberk, a five-year-old that finished third, the pair being split by Fenmouse, owned by W. M. Jeffords. Highland Lad was prominent in the running throughout and, well handled by Stirling, won with a little to spare in 1:49, a remarkably good performance considering that the track was not at its best.

M. Shea's Tea Caddy, which has been beaten in many races in Maryland, came to life in the Sunny South Handicap at six and a half furlongs and in a rattling finish got home in front of R. F. Carman's Startling, the top weight in the handicap. Tea Caddy showed a remarkable flight of speed, the time of 1:19 1-5 clipping two-fifths of a second from the track record.

J. Mooney, a jockey who has come to the front at this meeting, had a successful day, riding three winners, J. Arthur's Edith Baumann in the second race, G. L. Goodacre's Golden Bantam in the third, and D. Cunningham's Woodtrap in the seventh.

RUSSIA AND THE ALLIES.

Illusion is the meat and drink of Socialists, above all of international Socialists. They live on it. Consequently, realities are often beyond their ken. This psychological fact must be kept in view and always in mind by the Allies in determining what measures they shall take to stay the ravages of the Bolsheviki in Petrograd, to destroy their influence and their power before they accomplish their purpose of concluding a separate peace with Germany, which would be, of course, a disaster to the Allies, but ruin and destruction for Russia.

Consideration has been given to the sending of a joint or identic note to LENINE, pointing out to him that the immediate consequence of concluding a peace between Russia and Germany would be the declaration of an embargo against Russia by all the Allies. The execution of that threat would be a very serious matter, for Russia with all her resources was, before the war, a large importer of foodstuffs and supplies of all kinds, notably of raw materials and machinery. She has stores of wheat and boundless supplies of fuel, but her transportation system is a wreck. Probably her most urgent need at the moment is locomotives and rolling stock for her railways. Moreover, General KALEDINES, the possible strong man who may yet overthrow the Bolsheviki, controls a large part of Russia's territory and is possibly in a position to defeat the efforts of the Petrograd "government," to transport the necessaries of life to the capital, to Moscow, and to the soldiers still remaining at the front. From Germany, of course, no help can be had. If the Allies should put into effect a decree of non-intercourse, the plight of Russia would be desperate. It is indeed very probable, with or without the application of such measures of constraint, that we shall hear during the coming Winter of appalling distress in Russia, of starvation, deaths from freezing and of frightful disorders that inevitably break out when intolerable privation in great communities brings into play the elemental passions of the savage.

Nevertheless, the threat of an embargo, the most vivid picture of conditions to which it would give rise in Russia, will have no effect upon the minds of LENINE, TROTZKY, and their associates. They will not believe that any harm can come to them, or to Russia through their lawless and diabolical ministrations, because they are supremely self-confident, they believe in themselves, in the path they have chosen as the only one leading to social salvation, and nothing but overthrow, subjection or the gibbet would convince them that they are going to fail. LENINE is a Marxist, a thoroughgoing internationalist. As Mr. OLGIN, who is familiar with his career, says of him, he is "a man who "sees life only from the angle of his "own ideas." While he declares that "if the proletariat of other countries "does not support us, nothing will "come of our revolution," still he believes that the "proletariat" of Great Britain, of France, and of the United States will force their Governments to accept the Bolshevist plan of an armistice and negotiations for an immediate peace. Doubtless we shall hear further from our International Socialists in this country, who will attempt a response to his appeals, but only the most ignorant of them can fail to see the fate that awaits them if they attempt any unlawful propaganda. Buoyed up by the hope of support from the proletariat in other countries, even in Germany, LENINE would contemptuously dismiss any warning of the penalties he would incur by persisting in his treason to Russia and to the Allies.

Nor will the Allies be able to make any headway by representations to the masses of the Russian people, or to the soldiers of the Russian army. For one thing, they cannot reach them. LENINE and his Socialist accomplices in Petrograd have filled the minds of their proletariat with ideas that no appeal, no argument, will dislodge, ideas that will yield only to hard experience of realities. In its preachments and propaganda, socialism has always shown extraordinary skill and a clear understanding of the nature of the common man. Ignorance is its chosen field and it knows the qualities of that soil. It works always in the line of natural inclination, it pictures forth as things to be attained through socialism the very things its victims yearn for, and not only its victims but practically all men, too—ease and comfort. It would redistribute wealth, it would lift up the poor by giving them the enjoyment of what the rich have won. The ignorant do not perceive that socialism is a program of unattainable blessings, the deluded faithful think only of the little work, the shorter hours, the greater freedom and the new riches they will enjoy in a socialistic state. LENINE, and even the Socialists who before him assumed to be the Government of Russia, have diligently pursued that policy. The soldiers at the front were worn and tired of fighting, they promised them immediate peace. The army was largely made up of peasants, and the dream of the Russian peasant always has been possession of land. So the Socialists promised them that the estates of the landholders would be divided among the peasants. It was an irresistible appeal, it disorganized the army; and when to that was added the "democratization" of the army, the putting to a vote of the soldiers of the question whether orders should be obeyed, the establishment of regimental committees who should elect the officers, discipline was at an end and the Russian army was destroyed.

The appeal of the Socialists to the army, and in a large degree to the peasants, no arguments or representations can meet or counteract. Self-interest, as limited understanding sees self-interest, has been powerfully enlisted on the side of the Bolsheviki. The Allies cannot reach the minds of the army or of the peasants, they cannot convince the minds or arouse the apprehensions of LENINE, of TROTZKY and the other Socialist "Commissaries" of Petrograd. Reason will not save Russia. There is but one salvation for her, but one way in which she can be saved from herself and from Germany, it is force, and Russian force arising from the body of Russian society, dethroning the Socialist Government, which is a greater despot than ever the Czar dared to be, and reasserting the control of the sober, sane, worthy part of the Russian people over their own affairs and their destiny. KALEDINES may be the man, or it may be some one among the group who are reported to be assembling around him, not enemies of the revolution, but enlightened friends of Russian freedom. It is only out of Russia itself that the saving help can come, and if the Allies are to exercise any influence there, it will be effective only if it take the form of encouragement to some man or group of men who give promise of being able to restore the reign of order and sanity.

THE I. AND R. IN MASSACHUSETTS

Massachusetts is a tough old tree to graft with the Initiative and Referendum, but if her Constitutional Convention has its way, that Golden Bough of "direct government" will be imposed on that gnarled refractory stock. By a vote of 163 to 125 the convention has adopted the I. and R. amendment. The courts are kindly exempted from direct action. This triumph of the Friends of the People is due, we believe, not to the convincing arguments made for this noble palladium of "Cyclone" DAVIS, but to the fact that it had a solid block of picked votes, pledged beforehand, unamenable to reason, bound to plump their Ayes for the measure. There has been great talk about it. But the faithful band, true to "careless pledges carefully obtained," didn't have to be distracted by logic or eloquence.

It is a canny way of running a constitutional convention. Will the voters of Massachusetts approve at the polls the boon that has been so cleverly offered to them?

We wonder what old Chief Justice SHAW or DANIEL WEBSTER, what EBENEZER ROCKWOOD HOAR or RICHARD OLNEY would think of the new Massachusetts? Would a proceeding de lunatico inquirendo be their first suggestion?

GERMANY FAILS IN ITALY.

The submarine is failing, the offensive against Italy is failing. It will be long before the submarine is under control, but Italy is already saved. General MAURICE's declaration on that point may be accepted. He speaks for the British General Staff, not merely expressing his own opinions when he says, "It is now time to say "definitely that the crisis in Italy is "passed." The submarine was advertised as Germany's "last throw," but later she saw an unexpected opening in Italy and found she had a card to play there. Now that they are both definitely seen to be failures, what will Germany do next? The truth is that her real last card is the peace propaganda she is furiously working up in the allied countries, and all she can do now is to try to hold on until that poisonous leaven works. She has no more purely military cards left.

She did not, as was supposed in the first moment of horrid surprise, mass a great army against the Italians. She sent a relatively small force, and she has not been able to expand it. The British and French offensives explain the reason of that. In spite of all that has been going on in Russia, she has not dared to leave that front unguarded. She knows well that the madhouse in Petrograd cannot so far commit Russia as to make safe a denudation of the eastern front, though she is negotiating with the inmates in the desperate hope that she can widen their influence among their countrymen to the point where it will enable her to release more troops. But for the present she has to let the Italian end of the western front go without reinforcement because she has not the men to send.

The peace propaganda was responsible for the Italian defeat. She worked upon the more ignorant of the Italian soldiers until they believed her assurances that if they would cease to fire upon their Austrian brothers universal peace would come. Then, when they ceased to fire, she mowed them down and drove through them to the plains. But one lesson of that kind is enough, and it will be a century before the most ignorant Italian trusts in German faith again. Her only chance to enforce her victory lay in breaking down the resistance which the Italians presented to her at the Piave before the British and French could get there. If she had been able to concentrate an immense mass of troops there, she would have had a different kind of opportunity, but HAIG was seeing to that.

The British and French are there. The gallant Italians have performed their difficult task of holding out in the face of forces that, on that battle line, were superior to theirs, and now the Germans and Austrians cannot break through. Before long the question will be different. It will be whether the Germans and Austrians can hold out against the Italians, British, and French. If they cannot, they will have to face the prospect of retreating over the Alps in Winter. There is the possibility of a German debacle there.

Unless there is some other army that can be seduced and betrayed by peace propaganda, the Italian failure should mark the end of Germany's attempts to break the iron ring. The submarine is still inflicting heavy loss on the Allies, but its power is steadily diminishing, and the fear that it could force an end to the war is gone forever. There is nothing, then, for Germany to do but hold her lines as best she can, and meanwhile make use of all the forces of ignorance and folly and treason in the different allied countries to see if somewhere her peace propaganda may not be able to produce results. Barring this, her real last card, the Allies have nothing between them and victory except the necessary effort and time.

SPEAKER CLARK AND SENATOR REED.

Speaker CLARK and Senator REED are of that body of lawmakers to which the country has a right to look for leadership and instruction. The disappointment of the country with their class is shown by the position of both in yesterday's news. Speaker CLARK, coming from the district which is most backward in support of the Liberty loans, is shown to have been rancorous and unjust in his aspersions upon the district which leads all others in the devotion of its resources to national uses. Nothing can be added to the remarks of Federal Reserve Bank Governor STRONG. He shows indisputably that the Speaker of the House of Representatives had no basis for his charges that New York financiers of national repute are "traitors," and the "spiritual descendants" of the hated traitors of other days. Governor STRONG says that no harm was done by the Speaker, because his charges were so false. That can be true only if the Speaker's retraction reaches all who read and believed it. His retraction in this correspondence is, in form, complete. But has the Speaker ever withdrawn before an audience what he asserted in that manner? Has he addressed to his constituents regrets that their representative is so unrepresentative, and that they are so unresponsive to his appeals to their sense of duty to the country? In proportion that the Speaker's predicament is appreciated there will be discouragement to others to offend in like manner.

Senator REED comes from the Speaker's State, which has reconsidered its position on the railroad problem. But Senator REED is as unreconstructed in his views as the Speaker. He still thinks that the railways are to blame for their deficiencies. Yet their efficiency was never so great, despite their hindrances by the lawmakers of whom the Senator is one. Ancient errors of lawmaking may be overlooked. But what shall be said of those Congressmen who passed the Adamson act without instructions to the Interstate Commerce Commission to give assistance to the railways in carrying the burdens the act imposed upon them?

The Commission had complained that its mandate was merely to regulate rates, and that it was the duty of Congress to make decisions upon the policy of keeping the railways equal to their duties. Now there is another and greater demand, and the same situation exists in greater urgency. But Senator REED betrays no perception that he and his associates in Congress are in any way to blame. He wants to know how long the people will "tolerate" the deficiencies of the railways, and warns them to mend their ways lest the ownership and management of their properties be taken over by those unequal even to the easier task of telling the railways what to do.

It is necessary to tell the Senator that there is more need of indulgence toward the lawmakers than toward the railways. Congress has as much need to reconsider its position as any of those in any degree responsible for hampering the railways in their work. The country has not failed to remark that unwise regulation has brought the railways into such a state that public money is necessary for their relief at a time when it is least convenient to give it, and when the need is less for money than for facilities which the money ought to have bought long ago. The shippers whose business is now turned away, or carried slowly, are not blaming the railways so much as they were. They have forgotten all about the rate question. They want transportation, and they are beginning to see who is responsible for their not getting it. In public appreciation the performance and temper of the railways now are better than those of their rulers and tormentors. Congress has its work to do as well as the railways.

MR. LA FOLLETTE.

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, which has been investigating without excessive enthusiasm Senator LA FOLLETTE's speech at St. Paul in September, is to reassemble next Monday and to consider plans for future hearings. It seems to be the common Washington opinion that future hearings will not be many, if, indeed, there is more than one. It is impossible that Mr. BRYAN should not appear before the committee to deal with this extraordinary statement made by Mr. LA FOLLETTE:

> Four days before the Lusitania sailed President WILSON was warned in person by Secretary of State BRYAN that the Lusitania had 6,000,000 pounds of ammunition on board, besides explosives, and that the passengers who proposed to sail on that vessel were sailing in violation of a statute of this country that no passengers shall sail or travel upon a railroad train or upon a vessel which carries dangerous explosives. And Mr. BRYAN appealed to President WILSON to stop passengers from sailing on the Lusitania. I am giving you some history that maybe has not come to you heretofore.

As to that "history," Mr. BRYAN owes it to his own reputation, to the country, to speak before the committee. There are other unpleasant passages in the speech, but the committee and the country may consent to let them alone if Mr. LA FOLLETTE's statement in the current number of his magazine means to Mr. LA FOLLETTE what it means to most of us:

> There is no difference in Congress about supporting the war until honorable peace may be obtained.

We are ready to assume, until the contrary is proved, if it is to be proved by Mr. LA FOLLETTE's future course, that his understanding of "an honorable peace" is the same as that of the majority of his countrymen.

A GERMAN VIEW OF THE TANKS.

It is said that the Germans have been experimenting with "tanks," or landships, which are solely offensive machines of war. How terribly effective they would have been in Mackensen's campaigns against the badly equipped Russians in Galicia and the half-starved and war-worn Serbians! To use such monsters on the western front successfully the Germans would need not only great numbers of them but an improved type. It is doubtful if they can beat the British at this game, for Colonel SWINTON, the originator or adapter, is prolific in ideas; his latest "tanks" have eclipsed the crude machines first used. Besides, the overtaking of the British in the new tactics would be a stern chase, probably doomed to failure.

No doubt the field correspondent of the Cologne Volkszeitung, who comments upon what he calls "The Tank Battle of Cambrai," reflects staff judgment upon the performance of the gigantic war tractors. "What the Entente," he says, "has so far not "been able to accomplish by artillery "fire—that is, to break through on our "front—was achieved on the Cambrai "front with the aid of tanks." This is somewhat disingenuous, for the British have not infrequently broken through the German front with massed and long-continued heavy gunfire, making a wide thoroughfare for the infantry; but frankness cannot be expected in the bitterness of defeat by such a ruse as HAIG employed in a manner so decisive. Herr KATSCH goes on to say that "the approach of "the tanks through the mist and the "smoke of bursting shells was difficult "to observe." He admits that the Germans were completely surprised. The tanks had been used before in limited numbers to go ahead with the infantry after enemy trenches had been knocked to pieces by artillery fire, but the monsters had to contend with shells big enough to ditch them.

It may be assumed that no surprise attack will be possible again unless the tanks are favored by thick weather after a period of inactivity; indeed, it is hardly to be supposed that the Germans will fail to take precautions against such an attack. At the same time, a multiplication of tanks would give the British such a tactical advantage that the time might come when weather conditions could be safely disregarded.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

New Schools Compared With Old.

A large amount of deep thinking, with not a little of anxious questioning, is in progress among the many, many people who have had opportunity and occasion of late to note the amazing changes, every one of them obviously for the better, that are effected in young men by a few months, often by a few weeks, in one of the military training camps. There is nobody, now, who has not seen at least one more or less awkward and slouchy youngster thus turned into a fine, upstanding specimen of humanity, with the quick, decisive movements that come from good health and abundant vitality, and in almost every case a little questioning reveals that the improvement has been as much mental as physical.

These boys are now thinking about large things instead of small ones—they have acquired ideals and enthusiasm that either were lacking before or were unrealized and unexpressed; artificial distinctions and false notions as to what constitutes superiority and inferiority have in great measure disappeared from their minds, and they have gained entirely new and vastly higher standards by which to estimate success and failure in life. They appreciate their responsibilities as never before, and they have learned that personal sacrifices for the common weal can give more happiness than the winning of any kind of selfish profit.

Apparently these camps are better schools for body and brain than any we have had before. Certainly no such marked alterations can be seen as soon, or even ever, in the boys that go to college, no matter how much attention the college gives to athletics. And yet nothing is done at the camps that could not always have been done wherever "education" is offered, whether free or for a price. The drillmasters have no secret methods and they have made no new discoveries.

None of us is ready to admit that for a nation war is preferable to peace, or that the soldier is necessarily the highest type of manhood, but there is no denying that, in some most important respects, war is doing for these young men what peace did not do for them, and why it did not do all this and more is a question that again and again forces itself on the attention of the thoughtful. Our educational authorities would do well to take that question under instant attention and have their answer ready the moment the war is over, or before.

Accusation Brought Vindication.

Secretary BAKER's flat denial that any army officers have been ordered to cooperate with Mrs. HUMISTON in her efforts to establish the truth of her charges as to moral conditions at the training camps is not proof that none of them have been or are paying any attention to her accusations. That some of them, including General BELL, took instant and proper steps to settle the issue as soon as she raised it is well known. There is no excuse, however, now that the Secretary has spoken, for thinking, or even for suspecting, that any need for accepting her services as a detective was found by the military authorities as a result of examining what she offered as "evidence," or for supposing that between her and the army officers exists any other or nearer relation than is the one stated by Commissioner WOODS as existing between her and the police.

Having learned, the Commissioner said, that the notoriety achieved by Mrs. HUMISTON was bringing to her written and other complaints that did not reach himself, he had assigned certain members of his force to the duty of seeing what basis there might be in any such communications that she chose to turn over to them for action. That is very different from joining in her campaign, either as principal or auxiliary, and it does not give to her any official standing or to her charges any official corroboration.

Of desire to be harsh or unjust to a woman of intentions presumably good there is and should be none. The admitted excellence of her purposes, however, in no way mitigates the fact that, yielding to what the psychologists probably would call an obsession or compulsive neurosis, Mrs. HUMISTON has made assertions of which the best to be said is that they are wild exaggerations of evils which at the camps have been brought down to what human nature makes an irreducible minimum. To say only this best, however, would be stretching charity too far, for such exaggerations are unpardonable on any other ground than mental irresponsibility, and that cannot be claimed in Mrs. HUMISTON's behalf.

Her attempt to manufacture evidence was in every way reprehensible and repulsive, and even if the plan had been a success, instead of the immediate failure it was, it would have proved next to nothing—certainly not that Camp Upton is the sink of iniquity which everybody familiar with conditions there knows it is not.

His Fears Seem Needless.

A sober-minded business man familiar with large affairs and of demonstrated competence to deal with them has given something of a claim for serious attention to the Long Island genius who for several years has been asserting the power to make out of water, at a cost of a cent or two a gallon, a fuel as good as gasoline. This the business man has done by bringing in a real court a real action to prevent the genius from disclosing to our national enemies the formula which, if it does meet the pragmatic test, certainly would rank near the very top of scientific achievements and be to those enemies of almost incalculable value.

In spite, however, of the warning not to talk about impossibilities that lies in a precautionary measure of this highly respectable provenience, the impulse to talk of nothing less than impossibilities remains a strong one. Examination of such evidence as is revealed by the case as it stands results in conviction of only one thing—that a liquid prepared by the Long Islander, and made by adding to water nobody but himself knows what, will supply for an automobile about the same amount of energy as can be obtained from about the same amount of gasoline. Several disinterested experts so asseverate, and there is no excuse for doubting them, but, after accepting their statement, further reflection discloses that the vital question of cost has not been answered or even approached by anybody except the one man to whom the formula is known.

He may be the most truthful man in the world, and then again he may not be. If he is a scientist, he knows that in science nobody's word is ever taken for anything—that full disclosure and demonstration are always expected and demanded, even from the leading lights and highest authorities.

That water can be burned, or rather that either of its elements, if separated by any one of several processes, will burn in the other, with an incidental freeing of much energy, is a secret of Punchinello, but only a like concealment veils the fact that there is loss of power, not gain, in combustion thus produced. For the present, therefore, the judicious will let the sober-minded business man do the worrying about the help that Germany can get from anything that the Long Island man tells her about water as fuel. Perhaps the judicious will regret their present calmness later, but if that prospect were the worst of our troubles, how happy we would be!

ART NOTES.

Van Horne Collection Not to be Sold—The New Exhibitions.

Concerning the report that Sir William Van Horne's art collection was presently to be sold, R. B. Van Horne writes that Sir William's family have no intention of disposing of the collection now or at any time in the future, and that in all probability the collection will never be broken up, constantly recurring rumors to the contrary notwithstanding.

New Sculpture.

The current exhibition at the Sculptors' Gallery mingles paintings and sculpture of many degrees of interest. There are a few things that capture the attention at once. A fine "Femme se regardant dans l'eau" by Jane Poupelet is much more than clever. The splendid modeling of the outstretched leg in itself challenges contemporary sculpture to do better. There is the sense of reserve vitality, of powerful muscles and healthy flesh, and also the sense of a lack of self-consciousness, a natural freedom and simplicity, seldom met in the complicated modern product.

Simplicity also is the note in the two statues by Edith Woodman Burroughs, but it is more the simplicity of childhood as fits the subjects, "Youth" and "The Threshold." There is no striving for effect, nor is there the resolution of a thousand physical and mental experiences in one synthetic expression. Elie Nadelman's "Child's Head" is a more charming creation than the somewhat mannered, extremely knowing examples of his work now on view at another gallery. Stirling Calder's well-known "Man Cub" is here and a handsome recumbent nude which he calls "A Woman" and which shows the athletic structure of the woman of the moment. Alfeo Faggi's "St. Francis" is an inexpressive but decorative bit of pleasant line work. John Gregory's panel of "Wine, Woman, and Song," partly finished; Malvina Hoffman's "Shivering Girl," playful things by E. O. de Rosales, ceramics by Frederick Roth, a labor subject by Mahonri Young, a bas-relief by Bruno Louis Zimm, a fountain figure by Albin Polasek, a wood carving by Robert Larrent, Robert Aitken's "A Creature of God," and Beniamino Bufano's "Sister Mahi" are other sculptures shown. The head of Abraham Lincoln by George Grey Barnard has the inner room to itself and is seen to admirable advantage there.

Drawings and Posters.

At the Greenwich Village Inn today and tomorrow are drawings and posters by Norman Jacobsen, an artist from Wyoming who was a cowpuncher until he was 21, and who now practices a peculiarly fanciful and ornamental art of highly sophisticated suggestion. Technically, the work is not of the highest order. One has only to recall the modern British school of book illustration and decoration to realize that Mr. Jacobsen belongs to a less significant and less intellectually brilliant group. Many of the small designs involving children and animals are, however, interesting and vivacious.

Landscapes by John Folinsbee.

At the Ferargil Gallery John Folinsbee is showing until Dec. 8 a group of characteristic landscapes. Mr. Folinsbee has his own manner of putting paint on canvas, and the square brush work is somewhat schematic in such canvases as "The Toll Bridge by Moonlight" and "The Farmhouse." There is a suggestion of a plaid in the weaving of the surface that appears only here and there wherever a considerable space is covered by a comparatively flat tone. In the skies this effect also is noticeable, as though the picture were made with threads upon a warp that shows through the woof. "The Harbor" is one of the fine things in the exhibition and "Snow and Ice" is another. In each the composition is full of interest without overcrowding and the color is quiet without dullness.

The Spirit of the Training Camp.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just read the splendid article in THE SUNDAY TIMES by "An Unsuccessful Candidate," which I think is the biggest, finest thing I have ever read. There is more real inspiration and true patriotism in that article, I am sure, than could be given by many men who have won commissions, in that his loss may mean a gain to many, for how could one read what this man has written about his defeat, and not be stirred to bigger, nobler things?

I am the wife of "a successful candidate," and to say I am proud of what my husband has done, the sacrifices he has made, etc., very poorly expresses my feelings, but had he been unsuccessful and taken his defeat as this man has done, I would be more proud than had he won the highest honor our country could bestow. If this is the spirit the training camps are bringing out in our men, long may we have them. M. D. R.

GENERAL BYNG USES HIS CAVALRY.

I've fought the Hun dismounted, yes, more often than I've counted,
I've trotted with the Tommies in the line,
But what of "Boots and Saddles," and the nag a trooper straddles—
Must I always foot it eastward to the Rhine?

I've strafed Fritz with a mortar, as a proper gunner oughter,
Oh, I've knocked his blooming trench
about his ears,
But, say, I want a battle where the
sabres flash and rattle,
And I want to hear the calls a trooper hears.

I've tooled a tank in action, and it has its own attraction,
When it's crawling on and blighting
far and wide,
But oh, I miss the swaying of a wild
war stallion, neighing,
As he takes the open country in his stride!

. . . .

What's that the bugle's saying? "Boots and Saddles!" Oh, I'm praying
That they really mean to turn us loose
again,
It may be but rehearsing and I'm praying and I'm cursing—
No! it's "Hurry, hurry, hurry, hurry, men!"

Old horse, you piebald beauty, this is mighty welcome duty,
Do you hear this bit of steel stuff
whirr and sing?
They say the Hun's retreating, but he needs another beating
And we're to do our very best for Biff
Bang Byng!

A PEACE DICTATED IN THE FIELD.

Thus the Allies Might Maintain Unity and Gain the Full Fruits of Victory.

By CARMAN F. RANDOLPH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Despite its potential energy and primarily for lack of co-ordinate purpose and action—so marked in Germany's campaign—the Great Alliance drifts toward the bare victory that meanly rewards the least distressed of weary belligerents. Indeed, recalling Napoleon's dexterous mobilization of former enemies, it is not unreasonable to fear a reinforcement of the Teuton army by Poles and Russians that would extend the stronghold in the east and make the western wall adamant. Then would autocracy, from impregnable works, jeer at a democratic horde, superior in numbers and resources, equal in valor, but unable to marshal its power. Is not democracy worth fighting for? Then let it compose international jealousies, temper national ambitions, repress disloyalties and even more threatening follies and unite to whip Prussia.

The Great Alliance must cure its now palpable weakness by setting up leadership and following it. I do not identify "leadership." Conviction of its need bids fair to develop its form and spirit. Let the participation of the United States in leadership be strong, tactful, supporting the territorial objectives of our comrades so far as they are essentially just and will contribute to the destruction of the Prussian stronghold.

Looking behind the lines, the leadership will frankly realize that the solidarity of the Great Alliance, already marred by Russia's weakness, is threatened by further dangers which only prescient and stern co-ordination can avert.

Looking "over the top," leadership will determine a supreme military objective. However amazing the development of the engines of war, however radical the changes in organization and tactics, grand strategy still presents the only assurance of conquest—deliver overwhelming force at the enemy's heart. The heart of the Prussian "State" is on the further bank of the Rhine. Great leadership will carry our arms over the river. Why not to the keep of the castle, coal and iron Krupp-Westphalia?

Every worthy aim of the Great Alliance may be attained or put in train by a peace dictated on Prussian soil. Otherwise we shall fall short. For example, our arms cannot, on Polish soil, free Poland, nor, on Russian soil, aid the distracted country even to re-form its defenses. And if Prussia be allowed to devour Eastern Europe and the vast spaces of Russia in Asia, no "rectification of frontiers" on the west nor appropriations of African forests and Pacific islands will dim the maleficent splendor of Greatest Germany. Only on Prussian soil can the Great Alliance surely prevent the world-menacing triumph of Prussia in the east. Only there can it secure, in reasonable measure, the great purposes of its effort.

Regarding these purposes the leadership will bring about an agreement sufficiently definite and substantial to be executed on the very day of the military decision. For on this day the solidarity of the Allies, painfully achieved, will touch high water mark. The next day will bring indications of the ebb for which German diplomacy is waiting in the not desperate hope that losses in the field may be recouped at the table. Dreading German diplomacy, not despising it, the leadership will forestall its disintegrating effort by broadly agreeing upon peace conditions.

Considering these conditions, the leadership will distinguish the terms on which the Allies will cease fighting, not merely from supplementary arrangements necessarily postponed to the definitive treaty of peace, but from those expectations of a better order in the world which, above all else, inspire our arms.

Let dictation of terms in the field precede discussion in council—perhaps in a congress—of such matters as world courts, reductions of armament, labor problems, &c. Let hostilities cease only upon the actual accomplishment of certain things and, despising German promises, a taking of territorial security for the accomplishment of certain other things.

The Allies, demolishing the Prussian "State" on the day of triumph, will clear the ground for an effective consideration of great problems following the war.

RUSSIA'S STRONG MAN.

From One Who Believes He Will Soon Appear.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article, "Outside the Pale," expresses the truth, and nothing but the truth, about Russia, and it gladdens my heart to see again the name of Professor Milukoff, the only great and big-minded man that had anything to do with that ill-timed revolution of March, 1917. (I shall ever share the views of the former Emperor that you cannot change the fundamental law of an empire during a war like this and remain loyal to your allies, hence ill-timed in my estimation.) In any case, Professor Milukoff was the only man associated with it who was qualified to lead Russia. With this wise and able statesman, Russia might have continued on, a loyal and formidable ally. He would never have resorted to such petty despicableness as banishing one of the greatest Generals this war has produced, the Grand Duke Nicholas. Professor Milukoff would have reorganized the army, not disorganized it. Never for one minute has Professor Milukoff held the revolution above honor and loyalty to Russia's allies on the west, and he, like every great Russian, appreciated the efforts of the colonials, who gladly gave up their lives that Russia might once again possess the key to her house, Constantinople. The lonely graves in far-away Gallipoli have not been forgotten by the true Russians.

It is indeed heartbreaking that the power to rule should have fallen to such a vacillating politician as I know Alexander Kerensky to be. Two years ago this same Kerensky proposed in the Duma the precise separate peace which Germany talks of today.

Now that his day is done, I no longer despair for Russia. The Bolsheviki mob will be short-lived. Its days are numbered. To me the Kerensky peril was more acute. The strong man on horseback, prophesied by THE NEW YORK TIMES some time ago, can now be seen on the horizon. Light is dawning on Russia. His name I shall not mention, but associated with this great leader destined to be the savior of Russia will, no doubt, be Professor Milukoff, the Cossack Generals Kornlloff and Kaledines, and, I hope, Sergius Sazonoff. Russia should become a constitutional monarchy, and she is destined to become this. Her masses are no more ready for a republic today than in 1906 were they ready for the first Duma.

Schierbrand's Austria-Hungary.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Thanking you for the very fair review of my latest book, "Austria-Hungary, the Polyglot Empire," in Sunday's issue, kindly grant me space to reply to an attack of equal length on the same book in your today's issue.

As to Mr. Teodoroff's personalities, I will content myself by saying that I am probably as good an American as he may be and that I am no "Herr Professor" at all, as he would make me appear, and have never claimed to be.

Regarding my book, though, he shows plainly that he has not read it at all; he may have fluttered its pages, and then, as is a practice much in vogue, picked out a few disjointed paragraphs and made them stand for the whole. For, as your own review pointed out, and as any unbiased critic must admit, my book is anything rather than a glorification of Austria-Hungary.

In it I go at length and in detail into the Hungarian system of Magyarizing the Slav population of Hungary and condemn it. The passage from my book quoted on this theme means anything rather than approval—in fact, the direct opposite.

But when Mr. Teodoroff sets out to take me to task for the imaginary crime of indorsing the Austro-Hungarian methods of treating their war prisoners of Russian, Serbian, and Italian stock, he trifles with the truth. On the contrary, I dwell in the book on the almost unanimous plaints of the Russian prisoners as to their food rations and other things.

Mr. Teodoroff singles out the unfortunate case of his brother. As to the prevalence of consumption and other diseases among the Russian prisoners, the Austrian doctors in the camps stated that a large proportion of these had brought the seeds of insidious complaints with them into the army, being enrolled by the brutish Czaristic Government against all reason and humanity.

Mr. Teodoroff waxes eloquent at my expense and sarcastic in touching on points which I myself have never made in the book. I should advise him to read the whole of it; that might cure his spleen. If I pride myself on anything in this book it is my absolute impartiality in treating the complicated race problem in Austria-Hungary.

A CHINESE VIEW.

Opposition to American Co-operation with Japan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There has just arrived in New York a Japanese Economic and Finance Commission, which expects to stay here for several months, making headquarters in New York and Washington.

The principal purpose of the mission, according to Baron Megata, the head of the mission, stated while he was at Washington, "is to broaden commercial relations between the United States and Japan and to increase trade after the war." If this is going to be the purpose of the mission, we wish the United States and Japan every success in the present conferences and future commerce. But if the commission comes to invite the American bankers to co-operate with them in Japan's self-planned and aggressive development of China, we will invariably be against any co-operation of this sort. The American co-operation will be neither morally right to China, nor economically advantageous to the United States in the long run.

An American-Japanese co-operation will be unjust to China and unworthy of the land of liberty on account of the Japanese motive. The only aim of Japan, unfortunately, is to exploit China. The newspapers and magazines in Japan talk almost nothing else except suggesting all kinds of aggressive plans toward China. Even a graduate Japanese student in public law in New York had the courage to tell more than one of our Chinese students that in the expansion of Japan she must develop the natural resources of China. Our Japanese friend was somewhat taken aback when he was reminded in plain English that it was the Chinese natural resources that he was talking about, and that in the development of such resources China, and not Japan, is going to run the business.

This country may not prevent Japan from exploiting China, but she and her people can at least refrain from helping Japan to exploit China. We lay our case before our American friends and we expect fair play.

When we urge the American bankers not to co-operate with Japan to develop China, we do not want the American bankers to understand that we are excluding them from investment and industrial enterprises in China. On the other hand, we welcome them; we welcome them because the United States is the only genuine friend we have. Somehow the United States has the good-will of China, and this good-will will be an invaluable asset to the United States if she will only make use of it. The modern corporations in China are simply ready with both arms stretched to get American capital, although our great economic resources have as yet failed to appeal to American capital to any large extent.

It is not only unjust to China, unnecessary to the United States, and a plan that will not meet the approval of the American Government, for the bankers in this country to co-operate with Japan in the development of China, but such co-operation is sure to result in commercial disaster for the United States. If the United States is going to co-operate with Japan, she will not only lose our good-will, but she surely will share a great part of China's hate for Japan. As we are looking forward to the time when we will have the greater part of the world's commerce between our two great republics on the Pacific, we do not wish to lose our mutual good-will. Public Sentiment vs. Barnard.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A discouraging feature of the proposed placing of the Barnard "Lincoln" in London is the fact that Sir Alfred Mond, Commissioner of Works, holding firmly to the adage that a gift horse should not be looked in the mouth, declines to be put in the position of sitting in judgment on the "public sentiment in America" which is responsible for the gift in question.

But "public sentiment" has never approved this particular work of art. The American "Hundred Years of Peace" Committee promised to give a statue of Lincoln to London, the understanding being that it was to be a replica of the St. Gaudens monument. When it appeared that the necessary funds could not be raised, the committee's representative asked Charles P. Taft, who had given the Barnard statue to Cincinnati, to furnish a replica for London, and got a favorable and generous reply. There the matter stands.

Unless Mr. Taft can be induced to cancel his consent or London can be prevailed upon to ignore a "public sentiment" which does not exist in connection with Mr. Barnard's work, the truth as to a great man's appearance and attributes is to be perverted in the minds of every Londoner and visitor to London in the next 500 or 1,000 years.

CROWD AT HERO LAND BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Navy Day, Combined with Thanksgiving, Brings Great Throng to Bazaar.

ALL FREE TO ENLISTED MEN

Sir Johnston Forbes Robertson Says Our Entry Into War Insured British Friendship.

Thanksgiving Day was Navy Day at Hero Land. The holiday, and the celebration in honor of the bluejackets broke the records for attendance at the big war benefit. The crowd in the afternoon was as large as the previous crowds for the evening, and at night the Grand Central Palace was filled with a great gathering, in which were several thousand sailors of the United States, as well as French and British sailors.

Sailors from the Brooklyn Navy Yard took a prominent part in the programs of both afternoon and evening. Came to watch them many of the men of the United States fighting forces. Admission to everything was free to soldiers and sailors, and many of those in the city for Thanksgiving leave went to the bazaar. The Red Cross fed several hundred free of charge in the Red Cross Tea Room. Admiral Usher, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, attended the bazaar with an escort of 300 bluejackets. These men took part in drills in the Great Ball Room, and entertained large crowds with sports in which sailors indulge. There were a number of boxing matches, and not the least interest was shown in a pie-eating contest, in which the winning sailor "put away" fourteen pies.

The holiday spirit prevailed at the bazaar and the scene was the liveliest of any evening of Hero Land. A "jazz" band helped the regular orchestra to furnish music for dancing. There were many dinner parties in the Café de Paris, run by Delmonico's; the Cheshire Cheese, conducted by Keen's Chop House; the Golden West Cabaret, run by the Hotel Knickerbocker; the Italian and the other restaurants connected with the bazaar. Among the actors who took part in the evening program were Julian Eltinge and Raymond Hitchcock.

Praise for American Soldiers.

In the lecture hall of the British Government's exhibit the speakers were Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Captain Richard Haigh of the British Army.

"When I saw your Star-Spangled Banner nobly carried down the streets of dear old London," said Sir Johnston, who has just come from England. "I knew that my fondest dream was realized—that all chance of ill-feeling between your country and mine had vanished. Your stalwart soldiers, too, seemed to realize that the two great English-speaking nations were united.

"As for my profession, I wish to state that there are more actors, in proportion, wearing the English uniform than of any other profession. The actresses, too, are doing their bit as nurses and in giving entertainments. The doctors have declared that the hours of revelry given by the actors are as valuable in making well the wounded as medicine and surgery."

The soldiers and sailors paid especial attention to the British tank and the Hindenberg trench. Time after time the doors to the tank inclosure had to be closed because of the crowds.

While most of the exhibits at the booths naturally become smaller through the constant sales, there is one booth the stock of which constantly increases—that is, the Silhouette Booth, in charge of Miss Beatrix Sherman, assisted by Miss Pearl White, the motion-picture actress. Practically every person of national prominence who has visited the bazaar has had his or her silhouette made by Miss Sherman, the proceeds going for allied relief. In front of the booth is a silhouette of President Wilson made by Miss Sherman in the White House.

Prominent Persons Attend.

Among the prominent persons seen in the cafes and about the booths last night were Mrs. Franklin Farrell, Ensign and Mrs. Franklin Farrell, Jr., Miss Estelle Farrell, Mr. and Mrs. Payne Thompson, Marquis and Marquise de Polignac, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Post, Louis Boissevain, Brig. Gen. W. A. White, Mr. and Mrs. John Magee, Captain and Mrs. William Whitehouse, Mrs. Frederick Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McKeever, Mrs. Samuel Barlow, Major C. Brooman-White, Lady Lister-Kaye, Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar, Mrs. Charles H. Marshall, Mrs. William Astor Chanler, Mr. and Mrs. George Whigham, Mrs. Benjamin B. Tilt, Mrs. J. Elliott Lanstaff, Mr. and Mrs. Jules S. Bache.

Mrs. Mary Hatch Williard, Mrs. Morris Brown, Mr and Mrs. Benjamin Guinness, Mrs. Frederick H. Watriss, Mr. and Mrs. J. Sullivan Smithe, Miss Margaret Hawkesworth, Mrs. J. H. Sears, the Countess of Kingston, Mme. Slavko Grouitch, Mrs. Arthur Bernay, Miss Frances Henry, Miss Eulalia Garrison, Mrs. T. D. M. Cardozo, Mrs. W. W. Fitzhugh, Mrs. James Kidder, Mrs. Ethel Burke Lewis, Mrs. Lewis S. Stillwell, Mrs. Charles A. Van Rensselaer, Miss Joan Whitridge, Miss Marjory Metcalf, Mrs. Albert Kilt, Augustus W. Kelley, Miss Christine Kelley, Mrs. Charles Greenough, Mrs. Crosby Thompson, Mrs. C. Clive Bayley, Miss Adah Marks, Miss Elizabeth O'Connor, Mrs. Fletcher Dexter, Mrs. Nelson H. Henry, Mrs. Maude Canfield, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Herford, Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, and Mrs. Charlotte K. Harding.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and Miss Mary Hoyt Wiborg entertained at a dinner party at the Cheshire Cheese. Among those dining in the Italian restaurant were Lord and Lady Aberdeen, Lord Innes-Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Delano, Mrs. John A. Black, William H. Crocker, Consul General and Mme. Poccardi, Mr. and Mrs. Harry de Giorgi, Lady Colebrooke, Francis Roche and Maurice Roche.

Today combines three events. It is Canadian Day, St. Andrew's Day, and Children's Day. A Mother Goose spectacle will be given in the Great Hall at 2 o'clock. The Stage Women's War Relief will give special children's features for the afternoon and evening. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth will take part in the program. In the afternoon at the British War Exhibit John Drew will discuss "The American Actor and His Part in the War."

FRAUDS HIT REAL CHARITIES.

Swann Appealed To to Help Restore Confidence of Public.

Michael J. Delahunty, arrested on Wednesday by order of the District Attorney on the charge that he had retained the proceeds of a check for $1,000 obtain from Walter J. M. Donovan, a broker at 80 Broadway, on the pretense of soliciting funds for dependents of the members of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, was arraigned in the Tombs Court yesterday and remanded for trial on Dec. 3. Magistrate Simms fixed bail at $3,500. Delahunty, who said he was a promoter and lived at 547 West 123d Street, made no objection to the postponement of his trial. It is alleged that Delahunty used the name of the former commander of the regiment, Colonel Louis D. Conley, to get the $1,000 contribution from the broker.

On account of the disclosures in the investigation by District Attorney Swann showing the operations of numerous fake charities and their imposition on the public by dishonest solicitors and promoters in getting money in the name of patriotic benefits, many legitimate enterprises have been affected in carrying on their work successfully, and Mr. Swann was appealed to yesterday to do something to restore public confidence in those charities and benefits that deserve support.

Lieut. James M. Laughborough of the 305th Infantry at Camp Upton called at the District Attorney's office and said that some persons had refused to aid in a benefit to the regiment on the ground that they had become distrustful of all such forms of raising funds as the result of the frauds uncovered by the District Attorney and his staff. Mr. Swann said that no legitimate work should be harmed by the prosecution of the dishonest promoters.

The 305th Infantry is to give a benefit entertainment at the Hippodrome on Dec. 9 to raise funds to build a drill hall at Camp Upton, which is intended to be used when weather conditions prevent open air war drills and gymnasium work. Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell and all the officers of the 305th Infantry have given their approval to the project. When this regiment is through with the hall it is to become a permanent drill place for other commands.

Men of the regiment are to provide the entire performance at the Hippodrome, portraying the military life at the camp, showing the entire course of training from the first day of the "rookie's" arrival to the time he is turned out a finished soldier. These men will supply their own music and songs for the show. No donations are to be solicited or accepted.

MISS DOWLING WED TO HAROLD P. HALL

Daughter of President-elect of Borough of Manhattan a Bride in Church of St. Columba.

The wedding of Harold Plunkett Hall, a son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hall of Rosedale, N. Y., and Miss Gertrude F. Dowling, a daughter of Frank L. Dowling, President of the Board of Aldermen and President-elect of the Borough of Manhattan, and Mrs. Dowling of 401 West Twenty-fourth Street, was quietly solemnized at 12:30 o'clock yesterday in the Roman Catholic Church of St. Columbia, West Twenty-fifth Street, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Father Edward Higgins of Rosedale.

The bride, who walked to the altar with her father, wore an afternoon gown of blue panne velvet with a hat to match and carried white orchids. She was attended by her sister, Miss Florence Dowling, who wore a blue broadcloth costume topped by a black picture hat, and carried pink roses.

Mr. Hall's best man was Joseph Higgins, a brother of Father Higgins, who performed the ceremony. A small reception for the relatives and a few close friends followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Hall have gone South, and on their return from their honeymoon will live at 184th Street and the Grand Concourse.

PRESIDENT HEARS PATRIOTIC SERMON

Methodist Congregation Applauds Bishop McDowell — Home Dinner at White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Wilson observed Thanksgiving Day quietly, spending much of the time reading in his study.

Accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, he attended services at the Metropolitan Methodist Church this morning, but a drizzling rain in the afternoon caused h to abandon a contemplated automobile ride. At night the President and Mrs. Wilson attended a ball under the auspices of the Navy Relief Society.

At the church services which the President attended a great congregation applauded thunderously when Bishop McDowell, contrasting American diplomacy with the intriguing diplomacy of Germany, said that the historic documents penned by President Wilson would stand indefinitely without fear of repudiation. Lauding the motives which brought the United States into the war, Bishop McDowell exclaimed:

"We are eager for victory, but we are more eager for honor. We are eager for prosperity, but we are more eager for humanity. We are eager for peace, but we are vastly more eager for righteousness."

Dinner at the White House was simple and informal. Only members of the President's household were present, and the menu was arranged with a view to food conservation, Mrs. Wilson having been one of the first signers of the food pledge cards. The President's turkey, a forty-pounder, came from the Kentucky farm of South Trimble, Clerk of the House.

All the members of the Cabinet, except Secretary Wilson, who is on the Pacific Coast, remained in Washington for the holiday. Secretary and Mrs. Daniels entertained at dinner twenty convalescing sailors and marines from the Naval Hospital here. Mrs. George Dewey was also present.

Thousands of uniformed men from nearby training camps were dinner guests in Washington homes, and many religious and fraternal organizations held special entertainments in honor of the enlisted men.

START ANTI-LITTER FIGHT.

Merchants and Their Employes Volunteer as "Block Captains."

Rapid progress is being made by the Merchants Association's Committee on City Conditions and Ordinances, of which John C. Eames is Chairman, in the appointment of block captains for the Third Police Inspection District, which extends from Fourteenth to Forty-second Street, under the anti-litter plan, the association announced yesterday. A statement by the association says:

"If a schoolboy or a citizen wearing a block captain's badge steps up to you and says, 'You have just violated the law,' it will be the part of wisdom not to tell him to mind his own business, but to ask him in what respect you have offended. Probably you have thoughtlessly dropped a newspaper or torn letter scraps, or possibly a cigarette box, into the street. The reminder of the block captain will not necessarily be followed by serious consequences if it is taken in good part.

"Commissioner John T. Fetherston of the Department of Street Cleaning has written to the committee, 'I will have our offices co-operate in every way to make a success of the campaign.'

"Nearly forty business houses have appointed employes to act as block captains. These employes have sent in their signed pledges and have already received their commissions of appointment, together with pamphlet of instructions and identification card."

GREGORY TO PASS ON ALIEN REGISTRY PLAN

Attorney General Will Confer with McCarthy and Woods Today.

"DEADLINE" FOR BROOKLYN

Marshal Power Announces Zone from Which Germans Will Be Excluded.

The subject of the registration of the thousands of enemy aliens resident in New York City will be discussed at a conference to be held in Washington today between Attorney General Gregory, Police Commissioner Arthur Woods, and United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy. A representative of the State Department, probably Counsellor Frank L. Polk, will also be present. Commissioner Woods and Marshal McCarthy, who left for Washington last night, are said to have worked out a plan for the registration which they are expected to submit to Attorney General Gregory for his approval.

As the plan now stands, the Police Department, aided by Marshal McCarthy and the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, is expected to be charged with the duty of registering the more than 100,000 enemy aliens in New York City, of whom probably 50 per cent. live in Manhattan and the Bronx. In what is known as the Metropolitan District the enemy alien population is estimated at between 130,000, and 140,000.

The registration will probably be made by police precincts, the captain of the precinct being in charge. The registrants will be required to give, under oath, and, if necessary, submit proof, as to their past, particularly since the beginning of the war in 1914. A failure to appear for registration when called will mean arrest and internment for the period of the war.

All registrants will probably be required to report at stated intervals to the commander of the police precinct in which they live or do business. When a German subject wishes to leave the city he will first have to get the written permission of the police captain, which in turn will be approved or disapproved by the proper Federal authorities. If permission is granted he will be required to report to the police authorities. The precinct commander in New York will then notify the police of the city to which he is going, and on his arrival at that place the alien must immediately report to the police there. When he is ready to return to New York he will again report to the police of the city which he is visiting, who will notify the New York authorities. Arriving back in New York the enemy alien must report to his precinct commander.

Plan New Waterfront Census.

In addition to the registration of all enemy aliens, the police and Deputy United States Marshals will probably begin taking a census of all persons doing business in or living in the waterfront zones. As all enemy aliens are barred from these zones this census will concern only American citizens and subjects or citizens of friendly nations. It is expected that the census will require a week, and when it is finished a complete card index system will be made, which will be turned over to the military commanders on duty in the waterfront zones for their guidance. This card index is expected to make possible the quick identification of any person in the zone should the occasion arise.

Marshal McCarthy made an inspection of the Manhattan and Bronx waterfront zones yesterday. He said that the orders of the Government for the evacuation of those zones by enemy aliens were being carried out and that with the exception of a few business men, who have received a few days' extension to wind up their affairs and move, he believed that all the German subjects had left the zone.

United States Marshal James M. Power of the Eastern District of New York, which takes in all of Long Island and Staten Island, officially announced last night the following "dead line" along the Brooklyn waterfront beyond which from this time on no enemy alien will be allowed to pass:

Starting at Paige Avenue and Whale Creek to Oakland Street, to Commercial Street, to Dupont Street, to West Street, to Quay Street, to Franklin Street, to North Fourteenth Street, to Kent Avenue, to Grand Street, to Ferry; back along Grand Street to Kent Avenue to Broadway, to ferry.

Starting again at south side of Broadway and Kent Avenue along Kent Avenue to Metz Street, to Clinton Street, to Flushing Avenue to St. Edwards Street, to Park Avenue, to Navy Street, to York Street, to Hudson Avenue, to John Street, to Jay Street, to Plymouth Street, to Main Street, to Catherine Street Ferry.

Starting again at Main Street and Plymouth Street along Main Street to Water Street, to Fulton Street, to Fulton Ferry.

Starting again at Fulton and Furman Streets along Furman Street to Atlantic Avenue, to South Ferry.

Starting again at Atlantic Avenue and Furman Street along Atlantic Avenue to Columbia Street, to Harrison Street, to Van Brunt Street, to Hamilton Avenue, to Imlay Street, to Pioneer Street, to Conover Street, to King Street, to Ferris Street, to Van Dyke Street, to Conover Street, to Beard Street, along Beard Street to Otsego Street, to Sigourney Street, to Columbia Street, to Bay Street, to Hicks Street to Cream Street, to Henry Street, to Bush Street, to Clinton Street, to Cream Street, to Smith Street, to Hamilton Avenue, to Seventeenth Street, to Third Avenue, to Twenty-eighth Street, to Second Avenue, to Thirty-ninth Street, then along Thirty-ninth Street to Ferry, coming up Thirty-ninth Street to First Avenue, to Sixty-ninth Street, to Ferry, back along Sixty-ninth Street to First Avenue, to Bay Ridge Avenue, to Narrows Avenue, to Eighty-ninth Street, to Colonial Road, to Ninety-second Street, to Narrows Avenue, to Third Avenue, to Marine Avenue, to Fort Hamilton Parkway, to Ninety-second Street, to Seventh Avenue, to Warehouse Avenue, thence through roadway across Dyker Beach Park to Cropsey Avenue, to Bay Thirty-seventh Street, to Harway Avenue, to Avenue E, to Warehouse Avenue to Canal Avenue, to West Thirty-seventh Street, to Surf Avenue, thence along Surf Avenue.

Brooklyn Zone Mapped Out.

Marshal Power, accompanied by his deputies, devoted all day yesterday to mapping out this zone. A tour of the entire district covered by the Marshal was made. Later he held a conference with Chief Inspector Dillon and Borough Inspector Murphy of the Police Department, at the conclusion of which he left with the police officials copies of the map showing the dead line for enemy aliens in Brooklyn. Thousands of cards, printed in both English and German, warning enemy aliens to keep outside the points where the signs are posted, will be distributed throughout the five counties in charge of Marshal Power today.

The Marshal also said that stenographers were now engaged at his office preparing a duplicate card index of the enemy aliens registered there under the President's proclamation of April 6. The duplicate of the original index will be delivered to the Police Department tomorrow night, and will be distributed among the various precincts in which the enemy aliens live. It was also announced at Marshal Power's office that since the latest proclamation of the President was issued barring enemy aliens from within 300 yards of the waterfront, his office had arrested more than a dozen for violating the order. They have been interned temporarily on Ellis Island, but will be transferred later to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

A conference will be held late today at Marshal Power's office in the Brooklyn Post Office Building between representatives of the Navy and Army Intelligence Bureaus, United States Attorney France of Brooklyn, representatives of the Police Department and other departments with whom the Brooklyn Federal officials are co-operating in carrying out the proclamation of the President.

PLEDGE SCHOOL LOYALTY.

All But Two District Superintendents Sign Patriotic Declaration.

A declaration of loyalty, carrying with it repudiation of disloyal or seditious teachings in the public schools, has been given out, bearing the signatures of twenty-four of the twenty-six District Superintendents of the city school system. The statement reads:

"We pledge unqualified loyalty to the United States in its war with the Imperial Government of Germany. We believe that the principles proclaimed by the President and Congress in this crisis of our nation's life should guide us in training the youth of our country for patriotic citizenship. We take this opportunity to repudiate the words and actions of any disloyal or seditious members of the teaching and supervising staffs of the public schools. We consider their connection with our school system a menace to the free institutions of our country. At a time when thousands of young Americans are leaving their homes to die, if need be, for their country, the toleration of open or seditious disloyalty in our schools would be a flagrant abuse of freedom of speech. Furthermore, we believe that any teacher who is not a positive force in inculcating Americanism should not be permitted to remain in our schools."

A committee of the Faculty of De Witt Clinton High School, a few of the members of whose Faculty have been the principal defendants on the charge of lukewarm Americanism, have been gathering statistics of the teachers, pupils, and alumni in the military and naval service, and, with the inquiry still incomplete, have found that the service flag which they have ordered will have at least 293 stars. The men recorded as in the service include 13 teachers, 261 former students, and 19 students, who left this term.

The committee asks that all Clinton men in the service will send full name, date of their studies, branch of service, rank and location to Jesse W. Whitsit, De Witt Clinton High School, Tenth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street.

Loaded Shell on Government Ship.

A loaded and primed three-inch shell was found yesterday afternoon in a locker in one of the storerooms of a steamer loading at the Bush Terminal, Brooklyn. The vessel was said to be engaged in Government service, and information as to her cargo could not be obtained. Police of the Fourth Avenue station took charge of the shell, but were not inclined to believe that it was placed there with intention to damage the ship. The theory most in favor was that the missile was probably defective, and had been acquired by a seaman as a souvenir.

SOLID CROWN FOR MRS. WHITEHOUSE

Diadem of Pure Gold to Replace Base Emblem of Suffrage Victory.

CORONATION AT WASHINGTON

Royal Honor Stirs Resentment Among Workers, Who Would Spend Money for Charity.

A costly gold crown is to be presented to Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Chairman of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party, at the national suffrage convention in Washington next month. Just how much the trophy of victory at the polls, which is to grace the State leader's brow, is to cost, was kept a profound secret last night, though it was denied that $1,000—the rumored figure—was to be spent upon the decoration.

The project to confer such an expensive token of gratitude upon Mrs. Whitehouse became known last night at the same time that it was learned that the "gold crown" used at her coronation during the recent convention of the party at a woman citizens' dinner at the Hotel Biltmore wasn't gold, after all. That beautiful wreath of gleaming laurel leaves was only paste! Those interested in making the gift admitted that the wreath, borne up the aisle by a stately young woman, who held it ceremoniously aloft on a rose satin cushion, was only an imitation of the real thing.

The real one was designed by the same artist who fashioned the oak leaves presented to Marshal Joffre on his recent visit to America. It was said last night that though not all the money had been raised, a Fifth Avenue goldsmith already was at work upon the crown

When confidential letters asking for contributions to the gift fund were received by women of prominence in the State party all over New York they created quite a stir, and some of the ensuing reaction was quite contrary to that anticipated by the women who signed the letters. At the head of the 'sort of informal committee," which has the project and the collection in hand, is Mrs. George D. Pratt of 640 Park Avenue, wife of the New York State Conservation Commissioner. Mrs. Pratt admitted last night that the gift was to be made, but refused to say who are the other women on the committee. Nor would she tell the exact cost of the crown.

Mrs. Pratt said that, in the opinion of those sponsoring the project, it was entirely proper to spend a considerable sum upon a solid gold trophy for the State leader. She declared that conferring suffrage upon the women of the State was "a distinct war measure," and said as such a patriotic emancipation it was entirely fitting and proper that the expense of commemorating Mrs. Whitehouse's share in the victory should be undertaken, no matter how many other causes were clamoring for support. "It was all so fundamental," said Mrs. Pratt. "It was so very necessary that we should be enfranchised that I cannot see how any one could object to our collecting money to give such a gift to our State leader."

Resentment against the whole scheme, which extends far beyond a refusal on the part of some solicited to contribute, has been manifested both by members of the City Party, allied with the State body, and by the radical element. Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman and "little boss" of the City Party, when told of the plan last night asserted that she would have nothing to do with it, and neither would the party which she heads.

"It's absurd," said Miss Hay. "I don't believe in spending money for any such thing. I will have nothing to do with it and neither will the City Party or most of its members, though some may be led into contributing as individuals. Not only is it wasteful and extravagant to spend money on such a bauble at this time, when the war and the interests connected with it need all we can spare and more too, but it is ridiculous for suffragists as such to waste money in such a way when they would far better expend it on the education of women voters.

"Such education is needed, now that women are enfranchised, and great sums are going to be needed to carry it out. If the women have a thousand dollars or less to contribute let them spend it in the educational cause. So far as I am concerned, I feel as I always have that money should not be spent, and the public or parts of it, should not be solicited, except for causes which are going to be of benefit—things which are going to do some good."

Just what effect the gift scheme may have upon the party itself, if it is persisted in, no suffragist was prepared to say last night, but there were those supporters of the cause who felt sure the radical Socialist element were just waiting for some such opportunity to decry the "extravagant rich" in the party. The pacifist-Socialist element who followed Morris Hillquit and who loudly are claiming credit for the suffrage victory at the polls are known already to be incensed at the way the party leaders have frozen them out at such celebrations as thus far have been held.

CARDINAL CALLS FOR UNITY.

Mgr. O'Connell Expresses Gratitude That America is in the War.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—"Let us raise our hearts in gratitude to God that America is in this war," declared Cardinal O'Connell, speaking today at a solemn high mass of requiem in memory of deceased members of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

"Whatever may be the cause of the war, whatever purpose each individual nation has in going to war, let history decide," he continued. "But this we know today, and for this we ought to be filled with righteous pride, that America is in this war, not for greed or selfishness, but only to maintain the principles of righteousness and justice.

"America will see to it that no mere force or might, no mere greed for greater power or more territory will triumph, but that the great, sublime, and holy ideal of justice for all, of the right of small nations, of independent sovereignties of people, will triumph in the end. Therefore, it is the duty of every one of us here in America, no matter what our race or our racial history may be, to stand by the side of America in this tremendous conflict of right against might."

'CARMEN' DELIGHTS HOLIDAY AUDIENCE

Geraldine Farrar's Performance of Bizet's Heroine Gains in Dramatic Quality.

MAY PETERSON'S DEBUT

American Soprano as Micaela Reveals Herself an Artist—"La Boheme" Sung at Night.

CARMEN, opera in four acts; book in French, by Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halevy; music by Georges Bizet. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Carmen ....Geraldine Farrar
Micaela ....May Peterson
Frasquita ....Lenora Sparkes
Mercedes ....Sophie Braslau
Don Jose ....Giovanni Martinelli
Escamillo ....Clarence Whitehill
Dancaire ....Albert Reiss
Remendado ....Angelo Bada
Zuniga ....Andre de Segurola
Morales ....Mario Laurenti
Conductor, Pierre Monteux.

"Carmen" was given for the first time this season at the special Metropolitan's Thanksgiving matinée yesterday. There was a very large audience eager to find almost everything good in the performance and to applaud it vigorously. And there were, indeed, many excellent points in it. Mme. Farrar's "Carmen" has been polished and intensified in its quality, and has shown the improvement in dramatic quality that is so often manifest in Mme. Farrar's continued study of a part. Mr. Martinelli's Don José is a creditable performance, but he sang yesterday with a good deal of main strength, as at the end of the flower song in the second act, which may have been worth a round of applause to him, but did not embellish Bizet's music.

Miss May Peterson made her first appearance with the Metropolitan company as Micaela; an American soprano, who has had experience at the Opéra Comique in Paris. The experience was evident in her appearance and the exemplary representation which she gave of a perfectly inconsequential young lady in the opera. The voice which had been heard and admired here in concert seemed a little small yesterday, and there was an unexpected unsteadiness in some tones, especially the lower ones. But there were evidences of some nervousness on Miss Peterson's part, of which this may have been one. There is beautiful quality in the voice and the results generally of a well-controlled production; some of her high tones were taken with admirable precision. Miss Peterson, in short, showed herself an artist whose future contributions in the course of the season will be observed with interest.

Mr. Whitehill's Escamillo was a superb impersonation, full of life and vigor, and sung in noble and beautiful voice. Not often is the Toreador's song more successfully achieved. The conducting of Mr. Monteux was on the whole of excellent quality, and he gave the performance spirited movement and dramatic power, as well as considerable finish in the orchestral part.

"La Boheme" was repeated at the opera last night with a cast all new, except Ruth Miller, the Musetta, who sang better than at her recent début. The plight of Paris bohemians of 1830 found some realism in the difficulties of other American stars. Riccardo Martin, twice out of opera lately, tried to sing with a heavy cold, as Secretary Guard explained from the stage, while Thomas Chalmers gave up in advance, and a printed slip announced Louis d'Angelo. A house in holiday mood took more active part in the proceedings than is often heard from an American crowd. Muzio as Mimi was a favorite, together with Scotti in his familiar rôle, and Mardones, in fine voice, as Colline.

WOULD END BUYING TITLES.

House of Lords Adopts a Resolution Prohibiting the Practice.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—[Associated Press.] Assertions that British titles have been obtained by payments to party funds and by contributions to public purposes have long been made, but statements of facts and names by responsible men in public have not been heard until the recent discussion in the House of Lords by the Earl of Loreburn, former Lord Chancellor, and the Earl of Selborne, a former Cabinet Minister.

The bestowal of two peerages recently, with seats in the House of Lords which appertain to them, has angered some of the inner circle of that body, who consider that its status has been cheapened. The names of the two new peers cannot be given, although they may be heard in the gossip of any London club or drawing room.

The resolution which Lord Loreborn introduced, and which was adopted without a division, provides that when any honor is bestowed upon others than members of the royal family, of the army and navy or civil service, there shall be a public statement of the reasons; also that the Prime Minister, in recommending any honors to the King, shall state that no payments to party funds are associated with them.

Contributions to British political parties are a sealed book to the public. Only a very small circle of the managers of the party machines know anything about them. But it is asserted that one prolific source of revenue for the party in power has been the conferring of titles of nobility upon rich men, and an understood custom that a generous subscription to the party fund should be forthcoming in such cases.

The Earl of Selborne gave some examples of deals that had failed. Sir James Gildea, the founder of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families' Association, he said, had authorized the statement that on three occasions he had been approached to act as go-between. One man offered him £25,000 and two others £10,000 for the society if he would use his influence to obtain titles for them. "He replied that he would have nothing to do with such transactions, and those single-minded and disinterested philanthropists never gave a penny to the association," said Lord Selborne.

Lord Loreburn's resolution contained a preamble, "that this House, convinced that Ministers have in recent times advised his Majesty to confer honors and dignities on persons who have given or have promised money to party funds as a consideration, therefore—," but the Lords omitted that by a vote of 48 to 34. The reasons urged by Lord Curzon were that it contained a reflection upon four living Prime Ministers, Lord Rosebery, Mr. Balfour, Mr. Asquith, and Mr. Lloyd George. Members of the Lords were disposed to think that Prime Ministers had recommended to the King promotions to the nobility on the advice of party managers, without questioning the reasons, and preferring to turn a blind eye to an old custom.

OPEN TRAILS FOR THE ARMY.

Pennsylvania Roads Being Prepared for Passage of Heavy Trucks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Pennsylvania, the banner State in regular army recruiting, is blazing the trail for good roads for the army. The Council of National Defense announced today that the State is preparing to keep its thoroughfares in readiness for the passage of military truck trains this Winter, according to a letter received from the State Highway Department.

The action was taken following correspondence on the plan to relieve congestion in railway terminals by the use of motor trucks. The first experimental military truck train is already on its way from a Western city to the Atlantic seaboard. Other States are expected to follow the action of Pennsylvania.

A part of the letter of the Pennsylvania department follows:

"As stated on several occasions, the department will use every effort possible not only to put and keep this route in passable condition, but also to keep it open in the event of snowstorms. In order to take care of this latter condition we are arranging to place eight motor trucks, which will be equipped with snowplows along the line of the road, prepared to fight the storms."

"SIX MONTHS OPTION"

A Moralistic Farce on Trial Divorce and Remarriage.

SIX MONTHS OPTION, a comedy in three acts by Ancelia Ansiee. At the Princess Theatre.

Franklin Kendal ....Stanley C. Ridges
Andrew McClellen ....W. T. Clark
Fanny Kendal ....Minna Gombel
Ella McClellen ....Mrs. Jacques Martin
Marion Eastman ....Jane Marbury
Ernesto Gianello ....David Quixano
Frieda ....Marion Manley

Divorce and remarriage would be much less frequent, in the opinion of Ancelia Ansiee, if the high contracting parties could only have a foretaste of their luck in the second lottery of love. There would be time to test new ties, to digest new sensations. And, in the lengthening retrospect, old ties and old emotions might revive some of their pristine attractions. Now Ancelia Ansiee is a playwright, and the result of these cogitations was "Six Months' Option," in which the candidates for divorce and remarriage live amphibiously for half a year between the old love and the new. In the end a proverb is revised. Never be on with the new love until you have given both loves the acid test for at least six months.

Conceivably a comedy might have been written on this theme—but only conceivably. For, like trial marriage, trial divorce and remarriage is an institution which the genus homo is much more disposed to discuss than to experiment in. The comedy would have to be very light, verging upon farce. The characters would have to be vivaciously sketched, and acted with the utmost finesse in caricature. In Ancelia Ansiee's play the characters are scissored out as if by the tinsmith, and they are so far from taking their predicament lightly that they clog the dialogue with weighty observations on subjects ranging from the childless wife to the married libertine. The result is moralistic farce. Of the acting, the less said the better.

Only one thing remains to be recorded. Ancelia Ansiee is not only a playwright, but a playwright with some mysterious power to move the savage breast of the manager. "Six Months' Option" was produced by Dorothy Donnelly, and on a day which was otherwise wholly occupied with thanksgiving.

GIBES AT 'HEAVENLY TWINS.'

Morning Post Nonplussed at Honors to Reading and Northcliffe.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The Morning Post says editorially this morning: "The whole world stands amazed as we do at the advancements and peregrinations of those heavenly twins, Lords Reading and Northcliffe. We are told, and we are willing to believe, that they have done most wonderful work in America, the one in finance, the other in diplomacy. We take it, like many other things, upon trust, yet we are not altogether comfortable over this growing faith of democracy in the amateur and this increasing custom of taking men from their own work and setting them to do the work of others."

As regards Lord Reading, The Morning Post points out that he is Chief Justice of England, and argues that his proper place is on the bench. It goes on:

"Surely, the Treasury and the City of London are not so impoverished of talent that we have to employ our Chief Justice on one financial mission after another."

The article concludes:

"We take it that these financial pilgrimages are an explanation of the honors showered upon Lord Reading. Yesterday he was a Viscount, today he is an Earl, tomorrow he may be a Duke.

"We confess it is almost enough to make people turn republicans that the other bright particular star, Lord Northcliffe, moves through the constellations with equal celerity. He attacks Mr. Lloyd George's colleagues, and is immediately made a Viscount. It is indeed a modern example of noblesse oblige.

"Mr. Lloyd George secretly offers to Lord Northcliffe the post occupied by Lord Cowdray. Lord Northcliffe thereupon makes the offer public and takes the opportunity of publicly attacking Mr. Lloyd George's colleagues; Lord Cowdray in consequence resigns, and Lord Northcliffe's brother is immediately given his job, while Lord Northcliffe is made a Viscount. It is a curious transaction.

"If Lord Northcliffe should desire a Dukedom, he now knows how to get it. He has only to throw a few more bricks at the Prime Minister's colleagues, and if they resign he can always put his relations into their offices. Thus Mr. Lloyd George and Lord Northcliffe may mutually benefit each other. Lord Northcliffe practises modesty and the Prime Minister forgiveness. Lord Northcliffe refuses a ministry and becomes a Viscount. Mr. Lloyd George turns the other cheek—of a colleague."

TO TRAIN POLISH OFFICERS.

Baker Will Aid New Contingent, Paderewski Announces.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Secretary of War Baker has shown America's appreciation of the new army of 200,000 Polish-American young men being raised in the United States to fight on the side of the Entente Allies by offering the use of the camp at Plattsburg for the training of Polish officers, Ignace Paderewski, the famous pianist, announced at a patriotic mass meeting of Polish people here today.

The meeting, which was held in Tremont Temple, was the concluding event of a commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Thaddeus Kosciusko, the Polish patriot.

Mr. Paderewski urged all Polish-American young men of draft age who are not called to the colors under the selective service law to enter the new Polish army.

"We must needs favor Russia," he said, "for the Russian people are on the side of the Allies. Russia, Austria, and Germany have been brutal to Poland. They have all tried to crush our spirit of freedom. Now is our chance to get back a free and independent Poland. We have the support and goodwill of this great liberty-loving nation and its greatest leader—our beloved President, Woodrow Wilson."

At the mention of the President's name the big audience stood up and cheered.

The celebration included a solemn high mass of requiem in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, with Cardinal O'Connell officiating. A wreath was placed on the statue of Washington in the Public Garden.

'The Gypsy Trail' for the Plymouth

"The Star Gazer" will be withdrawn from the Plymouth Theatre tomorrow night, and "The Gypsy Trail," by Robert Housum, will have its first performance at that house on next Tuesday. The new piece is being produced by Arthur Hopkins, and the cast will include Phoebe Foster and Ernest Glendinning.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Eva Le Gallienne has been added to the company which will appear in the revival of "Lord and Lady Algy," and the complete cast now includes William Faversham, Maxine Elliott, Maclyn Arbuckle, Irene Fenwick, George W. Howard, (in his original role,) Florine Arnold, Lumsden Hare, George Fitzgerald, Mrs. Edmund Gurney, Grace Ade, Philip Leigh, Malcolm Morley, Joseph McManus, Herbert Belmore, Douglas Farne, Charles Chappell, Victor La Salle, and Miss La Gallienne.

David Belasco and Enrico Caruso were among the spectators at last night's performance of "The Land of Joy," at the Park Theatre.

A performance will be given at the Strand Theatre at 10 o'clock this morning for the benefit of the crippled children in the public schools. Mary Pickford, in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," will be the principal attraction. Men in uniform will be admitted free of charge.

"The Golden Goose," a musical comedy by Silvio Hein, Edgar Smith, Herbert Reynolds, and Schuyler Green, had its first performance in its present form last night at Atlantic City. Heading the cast are Muriel Window, Joe Cook, and Ernest Adams.

The slave market scene from "Chu Chin Chow" will be reproduced at an Oriental bazaar to be given next Wednesday and Thursday at the First Field Hospital Armory, 56 West Sixty-sixth Street.

A total of 1,400 soldiers and sailors attended the two performances at the Hippodrome yesterday.

FAST TRAIN MISSES CRASH BY 100 FEET

Engineer of Owl Express on New Haven Stops Just in Time to Avoid Freight Wreck.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Nov. 29.—More than five hundred passengers aboard the No. 1 Owl Express, consisting of nine coaches and three baggage cars, bound from Boston to New York on the New Haven, had cause to be thankful early this morning when their train escaped by less than one hundred feet of crashing into a freight wreck at Davisville, R. I.

The freight train was derailed after passing Wickford Junction, and a towerman a short distance away heard the crash, and, realizing that the Boston train was about due, threw the "distant" and "home" signals against the express. The train had passed the first warning, but the alert eyes of the engineer saw the "home" signal flash just as he was passing the board. He threw on the brakes, and his locomotive bore down so closely to the freight wreck that he believed he could not escape a collision, so he jumped from his cab after shouting to his fireman to follow.

The freight train was in charge of Conductor James McVey, who sent a flagman with a red lantern to stop the express, but the time was so short that the flagman's signal would have been practically useless.

"This is Thanksgiving morning," exclaimed Conductor G. E. Dana of the express as the passengers asked why the train had stopped so suddenly, "and we can all be thankful that we escaped with our lives."

The express train was backed to Providence, then made a detour to Plainfield, and came to New London over the Norwich and Worcester line, arriving six hours late. Other Boston-New York trains were sent over the same route.

CANADIANS IN RIOT.

Three-Hour Fight at Meeting Addressed by Cabinet Members.

SHERBROOKE, Quebec, Nov. 29.—A riotous crowd tonight broke up a meeting here at which Minister of Justice Doherty and the Hon. C. C. Ballantyne attempted to speak. The front of the theatre in which the meeting was being held was wrecked, and there were many fist fights among persons in the audience. Mr. Doherty is a member of the Cabinet of Sir Robert Borden.

The disturbance was the most serious that has yet occurred in the Province of Quebec in the present general election campaign. The rioters were held back only by the well directed use of a fire hose at the stage door when they attempted to storm the stage where the speakers were.

The riot lasted more than three hours, during which period the mob broke through the doors of the theatre and were repelled by the citizens who had been occupying seats on the ground floor, and who, each time that the rioters broke into the theatre, drove them back.

There were at least twenty pitched battles. The entire front of the theatre was smashed to splinters. Not a single piece of glass was left intact, and through the broken windows stones of all sizes were hurled.

At the end of the meeting the Chairman called on the peaceful people to remain inside for a time in order that steps could be taken to get the women away in safety. The men decided to protect their own women, and many chairs were broken so that the arms and legs might serve as weapons, and the audience left the hall almost in a body. The men presented such a determined aspect that they were not rushed as expected.

SHELTERED BY RED CROSS.

Americans Help French Farmers Restore Homes Destroyed by Germans.

In the devastated sections of Northern France which have been retaken from the Germans there is not a building left with a roof. The farmers who were driven from their homes before the German advance are now returning and are being aided by the American Red Cross. These farmers, who are described as "pioneers," are the subject of this cable message, received by the Red Cross yesterday from its representatives in France:

"Red Cross workers who have just returned from the devastated region say that they passed no building covered by a roof. In some places numbers of farmers born and reared on this land, like their fathers for generations before them, have come back to their ruined homes to begin anew.

"Repair work has begun at three places, where the Red Cross helps farmers to roof at least one room and to give it windows and a door. One man, formerly prosperous, asked for such assistance because of his comfortable farmhouse and outbuildings only one stable still stands. He asked the Red Cross to help fix the roof of his stable, that he might bring his family back and recommence tilling his land, which is unusually fertile.

"This man said: 'It is hard to have to begin all over. We shall be grateful for your co-operation, as this land is all we have left. All the same, it is good to be back.'

"This is the spirit of all returned farmers of the devastated regions. To give these courageous, indomitable people the chance of winning back again their own land, rebuilding their houses, and, like a second race of pioneers, reconquering their own country, is one thing the Red Cross is trying to do."

Special to The New York Times.

SEES GERMAN PERIL IN LATIN AMERICA

John Barrett Again Urges Creation of Pan American Advisory Council to Aid Government.

CALLS SITUATION CRITICAL

Warns That Enemy, Propaganda May Nullify Advantages of Southern Republics' Support in War.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—John Barrett, Director General of the Pan American Union, the international organization of the American republics in Washington, tonight issued another warning that unless there is co-ordination of the official aims and attitude of the twelve Latin-American republics which have broken off relations with Germany there will be danger of trouble.

Director Barrett favors the creation of a Pan American advisory council. He urged it upon the attention of the United States Government some months ago, but no action was taken on his suggestion. In a statement which he authorized tonight, Mr. Barrett again urges the Government to favor the creation of a special Pan American advisory council, and accompanied it with a warning that, unless something is done and done quickly, German effort and propaganda "may completely offset and nullify all the apparent advantages of Pan American co-operation and support in this war."

The Pan American Union is the international organization maintained by the twenty-one American republics for the development of good understanding, friendly intercourse, commerce and peace among them. It is controlled by a governing board composed of Secretary of State Lansing and the diplomatic representatives in Washington of the other Pan American nations of Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, Uruguay and Venezuela. The Union is administered by a director-general, who is Mr. Barrett, and an assistant director, Francisco y Yanes, chosen by this board, and who are assisted by a staff of international experts, statisticians, editors, compilers, translators, and librarians.

The statement issued by Director Barrett tonight was accompanied by this "Explanatory Memorandum":

"The whole Pan American war situation is in a most critical state, and it may yet get away from the United States unless something effective and drastic is done to co-ordinate, mobilize, and direct the co-operation of the twelve friendly Latin-American countries and to checkmate the vicious German propaganda conducted not only in their midst but in their eight sister neutral republics.

"The adoption of this plan of a Pan American Advisory Council was respectfully urged upon the Government many months ago, but no action unfortunately was taken. Something now should be done, or there will be danger of trouble."

The statement authorized by Mr. Barrett in advocacy of the creation of the council he proposed is itself as follows:

"The creation of a Special Pan American Advisory Council to assist the Government in the co-ordination and mobilization for the war of the vast co-operative possibilities of the twelve Latin-American countries which have broken off relations with Germany is urged upon the Government by Director Barrett of the Pan American Union.

"The practical and pressing necessity of the appointment of this council and its application to the present situation he emphasizes in the following facts:

"(1) There is immediate need of co-ordinating co-operation between the United States and these twelve countries to combat German propaganda among them, which is growing every day bolder and more desperate, and to initiate similar effort in the eight neutral countries. Here the bureau of information would receive from this council advice urgently needed.

"(2) The fullest co-operation of these countries in shipping necessary food supplies and exporting raw products required for war manufacture, and the increase of production by the use of the capital and skill of the United States, are vitally essential. Here the Food and Fuel Administrations require expert advice.

"(3) The whole question of the present and future commerce of the United States with Latin America and the inevitable competition after the war involve today serious problems in the regulation of shipping and exports. Here the Shipping and War Trade Boards expect advice.

"(4) There must be immediate co-ordination of effort to meet possible eventualities in ammunitions, aviation, training of armies and navies, use of man power, &c. Here the Council of National Defense and the War and Navy Departments seek advice.

"(5) There must be co-ordination of the official aims and attitudes of these twelve countries toward the war, toward each other, and toward the eight neutral American countries; there must be sending and receiving of special commissions and constant co-operation with such. In this and other similar matters the State Department should have the valuable advice of these international experts.

"Unless this is done and done quickly, Director Barrett, basing his conclusions on intimate study of the general Latin-American situation and German propaganda since the beginning of the war, warns that German effort and propaganda may completely offset and nullify all the apparent advantages of Pan American co-operation and support in this war."

HALL CAINE'S NEW POST.

Accepts Invitation of Lloyd George as Controller of Cinema Propaganda.

Premier Lloyd George, in a letter to Hall Caine on Oct. 23, said that the Government was "purposing to make as large a use as possible of the cinema in carrying on this work" of "informing public opinion in regard to the issues at stake in the war" and as the "scensrio should be the work of a thoroughly competent hand" he invited Hall Caine to manage the matter.

In his letter accepting the appointment of "Controller of Cinema Propaganda" the author wrote on Oct. 26:

"I am also satisfied that the vast cinema industry (producers, photographers, manufacturers, and renters alike) will welcome the result of our united efforts, and give it if released under wise and proper direction, every opportunity it may deserve of achieving the great national ends you have in view."

GERMAN AUTHOR CONDEMNS WAR

Dr. Nicolai of Berlin University Assails It as a Biological Anomaly.

JAILED FOR HIS OPINIONS

But His Book, Denouncing German Militarism, Is Published in Switzerland.

BY JULIAN GRANDE.

BERNE, Oct. 1.—What is perhaps the most rmarkable book published since the war is that by Dr. G. F. Nicolai, entitled "The Biology of War." It may be said that it is a book which, like that of the late Jean de Bloch on "Modern Weapons and Modern War," seems destined long to survive its author.

The writer, Professor of Physiology at Berlin University, was before the war one of the most distinguished heart specialists in Germany and had even been consulted by the German Empress, whom he saved from a serious illness. Always an opponent of German militarism, he refused to accept the "might is right" and the "necessity knows no law" doctrines or any of the other views which orthodox Germans are considered bound to hold. Consequently, early in the war he was virtually incarcerated in Graudenz fortress, (whence the preface to his book is dated,) and there it was that he wrote most of the treatise, incredible as this may seem to any one who has read it, owing to the enormous mass of condensed knowledge, summarized philosophy, quotations, and references which it contains.

The book once written, the difficulty was to find a publisher, for even if a German firm had dared to attempt to issue such a work, it would have been prevented from so doing by the censorship. The manuscript, therefore, was conveyed—I will not say how—across the German frontier into Switzerland, where it was speedily brought out by the leading German-Swiss publisher, Orell Füssli of Zürich.

Its 448 pages, from the first to the last, are written in a style as lucid as easy to read and are reasoned out from beginning to end like a proposition of Euclid. For this cause it is futile, interesting as it may be, to dip into the work and read isolated chapters. No real idea of the author's meaning can thus be gained; his work must be read entirely. The rights of translation into English, for Great Britain and the United States, have already been acquired.

It is extraordinary that, despite its author having been imprisoned and being now, great physician as he is, degraded to be a stretcher-bearer at the front, this book should yet be allowed to enter Germany, for although it is an indictment of war in general as an archaic institution, the reason and justification for which have wholly passed away, it is also an indictment of Germany, the most telling which has been written, and of German conceptions of war.

Author Not a Typical Pacifist.

Let no one imagine either that Dr. Nicolai is "the friend of every country but his own" type of man, or that his book has anything in common with ordinary pacifist publications; still less that his arguments even remotely resemble those of a peace advocate. Their impartiality is equaled only by their clarity, and they are based on great general scientific and primarily on biological considerations, wholly unlike the ordinary anti-war arguments.

The first impetus to the writing of this work, as Dr. Nicolai narrates, was given by the famous declaration of the ninety-three German "intellectuals," issued at the beginning of October, 1914, ("It is not true that Germany is guilty of this war; it is not true that we criminally violated Belgian neutrality," &c.) Certain of the ninety-three afterward excused themselves for having signed the declaration—if, as Professor Nicolai says, this be an excuse—by saying that they had not read the text, but affixed their names to it when requested to do so by a telegram from the Roman Catholic Deputy Erzberger.

In reply to the declaration of the ninety-three "intellectuals," Professor Nicolai, together with Professors Albert Einstein and Wilhelm Förster, in mid-October, 1914, drafted another declaration, the text of which is given in the book, but which failed for lack of support. Therefore he determined to write his book in the belief that pre-eminently the time for writing a peace book was during the present great war.

The first German edition of this book is already sold out and I hear from the publisher that a second is being printed.

The whole book is written from the point of view of the contemplation of war as a natural phenomenon or a human action and its aim is to show that humanity is a single organism. In order to prove his contentions the writer inquires into all the causes for which humanity exists—causes which, as he shows, all exclude any notion of war. He admits that a warlike instinct exists in human beings; that even in the most uncompromising opponent of war there is something lurking which prompts him to war and that all nations first entered the countries they now inhabit as conquerors. But, as he shows in the third part of his book, the instinct of love is more powerful than that of war. Instincts, moreover, he contends, may err. They are not always so wise as the instinct of the bee to build combs, of migratory birds to fly south at a certain time, or of birds to build nests in the spring. In nature there are many mischievous instincts, although at the time when an instinct first arose it was always useful. Sometimes, indeed, instincts survive the reason for their existence and then they may be positively harmful and at best absurd. True, instinct may be infallible, but it is also blind and many species of animals have perished because of the persistence of instincts which they could not adapt to the altered conditions of their lives. Is man to perish likewise, asks Dr. Nicolai, because he persists in refusing to adapt himself to altered conditions in a world where war may once have been useful but where the reason for it no longer exists?

War Contrary to Nature.

Man by nature, he argues, was necessarily a peaceful and social animal. Originally he lived always in hordes, for he is also naturally the most defenseless of creatures, without horns or teeth, or claws or hoofs, or hard outer shell or poison bags, so that his ancestors could maintain themselves only because they were to some extent protected by dwelling in swaying boughs of trees. It is a mistake, he contends, to ascribe to Darwin the theory that man is descended from anthropoid apes; these are our cousins, but our direct ancestors are much lower monkeys, which live and act always in hordes. Again, speech in any form is found only among animals living in hordes.

Wars or fights between animals of the same kind are so extremely rare that it may almost be said that war, like so many other things, is a human invention. It is remarkable that very few animals wage real warfare. War, moreover, cannot exist without property, and is merely one of the consequences of the introduction of property. It has also a close connection with slavery, and every one who defends it in any way ought to realize that he is thereby defending slavery.

War, however, like slavery, had once its uses. At a certain stage of human development it was not merely good, but only too necessary for the progress of mankind that the majority of human beings should be compelled to work for others.

Dr. Nicolai cites successively all the stock arguments in favor of war, by which he primarily means aggressive warfare, for he never hints that the Entente peoples ought not to have arisen as they did in 1914 and defended themselves against their aggressors. These stock arguments he refutes by scientific reasoning as close as it is lucid, but always the reasoning of a biologist and a natural scientist, which is perhaps what chiefly puts his work in a category by itself. Human development, he contends particularly, depends upon the development of human brains, and war tends to retard this, and consequently to retard the progress of the human race. As for the common contention that war develops intelligence and that predatory animals are more intelligent than those which are preyed upon, he says that it naturally requires more wit to catch another animal than to escape being caught, but that the most intelligent animals of all—elephants and apes—are not warlike. Moreover, the pre-eminently civilizing people, the Greeks, "although they fought with the utmost bravery when their civilization was menaced, were by no means warlike," and the peoples which diffused civilization have always been sedentary and not warlike peoples.

"Among the Greeks themselves, the Spartans and later on the Macedonians were the most warlike, but likewise the least highly civilized. Conversely, the Romans were a warlike people, but they did little for civilization. Everywhere the same observation can be made, and there is scarcely a better case in point than that of the German people. In the time of Tacitus they were warlike and barbarous. Gradually, however, alarmed at the pitch which war had reached, they became peaceful, and at the same time a nation whose civilization aroused the admiration of the world. Once more, however, a reaction set in, and, not content with the blessings of peace, we hankered after war and after being a great nation. At the same time the finest flower of our national life suffered, for whatever may be the worth of Moltke and Bernhardi, Roentgen and Emil Fischer, Gerhardt Hauptmann and Avenarius, nevertheless Hardenberg and Stein, Helmholtz and Liebig, Goethe and Kant, were worth more."

Say War Does Not Pay.

The English and the Swiss, he says, did not wage any wars for a long time, and have yet remained vigorous and warlike. And the Germans are now finding out the truth of one of Dr. Nicolai's chief contentions—that war does not pay. It is useless even to contend that wars must be waged for acquiring colonial possessions, for, as the writer says:

"Even England does not possess any colony because she once hoisted the Union Jack there, but only because people live there who speak English and feel English. The English Crown can scarcely be said any longer to own English colonies, over which it has at most a nominal overlordship, but in the hearts of her colonists live England and an English conception of world-wide empire also."

Really to acquire colonies, writes this German, is possible only for those who can assert their own nationality, and to keep colonies is possible only for those who can win friends by just dealings. England once made a mistake which cost her the United States, but now she has learned better; and Dr. Nicolai instances with wonder and admiration the loyalty of the Boers during the present war, and the assistance now being rendered by America. He goes so far as to say:

"For America is in the true sense of the word an English colony, despite the free Star-Spangled Banner floating over Washington. America is a British possession, because in America also the Anglo-Saxon idea lives."

In concluding his homily to Germans on their false notions of colonization—notions which have found their fullest application in Belgium—Dr. Nicolai says:

"Let every German really desirous of spreading German ideas and ways answer the following questions:

"1. Why did the Boers not help Germany?

"2. Why do the majority of German emigrants go to America and to British colonies and not to German colonies?

"3. Why has German trade become so extensive in all British colonies and not in a single Germany colony? And why has it become extensive also in American colonies, although these colonies are sometimes younger than those of Germany?

"4. Why in this war have the people of Lorraine proved more loyal to Germany than the Alsatians, although more interspersed with French than the latter and although the Alsatians have more German blood and much more has been done to Germanize them?

"5. Why are the Austrian Poles more loyal than the Prussian Poles? And again, why have so many Austrian Czechs not been loyal to Austria?

"Any one who can once clearly understand the reasons for these facts will perceive that national ideas and habits take most vigorous root where, as far as possible, nothing is done to implant them by force and where they are merely a particular form of civilization—that is, where the weapons used are those of life, and not of death."

Sees German Intellect Bankrupt.

Dealing with German jingoism, Dr. Nicolai says that German intellect and reasoning power went completely bankrupt at the outset of the war; that after a time no rumors were too preposterous not to be swallowed by some people, no matter how demonstrably false they might be. As an instance of the lowest depth to which a nation could sink, he quotes certain German daily papers as having demanded that prisoners of war and pigs should be fed together, and that when it was officially reported that "a great many German sailors were rescued [i. e., from drowning] by the English," some papers added that it was really too much to be rescued by "this English rabble." As for Lissauer's famous "Hymn of Hate," Dr. Nicolai remarks that "this droll individual," its author, does not even know why he hates England so much; he merely hates her. Let us make haste, he suggests, to cause the world to forget that this disgraceful poem was ever so popular in Germany, and likewise the word "Hiddekk" and the phrase "Gott strafe England." "Hiddekk," by the way, stands for the first letters of "Hauptsache ist, dass die Engländer Keile kriegen," ("the great thing is that the English get thunderbolts.")

Dr. Nicolai, as I have hinted, does not shrink from showing the lengths to which German brutality has gone in this war. For instance, on Page 269, he says:

"I was asked recently by one of our ablest military men, (who, owing to his high standing, shall be nameless, especially as when peace is restored he will asuredly regret his question,) whether it were not possible to drop bombs containing cholera germs or plague bacilli behind the enemy's front. When I told him that I did not think there would be much object in so doing, and that it was likewise scarcely humane, he replied, with a contemptuous gesture: 'What have we to do with humanity in this war? Germany is justified in doing anything.'

"And, unhappily, millions think as did this individual, a man in himself of superior character. And most think far worse things. For instance, a General Staff doctor said to me at Graudenz that he had often wondered whether we could not somehow contrive to slip into Russia in order to inoculate Russians there with living bacteria, 'for against such a herd everything is legitimate.'"

How is it that Dr. Nicolai proposes to supplant war? In reality by internationalism, by each nation developing the best which is in it, and by working together as members of one great family, and he explains how this, the ideal of many before him, is to be attained, how the human race is to live "most worthily and most morally"—most morally at a time when the question of reintroducing polygamy is being seriously discussed in both Germany and Austria!

"If humanity conquers," he says, "this will be the death of war." A new religion we must also have, for he is no materialist, and explicitly states his conviction that without a belief in the supernatural, in some higher power, there can be no true morality. What he does not explain, however, is how the other nations are to concentrate all their efforts upon peaceful, civilizing, uplifting labor so long as there remains in the world even one such nation as Germany, and the power of that nation is not broken.

RUSH TO BUY HIS SUGAR.

Grocer Putting Out Six Tons, Pound at a Time, with Pound of Cornmeal.

Although the Newark Health Department has been unable to get a pound of sugar for distribution among the poor and sick, in spite of promises by the American Sugar Refining Company, Samuel Blafer, a grocer in Prince Street, had six tons to sell yesterday. Thousands of persons who heard of the discovery of the sugar in his store by Health Inspectors went there yesterday to buy a pound of sugar and the pound of cornmeal that Blafer insisted each sugar customer must buy.

Newark grocers were dumfounded when they heard of the large quantity of sugar Blafer had on hand. In broken English he said he had never been out of sugar in the last six months. He didn't know why he was more fortunate than his competitors. All he knew was that he ordered sugar and got it.

Explaining the delivery of the six tons, he said he ordered, as usual, from the American Sugar Refinery, and sent a certified check. The check was returned, he said, and he was told the International Sugar Commission of 111 Broadway would send him the sugar and draw on him for payment. Blafer has a small grocery in the heart of the foreign quarter. The back room of this store was filled with bags of sugar, covered with other merchandise, when the Health Inspectors visited the place.

The Newark Board of Health has been trying to ease the sugar situation by issuing sugar cards and distributing sugar from police stations, but so far the board has been unable to get the initial shipment of 1,000 pounds promised by the refinery. While the health authorities were trying to pull wires to get the sugar the trucks were dumping off a hundred bags of 100 pounds each at Blafer's store.

Police reserves were called to keep order while Blafer and his clerks weighed out the precious sweet. The line was half a block long all day. Blafer sold the sugar at 10 cents a pound and the cornmeal at 8 cents. He said he paid 8 4-5 cents a pound for the sugar.

PUMPKINLESS PIE AT SEA.

Recipe Devised by New Jersey Woman Wins Favor in the Navy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Camouflage pumpkin pie has made a big hit with the men on an American naval vessel, according to announcement made today by the National Emergency Food Garden Commission, which has its headquarters in Washington. It appears that in an effort to help food conservation Mrs. G. M. King of 241 William street, East Orange, N. J., sent to the commission her pumpkinless pie recipe. The commission gave it to the crews, and among those who read it was Paul R. Wallace, a second-class baker on a vessel in the navy. Wallace wrote Mrs. King this letter:

My Dear Mrs. King:
After having tried your recipe for pumpkinless pie which was published in the papers I would be very much pleased and appreciate very much if you could give me a recipe for gingerless gingerbread. I am a baker in the United States Navy and tried your recipe on 500 pie-hungry men of Uncle Sam's navy. The only kick they had to make was there was not enough. Ray Eaton, who is head baker on this ship, and myself are specializing on economy in the navy during these hard times, as are the folks at home, and the reason I ask you for this gingerless gingerbread is this: Some time ago we were asked to make gingerbread "without" molasses, ginger, spices, and butter, so Eaton and I thought you might have some kind of camouflage that would help us out. Very truly yours,
PAUL R. WALLACE, U. S. S. ——
In care of any Postmaster.

Mrs. King was equal to the task, and at once sent through the National Emergency Food Garden Commission this recipe:

"Gingerless, molassesless, eggless, butterless, milkless gingerbread: Dissolve two cups of brown sugar in a little black coffee and one dessert spoonful of soda. Add four tablespoons of melted shortening; two tablespoons of nut oleomargarine; two tablespoons of lard, a little salt, then one scant cup of hot black coffee, and last, but not least, pepper to taste. Take one cup of graham and three cups of wheat flour and roll it out about one inch thick."

Here is the recipe for the pumpkinless pie:

"Scald one quart milk; add scant cup of Indian meal and a little salt. When cold add two eggs, cinnamon and ginger to taste, sweeten with brown sugar. Put a little cream or milk on top and bake."

ECONOMY IN CRACKERS.

Bakers to Save $16,000,000 Pounds of Sugar and 12,000,000 of Fats.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—An annual saving of 16,000,000 pounds of sugar and 12,000,000 pounds of shortening is what the cracker manufacturers of the country estimate they will accomplish under the new rules made for them by the Food Administration.

The rules require that an average of not more than seventeen pounds of shortening, of which not more than ten pounds shall be animal fats, shall be used in 196 pounds of flour, meal, or mixture for sponge goods, and not more than twenty-six pounds, of which not more than half shall be animal fats, in sweet goods. No sugar is allowed for sponge goods and not more than fifty-three pounds for sweet goods.

The administration has asked that the manufacturers keep below these maximum figures, and has given warning that a further reduction may be necessary.

URGES DEEPENING OF HUDSON RIVER

Deep-Sea Craft Could Be Taken to Albany at Small Cost, Says Gov. Whitman.

WOULD RELIEVE NEW YORK

Export Freight Could Be Loaded at Head of Navigation—Barge Canal Nearly Completed.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 29.—The importance of deepening the Hudson River to permit deep-sea craft to ply between New York and Albany, 150 miles, was emphasized by Governor Charles S. Whitman of New York in an address before the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association here today.

Governor Whitman said that the amount of foreign commerce which annually passed through Albany by rail on its way to and from Western points exceeded 14,000,000 tons, and that, upon the completion of the new barge canal, combined rail and water facilities would more than double this tonnage.

"If some of this foreign commerce could be intercepted and transferred before reaching the Port of New York," he said, "it would permit that port to handle more cheaply and rapidly the domestic commerce necessary to feed, clothe, and shelter its rapidly increasing population."

Reports made by Federal engineers, he said, showed that the construction of a New York-Albany ship channel was entirely feasible, and that the cost would be relatively small. The Hudson can be navigated by ocean-going vessels to within forty miles of Albany, and virtually all of the dredging necessary to secure a depth of twenty-seven feet could be done with hydraulic dredges, except in a few places where shale rock is found. Ice blocks the river for only a brief period each year, and it would be possible to keep a channel open throughout the year if the demands of commerce warranted.

"The saving in time of transit is an economic advantage which should not be overlooked," said Mr. Whitman. "From two to five days' delay is experienced on every car of foreign commerce passing the City of Albany. In addition, greater delays are experienced in New York in distributing freight to various boat lines. All told, sufficient time is lost at and east of Albany to haul the freight by water from Detroit to Albany.

"The Albany-Troy section of the Hudson possesses all the characteristics required. It would permit the sailing of ocean-going vessels along the natural trade route 150 miles inland beyond the Port of New York, yet the distance from European ports is no greater than from Philadelphia, Baltimore, or Newport News. Here are large tracts of low-lying land, undeveloped for other than agricultural purposes, in direct communication with trunk line railroads, where adequate industrial or commercial terminals, capable of operating according to the best practice, can be constructed. All trunk line railroads running through Albany have their division points there, and the Barge Canal system terminates at Troy.

"The retention within our national borders of commerce with the interior is so desirable that the point need not be further argued. Shall we permit the young giant at our north to win in his strife for the trade of the great interior?"

Governor Whitman, after reviewing chiefly the history of the Erie Canal, said, in part:

"The construction of the Barge Canal system is now so nearly complete that the channel for full-size barges is expected to be available from the Hudson River to Lake Erie on the opening of navigation next year. Never in its history, until now, has the canal system been equipped with adequate public terminals, the nearest approach to them being a series of piers in New York, unshedded and absolutely unequipped with the slightest conveniences for transferring or caring for freight.

"The Barge Canal Terminal Commission reported that the new system could not attract the greatest amount of freight and therefore attain its highest usefulness to the public, unless this unfavorable terminal situation was entirely changed. Accordingly, a separate appropriation, amounting to nearly $20,000,000, made available by referendum in 1911 in addition to the one hundred and thirty-five millions appropriated for canal construction, is providing a system of fifty or more public terminals located in almost as many cities all the way from New York to Buffalo and from Troy to Rouses Point.

"Now that great quantities of heavy freight are regularly hauled on large motor trucks between points ranging in distance from fifteen to thirty miles or more, there is no doubt that the motor truck will be an extremely useful adjunct to the canals by providing the flexibility so necessary to a local distributing system. Lines of motor trucks will be able to make the canals available to many shippers who otherwise could not expect to share in their benefits, the fruit section of Western New York particularly being able to derive great benefit from them. The public terminals which are being constructed undoubtedly will be one of the very strongest causes for the success of the canal system."

LIBERTY LOAN CONFERENCE.

McAdoo Calls Reserve District and Woman's Organizations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—To perfect Liberty Loan organizations throughout the country for the period of the war Secretary McAdoo today called a conference of representatives of Liberty Loan committees in each of the twelve Federal Reserve Districts and of the Woman's Liberty Loan organization, to be held in Washington Dec. 10.

"While the Secretary has announced that there will be no further Liberty Loan issued, at least until after Feb. 1," said a Treasury Department announcement, "he believes it essential that educational work in preparation for future loans be conducted continuously so that the people may become fully acquainted with the worth of Government securities, the advantage of thrift and economy, and the financial needs of the Government to wage war against Germany."

In order to obtain for the benefit of the Treasury Department and of the various committees the experience of the executives and workers in the several districts, a series of special meetings will be held. Views will be interchanged so that methods used successfully in one district may be made available in others.

LONDON MARKET IS QUIET.

Record Prices on Tin Shares—Shipping Shares Still Active.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Money and discount rates quiet. Apart from the continued strength and activity in shipping, Marconi, and Brazilian issues the market developed a quieter tone. The war loan eased a fraction, although other gilt-edged securities were steady. Some recently active oil and steel stocks sagged on profit taking. Russian issues were depressed, but Argentine rails showed some improvement. Tin shares benefited further on the rise of the metal to the record price of £290.

2. Claims shall be proved on the basis of allowance of interest to September 27, 1915, the date of the appointment of the Receiver, without prejudice to the right of the claimante to claim interest accruing thereafter upon the amounts found to be due to said claimants, respectively, on said 27th day of September, 1915.

URGE REPEAL TODAY OF WEST SIDE LAW

Joint Conference Committee Advocates Abrogation of 1847 Ordinance to Clarify Case.

COMPANY'S RIGHTS OBSCURE

Committee Declares No Agreement Can Be Reached Until the Railroad's Status Is Ascertained.

The Joint Conference Committee of the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate having failed to reach an agreement with the New York Central Railroad Company for the west side improvement, the matter will pass tomorrow into the sole control of the commission. At the meeting of the Board of Estimate today the Joint Committee will urge that action be taken for the repeal of the ordinance of 1847, under which the railroad company claims perpetual rights in certain streets on the west side. A memorandum filed with the Board by the Joint Committee is to the effect that the perpetual rights asserted by the company in these thoroughfares is without legal basis, that the streets are the property of the city, and that the company has sought to exchange these rights for very valuable public property.

Surprise is expressed in the memorandum that during a long period of last year the Board of Estimate proceeded with work looking toward an agreement with the railroad company, which involved such an exchange, without having examined the ground upon which the ownership claim of the company was based.

Advocates Prompt Repeal

Embraced in the memorandum is a draft of a resolution revoking the 1847 ordinance, which the board is asked to adopt so that it may become effective tomorrow. It is said that the board has the power of repeal, and that "important considerations of public policy make such repeal by the present Board of Estimate advisable in advance of the advent of Dec. 1.

It is argued in the memorandum that no agreement can be made with the railroad company for any improvement whatever until it is first ascertained just what are the rights and status of the company along certain streets. Whether the relations with the company remain amiable or whether it becomes necessary to use the police powers of the State to effect necessary improvements, the first step, it is asserted, is a "definite ascertainment" of the company's present rights. The memorandum adds:

"If any one—the Corporation Counsel, the counsel for the railroad company, or any one else—thinks they have been defined and determined, let him try to state what they are. It has never been publicly done by courts or by private or public authority, and it is too important a matter to be left to supposition.

"The memorandum says that the commission has no intention of tearing up the tracks of the company or to proceed in any similar drastic or arbitrary manner, but it insists that before anything is done the situation should be clarified.

Terms of the Ordinance.

The memorandum says that if the company asserts that it obtained a contractual right from the city by the ordinance of 1847, it follows that its right was based upon the terms of the ordinance, which provides that the tracks should be laid in such a manner as to cause no unnecessary impediment to the common and ordinary use of the streets, and that "at all times" the company should be subject to regulation by the city authorities. Attention is called to the fact that the commission has no intention of dealing with the company's franchise, which is subject only to the State Legislature, and that the company's franchise might be repealed and yet it would still have intact all of its rights under the ordinance. Therefore, it is asserted, it becomes extremely important that these rights be defined. It is set forth in the memorandum that in 1847 the city had no right to adopt any irrepealable ordinance, or to confer any perpetual or irrevocable right as to the streets, and that the use and exercise of the ordinance for more than seventy years has created no title for the company and no barrier to its repeal. In conclusion the memorandum says:

"The Joint Conference Committee earnestly asks that the present Board of Estimate place no obstacle in the way of the plans and efforts of the committee and the Public Service Commission to reach acceptable results in this west side matter. To withhold or delay the repeal of this ordinance until after Dec. 1 would be to place an obstacle in the way of solution, and to give the railroad company a ground or pretext from which to claim State confirmation of street rights never granted in perpetuity by State or city. The possible benefits to the railroad company from failure to repeal before Dec. 1 should be frankly faced and understood. On the other hand, the public benefits from prompt repeal may be frankly stated."

Then the memorandum says that if the railroad company holds its right to the use of the streets by virtue of a repealable ordinance, or its franchise only on condition of the city's assent, the repeal of the ordinance will mean that any agreement for an improvement never will carry provision for payment or allowance to the company for rights subject to public recapture.

"Repeal of the ordinance," continues the memorandum, "can do no damage to any right of the railroad company or interest of the public. It will clear the way for a decision definitely determining the rights of the railroad company and the public, and, we believe, will end all claim that the rights of this railroad company in the streets of New York City are perpetual, irrevocable, and subject to no public recapture or control except on a 'barter' basis."

Burlingame Opposes Repeal.

Senator Alvah W. Burlingame, Jr., of Brooklyn, Republican, sent the Board of Estimate yesterday a letter protesting against the proposed repeal of the ordinance of 1847, as requested by the Joint Conference Committee.

"The effect of the passage of this resolution would be to repeal all the provisions of the ordinance of 1847," he wrote, "which go much further than merely to give the consent of the city to the use of the streets by the railroad company. These provisions, which, unfortunately, and evidently through some oversight on the part of the counsel of the Public Service Commission, were not included in the communication to your board, do not stop at merely giving a consent to the old Hudson River Railroad Company to use certain streets on the west side.

"The ordinance expressly reserves the right of the city to compel the railroad company to elevate or depress its tracks at its own cost whenever the city deems it necessary for public convenience. The railroad company, in its covenant with the city on which the ordinance became effective, expressly agreed and consented to those provisions. Therefore, to repeal the ordinance of 1847 and rescind the various agreements and resolutions adopted pursuant to it would certainly carry with it a repeal of those provisions. And in the present status of the west side problem such a repeal, if effective at all, would certainly be a highly questionable move from the point of view of safeguarding the city's interests. The city should not divest itself of what, in the absence of a specific decision to the contrary, might be its only means of compelling the railroad company to remove its tracks from the streets of the city."

Senator Burlingame suggested that the way to accomplish what the Joint Conference Committee desired was to amend the charter of 1846 which incorporated the Hudson River Railroad, now a part of the New York Central. He said he expected to introduce at the next Legislature a bill which would affect this.

He quoted Section 26 of the charter, which says, "The Legislature may at any time alter or repeal this act." In referring to opposition at the last Legislature to the appointment of a committee to investigate the west side situation, the Senator wrote:

"The public may soon find an unexpected need for this special commission of investigation, if your board acts hastily in repealing and rescinding this ordinance and agreements of 1847 and removes the last vestige of control over the tracks from the officials of the City of New York."

He asked that the board postpone action until the State investigation of the west side problem could be completed.

EXPLAINS RAILROAD "POOL."

In No Way Involves Violation of Law, Chairman Harrison Says.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Fairfax Harrison, as Chairman of the Railroads' War Board, today issued a statement denying the widely published statement that the plan adopted by the railroads to relieve freight congestion involves any system of "pooling," such as would constitute a violation of the interstate commerce laws.

"The Interstate Commerce act forbids the pooling of freight traffic or earnings by competing railways," he says. "The plan which we have adopted does not involve or contemplate the pooling of either traffic or earnings. We have merely arranged for the use of physical facilities in common at places and to the extent necessary to enlarge sufficiently the capacity of the Eastern railroads. If the word 'pool' is applicable, what we have partially pooled are the physical facilities.

"The condition we are dealing with is analogous to that brought about at times by accidents or by floods, such as that at Dayton, Ohio, a few years ago. The flood at Dayton made it impossible for certain railways to handle all the traffic which normally came to them. Therefore, they diverted large amounts of traffic to railways which were still open. Similarly, at the present time, certain railway lines have become so congested that they cannot handle all of the business which is coming to them, and we are adopting measures to bring about greater utilization of other railway lines to relieve the situation.

"There is no similarity between these measures and the agreements for the pooling of traffic and earnings, which are forbidden by the Interstate Commerce act."

MUST USE WOOD AS FUEL.

Departments Advise Burning Dead Timber to Meet Coal Shortage.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. — To help meet the shortage of 50,000,000 tons in the country's coal supply the Fuel Administration, in co-operation with the Department of Agriculture, has inaugurated an intensive campaign for the substitution of wood for coal.

"One cord of hard wood is equal to a ton of coal," said an announcement by the Fuel Administration. "One ton of coal is released for use in war work for every cord of wood substituted. Statistics show that there is a vast amount of dead wood in many sections of the country and that the supply of wood in many communities is sufficient for domestic purposes in those parts."

Much of the wood in communities is destroyed as waste, it was pointed out, and its conservation not only would conserve coal, but would prove a measure of economy to the users. New England and the South, the statement said, have an abundance of wood and in the latter section activities already are under way looking to an intensive campaign for the substitution of wood. In this connection it was announced that the Department of Agriculture would provide the services of expert foresters without charge to supervise the cutting of wood so that no damage would be done to growing timber and that the largest use might be obtained of the wood supply.

B. & O. Officials Promoted.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—Arthur W. Thompson, Vice President in charge of traffic of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, announced today that O. R. McCarty, passenger traffic manager, is appointed general passenger representative and is succeeded as traffic manager by W. B. Calloway, general passenger agent of the Eastern lines. W. E. Lowes, assistant general passenger agent, is appointed general passenger agent. Archibald Fries, freight traffic manager of the Eastern lines, becomes general freight traffic manager.

DOUBLE SUBSIDY TO GERMAN SHIPPING

Government Both Pays Owners for Lost Vessels and Helps Pay for New.

BILL ON EVE OF ENACTMENT

Already Has Passed Reichstag—Clear Gift of $250,000,000 to Capital, Socialists Say.

German shipping interests, led by the Hamburg-American Line and the North German Lloyd, appear to have won a substantial victory over the masses of the German people through the bill for the restoration of the German merchant marine, which, according to cablegrams from Amsterdam received in New York in October, has passed the Reichstag and is likely to become a law within a short time. Details of the new bill, which was substituted for the original Ship Subsidy bill described in THE NEW YORK TIMES of March 17, are found in copies of Berlin newspapers reaching London, and show that, far from the German Government having tightened its grip on the shipping concerns, it looks as if the big shipping interests had obtained a firmer control of the Government.

The provisions of the new bill make it possible, and almost imperative, for a commission of fourteen to be named by the Imperial Chancellor, with the approval of the Federal Council, not only to recompense the owners for the ships they have lost through the war, but also to see that the German Government pays a share, running as high as 80 per cent. in some cases, of the extra cost of building the vessels that are to replace the lost craft. The Government and the big ship owners succeeded in having the Reichstag override the objections of the Socialist members, who talked and voted against the bill, and the German Empire will shortly be pledged to spend a sum which the lowest estimates, place at $250,000,000 for the purpose of rebuilding the German merchant marine.

The committee report to the Reichstag said that the Government insisted upon the urgency of legislation, on the ground that the shipbuilders must be enabled to make all their plans and to conclude contracts with the building yards. The Government said that it was aware of the seriousness of the new financial burden, but that direct grants, without any provision for repayment, would alone be satisfactory. It was suggested that the immediate consequence of the passing of this bill would be a flood of similar demands from other industries. To this the Government replied that the position of shipping was quite peculiar, that its restoration was an absolute necessity, and that without a mercantile marine the whole German people would be unable to recover from the consequences of the war. German shipping had been peculiarly unprotected, because there was no immunity for private property at sea, and the losses of German shipping had been largely due to the measures of the German Government. In reply to the accusation that it was making a free gift to the very strongest German capitalists, the Government said that the bill was keenly desired by organized German seamen.

Government Monopoly Rejected.

In view of the enormous expenditure involved it was suggested that the Government should take the whole matter into its own hands. The Government replied that nothing was less suited than shipping to form a Government monopoly, and that the effect of a Government monopoly would be "to threaten German trade with the loss of the international possibilities of expansion upon which its greatness has been based."

The Government successfully resisted all proposals that it should secure the right of purchase of subsidized ships, or that it should secure a share of the ultimate profits on subsidized ships. The Government, whose arguments throughout seem to have been those of the shipping men, said that the old mail steamer subsidies had not been a success, and that schemes for the division of profits between the Government and owners were not really practical.

There was a great deal of discussion as to the probable expenditure under the bill. The lowest estimate was $250,000,000, and this figure was accepted by the Imperial Treasury. But the German experts admit that the cost is increasing every day, owing both to the increased losses of shipping and to the increased cost of construction.

In the second reading debate the Government upheld all the arguments of the shipping interests; a National Liberal said that the great object must be to make Germany independent of British shipping after the war, and the argument was freely used that the more ships Germany can build the more she will save through the fact that the vast quantities of raw materials that Germany will need will be imported in German ships.

Absolute Gift to Capital.

The strongest opposition came from the Independent Socialists. Their spokesman, a Bremen Deputy, named Alfred Henke, expressed the utmost skepticism about the Government estimates of probable expenditure, and said that the whole bill was the work of the shipping interests. The Government was making them an absolute gift, although it cared nothing about the workers in the textile and tobacco industries.

Henke said that the German shipowners were not only the most absolute capitalists, but the most international capitalists. It might be true that two-fifths of the German tonnage had been lost, but the value of the remaining three-fifths had been trebled. Moreover, many new ships had been ordered and would be completed. It was untrue that the position of the German mercantile marine was extremely bad, and although it would not be so large after the war as it was before, there would be plenty of tonnage available. The present gift to the shipping interests amounted to at least as much as the whole of the capital originally invested in German shipping, and this gift, which was to be taken from the German taxpayers, workmen, and soldiers, would amount to more than the levy on capital in the year before the war. The present concessions to the shipowners would only encourage them to make fresh demands in order to meet the competition with the mercantile marine of other countries. Henke declared that the policy of subsidies could only be ended, like the expansion of armaments, by international agreement.

TOWN POOLS ITS WAR FUNDS

Demands on Nutley, N. J., to be Handled by One Committee.

NUTLEY, N. J., Nov. 29.—The town of Nutley has formed a permanent War Work committee, to eliminate the necessity of all campaigns and drives for the remainder of the war. All funds will be raised and demands upon the town for its share in national movements will be handled by the committee. To facilitate the work, the committee has figured out the ratio of money that should be given when a national demand is made.

To further facilitate matters, arrangements have been made with the local bank to advance money in case the committee has not sufficient funds on hand when the demand comes. The money will then be refunded to the bank when it comes in monthly. The monthly income plan is worked by having 200 members of the town's Home Guard district the town and collect the monthly contributions which have been promised by the various persons in the district.

The committee has already contributed $3,500 to the Y. M. C. A. fund, $800 to the Knights of Columbus fund, $100 to the War Library fund, and $400 to the War Camp Community Recreation fund. It has also taken over the direction of all local relief work which arises out of the war, and has co-ordinated the seven Red Cross working units here. Every cent goes to the work, as the helpers are all volunteers.

CAN GUIDE RAW IMPORTS.

Licensing a Powerful Factor in Reducing Nonessential Products.

President Wilson's proclamation placing under license the importation of many articles was interpreted by New York trade experts as a big forward step toward concentrating supplies of raw materials deemed essential for American war industries. Under the proclamation, the War Trade Board will become responsible for the importation of many lines which since the start of the European war have been almost exclusively under the control of Great Britain.

Dr. E. E. Pratt, Vice President of the Pacific Commercial Company of this city, and until recently Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, a pioneer advocate of the use of import restrictions, said:

"One of the greatest benefits accruing from import regulation will be taking the entry of raw materials away from foreign supervision and placing it in the hands of the Government, which is in a position to guide distribution. Take rubber, for example. Enormous quantities of the raw product are wanted here for use in manufacturing tires for commercial trucks to be used back of the firing lines in France to rush supplies for the American Army. The Government can refuse licenses for the importation of rubber designed for tires for pleasure automobiles. In many other instances the Administration can concentrate supplies for the essential industries, while denying entry to merchandise destined for manufacturing plants not on war work.

"The Bureau of Imports of the War Trade Board will discriminate between the essential and nonessential uses of commodities such as wool, tin, tungsten, copper, and platinum. We can look forward to prohibition of the use of tin, except in certain commodities, to the regulation of flax, and perhaps discrimination in favor of shoes and boots for military purposes."

ASSERTS DANISH GOOD FAITH

Re-export Policy Strictly Controlled, Says Commercial Organ.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 28, (via London, Nov. 29.)—The Boersen, the Danish official commercial and navigation paper, publishes this morning an article concerning American food supplies to neutral countries.

Referring to the observations of Vance McCormick, recently published by the Matin, the Boersen denies categorically the imputation, so far as Danish commerce is concerned, that Denmark's control would not be effective, since it has been recognized by the competent authorities of the allied powers, it states, that the control practiced by the Danish commercial organization in securing provisions for Denmark alone and impeding re-exportation has always proved absolutely effective.

Very few cases of infraction have been found, says the paper, and they have been seriously examined and severely punished. It is therefore declared to be "unrighteous" to assert that Danish control has been in the slightest degree deficient.

TELLS WHY FUSION SPENT $1,209,695

Committee, Chairman Childs Says, Faced Prepared Misrepresentation.

MANY ANGLES OF ATTACK

Primary Left Mayor with No Party Standing, and 2,000 Districts to be Organized.

William Hamlin Childs, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Fusion Committee of 1917, issued a statement last night explanatory of the campaign expenses incurred by the Fusion forces in the last campaign, expenses which totaled $1,209,695, according to the statement filed with the Secretary of State in Albany. The statement, which was given out at the Fusion headquarters, 244 Madison Avenue, follows:

"My attention has been called to statements appearing in the newspapers of today with reference to the Fusion campaign funds.

"A preliminary survey of political conditions made for the Fusion Committee early in June showed that several organized movements had been at work for months to misrepresent to the people of New York City the splendid work done for them by the Mitchel administration. Among these were the anti-Gary groups, the pacifists, the Socialists, and the pro-German groups. The attacks upon the administration by these different groups were from so many different angles that it was evident at once that nothing but an intensive and expensive campaign of enlightenment and education could possibly change the situation. In consequence such a campaign was resolutely undertaken. This was a work of education. Many hundreds of thousands of pamphlets were prepared setting forth the various city activities, and a great many advertisements which finally appeared in about 100 daily and weekly papers. Organizations were started of every nationality, and speakers and meetings were arranged for. During the last three weeks of the campaign twenty-five indoor meetings and seventy-five outdoor meetings were held every night, with a corps of about 300 speakers. Halls, music, and automobiles were a large expense.

"After the primary day results, which were caused by no fault of the committee, as in its appeals to the Republican voters it followed the majority opinion of the best political advisers of the Republican Party, the committee was faced with an unparalleled situation. The leader of its ticket was only an inuependent nominee without any political organization.

"A demand was made upon the committee for a complete political organization, covering with clubhouses, meetings, workers, etc., more than 2,000 election districts, all to be done within a few weeks. A determined beginning was at once made, and later, with the help of the Republican organization in certain counties, and without it in others, such an organization was created, all of this great expense falling upon the committee. Never before has the burden of publicity and organization fallen upon one group. The expenses were watched with the utmost care and innumerable plans presented were turned down. The offices were under the constant supervision of a certified public accountant and were on a strictly business basis. All expenses were incurred on a departmental budget system with an able man at the head of each department.

"The main expenses incurred were the following: Publicity, including advertisements, billboard posters, pamphlets, the publication of the Fusion Flashlight, and the large expense of distribution; indoor and outdoor meetings in vast numbers in every borough, and automobile meetings every night in October; nominating petitions; workers for primary day, for six registration days, and for Election Day; the enormous problem of creating an independent organization for Mitchel throughout the city; the soldier vote, including sending a man to Europe, and men to all of the encampments, and maintaining headquarters at these camps; the maintenance of two large general headquarters with a large staff in Manhattan and headquarters and staffs in the other boroughs. Furthermore, in the aggregate a large sum was contributed to the campaign committees of the nominees for the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

"With reference to all of these expenditures, a full and complete statement, audited and certified, has been filed with the Secretary of State. Every dollar contributed and every dollar spent is certified to and reported.

"I take this occasion to thank all who contributed and all who assisted in the management of the campaign.

"The businesslike administration of New York City has been greatly advanced by Mayor Mitchel. It is to be hoped and expected that the standards of efficiency he has set will be continued. Citizens of New York will be eager to support good government and to resent bad government. Following the lead of Mayor Mitchel, we wish the new administration every success and will loyally support it so far as its administration is effective and for the best public interest."

HERE WITH SOLDIER VOTE.

Election Official Returns from France Carrying 3,500 Ballots.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 29.—Congressman Frederick R. Lehlbach of the Tenth New Jersey District, who was waited upon by a delegation of Montclair members of the National Woman's Party, who asked him to vote for the Federal suffrage amendment at the next session of Congress, and to protest against the treatment of the pickets at Washington, said that he thought since suffrage was inevitable, the sooner the whole question was cleared up the better it would be for the country. The Congressman said that he would vote for the amendment at the next session of Congress if, in his judgment, it would not interfere with war legislation.

The Montclair delegation that waited on Congressman Lehlbach urged the Federal amendment as a war measure, pointing out "that since we are waging a war for democracy it would strengthen our position morally to make our own Government more truly democratic," and that the energies of the women now spent in trying to get the vote would be released and could be devoted to direct construction work in the many lines along which the co-operation of women was being sought.

MOTOR OWNERS VOLUNTEER

Minnesota Men Give Government Officers the Use of Their Cars.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The organization of a special body known as the Minnesota Motor Reserve, composed of automobile owners who give the use of their machines to visiting officers of the army and representatives of the Government, is announced in a letter received by Secretary Baker from the Minneapolis Automobile Trade Association.

The letter says that in various Minnesota towns and cities motor reserve branches have been enrolled, the automobile owners signing the following pledge:

"We, the undersigned, wishing to 'do our bits' toward assisting both our State and Federal Governments during this present war and believing that we can materially assist through the use of our several automobiles, with their drivers, for the purpose of transporting the representatives of the various departments of such Governments who may be in our locality and require the services of such cars and drivers in the transaction of the business of their departments, do hereby indicate our desire to provide the services of our several automobiles, with drivers, at such times as the same may be required of us by such representatives in the discharge of their duties in this vicinity. This with the understanding that the requests for such services shall be made through the following-named automobile dealers, who shall be, unless otherwise arranged, deemed to be in charge of our squad, and who shall so distribute the requests for services among the undersigned as to provide each with equal opportunity to serve."

Attached to the letter to the Secretary of War are muster rolls signed by hundreds of Minnesota automobile owners located in various cities and towns, each owner stating the make of his car and its capacity.

Secretary Baker, in reply to Secretary R. B. Simning of the association, has expressed his appreciation of the offer "of the very helpful and co-operative scheme." Mr. Simning says that the association expects to organize squads in fully 300 towns, and that volunteers' machines shall be placed at the disposal of any Government representative to transport him locally and within a reasonable radius when such representative reaches a Minnesota community having a motor service reserve.

MME. SEMBRICH HURT.

Opera Soprano Breaks Three Bones of Her Shoulder in a Fall.

Mme. Marcella Sembrich, the famous opera soprano, met with a serious accident early yesterday, when she slipped on a rug over a polished floor in her new apartment at 21 East Eighty-second Street and suffered the fracture of three bones of the left shoulder and upper arm. Her companion, Frieda Mielke, who alone has lived with Mme. Sembrich since the death of Professor Stengel-Sembrich, last May, found her soon after the accident and called the singer's physician, Dr. John C. Vaughan.

Before the extent of the injury could be determined, it was necessary to take Mme. Sembrich in an automobile to an X-ray specialist, as no hospital within two miles had its Roentgen department open on the holiday. A radiograph was taken, and the broken bones were set. It was said last night the singer would suffer no permanent effects, though it would probably be two months before the fractures knitted completely.

AIM TO TIE WHITMAN TO 'THE MONEY BAGS'

Democrats Hope to Duplicate Recent City Campaign in the State.

McADOO MAY BE CANDIDATE

Campaign Will Probably Open in Legislature Over Question of Municipal Ownership.

With the Mayoralty contest barely ended, Democratic leaders in this city are already beginning to look forward to and consider plans for the Governorship campaign next Fall. The up-State Democrats, disheartened by recent reverses, according to reports, have been greatly encouraged by the Democratic victory won in the municipal campaign in this city, and are regarding the future with more equanimity.

Already there is talk of a Democratic get-together conference in some up-State city for solidifying the party and discussing ways and means for the upbuilding of the weakened Democratic organizations in up-State localities. While no actual plans for such a conference have yet been made, many demands from Democratic leaders up-State for such a general roundup and exchange of views have reached the party leaders in this city. It is not regarded as at all unlikely that such a conference, if held, might result in a reorganization of the Democratic State Committee.

The Democratic State campaign will probably be begun soon after Jan. 1, with the preliminary fighting in the halls of the Legislature. By putting the program of municipal ownership, to which the incoming New York City Administration is committed, before the Republican Legislature and the Republican Governor, and inviting defeat at their hands, the Democratic leaders expect to lay the basis for an appeal to the more radical elements in the State, very much along the same lines as that which was made by Mayor-elect John F. Hylan and his associates on the Tammany ticket in the recent municipal contest in this city.

"We will tie Governor Whitman up with the money bags just as we did Mayor Mitchel," was the way in which a Democrat put it in discussing the Democratic program for the Gubernatorial campaign.

Talk of Slogan for Campaign.

In the circumstances it is likely that the retort of Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey of Kings to Governor Whitman when he met him after the latter had come out for Mayor Mitchel prior to the Republican primaries: "So you have surrendered to the Moneybund, too," may be adopted as a slogan in the Republican primaries by the faction that is expected to enter an opposition candidate and give the Governor a fight for the nomination, and later by the Democrats in their general campaign, should Governor Whitman, as is generally expected, win the primary contest.

The Democrats have a distinct advantage in knowing whom they will be called on to fight in the Gubernatorial contest. Governor Whitman has already announced his candidacy for a third term. Among the Democrats there is little talk of candidates so far. It is known, however, that friends of Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo for several weeks have been actively at work up-State with a view to making him the Democratic candidate for Governor, and that they have made some headway. Democratic leaders in this city, however, express doubt as to the acceptability of Secretary McAdoo as a candidate in a year when radicalism is to be made the keynote of the fight for Governor.

On behalf of Secretary McAdoo it has been urged that he would be in a position to attract more support than the Democrats ordinarily receive among the farmers up-State. As Chairman of the Farm Loan Board, which investigated the needs of the farmers in every State of the country, prior to the creation of the Federal Land Bank, Secretary McAdoo became familiar with the needs of the farmer as well as his general viewpoint with relation to Governmental questions, and in addition made himself popular with them.

Strong Bid for Farmers' Votes.

The Democrats in this State next year expect to take the fullest advantage of any hostility to Governor Whitman that may have been engendered through his attempt to make George W. Perkins head of the State Food Control Commission, and according to reports from up-State the feeling of hostility among the farmers has been only partly allayed. They expect to make a strong bid for the farmers' vote as well as for the support of the Non-Partisan Farmers' League, a branch of which was organized in this State this week. In this city the Democrats will make their appeal to the voters on the municipal ownership issue, urging the election of a Governor and a Legislature friendly to the public ownership policy to which the Hylan administration stands pledged.

The friends of Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey predict that he will figure prominently in the Republican fight against giving Governor Whitman a third term, though it is not known whether he will be willing to relinquish his place on the bench to become the leader of the fight. It seems certain that this fight will centre in Brooklyn, as far as this city is concerned. The opponents of Governor Whitman in Kings, however, expect support from up-State Republicans who are opposed to the Governor, unless the Governor should win them over. The Governor will have a good deal of patronage to bestow in the next few months, and if this should be dispensed where it would do him the most good politically, the up-State opposition to Governor Whitman might crumble long before the primaries.

FEARS COUPLE WERE SLAIN.

But Police Believe Veterinary and Wife Are Hiding to Evade the Draft

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—The disappearance of Dr. Floyd Felger and his bride from their home in West Philadelphia is still a mystery. Dr. Felger, whose home is in New Springfield, Ohio, brought his bride here last July and set up housekeeping in Palm Street. On Oct. 29 the couple dropped completely out of sight.

Mrs. Felger's mother not hearing from her daughter became alarmed and came here from Illinois to investigate. "We have discovered," she said today, "that my son-in-law withdrew all his money from the bank here, and was known as well to have had large sums upon his person. I fear that he has been robbed and done away with, and that my young daughter has met a much worse fate in some of the terrible resorts of the city."

All sorts of theories were advanced today as to the motives and the causes of the disappearance. Detectives working on the case say that two motives impelled the doctor to go off without any trace of his whereabouts. It is known that the young husband was "called" in the draft last June and that his young wife wanted to go to some private home or hospital, and it is believed they found it expedient to take an assumed name and are now living quietly.

The police say the young man was drafted in Ohio. Upon coming here he abandoned his profession of veterinary surgery and on one or two occasions called himself "Johnson." He took jobs waiting in restaurants and painting, the police say.

BANS "SLACKER" OFFICERS.

Civilians to Do More Work in the Noncombatant Branches.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29. — So-called "slacker commissions" by which men of draft age seek to escape service in the ranks and get officers' places in noncombatant branches of the army have struck a snag in two general policies laid down by Secretary Baker.

These are, first, that no men of draft age be commissioned unless it is shown clearly that they are better fitted for the special work to which they are called than any civilian beyond the draft age whose services can be secured; and, second, that no function of the army which can be carried on efficiently with civilians shall be placed on a military footing by commissioning the men needed to supervise the work.

The problem of commissions in the staff departments of the army that have to do with the supply lines, transportation, construction, and a hundred other noncombatant functions is difficult. It is the desire of Secretary Baker, apparently, to keep this element of the commissioned personnel of the army at a minimum in justice to the great body of the drafted men. It is not considered desirable to make any hard and fast rule against staff commissions for draft age men, since there are special cases which should be considered.

Mr. Baker's ruling as to army functions which need not be given military status applies particularly to inspection of materials manufactured or produced for the army. Food, clothing, tentage, and thousands of other items, it is held, could be inspected as well by a civilian as by an officer.

JAIL TERM FOR GUARDSMAN.

Heavy Sentence Imposed on New Yorker Who Tried to Leave Spartanburg.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 29.—Headquarters announced today that Private William Kauffman, Company D, 106th Infantry, had been found guilty of desertion and sentenced to serve five years at hard labor in the disciplinary barracks at Fort Jay, New York, besides being dishonorably discharged and severely reprimanded.

Kauffman on Oct. 13, while under arrest for a minor infraction of regulations, broke guard, and after attempting to persuade a fellow-soldier to accompany him went to Greenville, S. C., thirty miles away. There he changed his uniform and went to work in order to get funds to go to New York, where he expected to assume another name. He was caught two days after he deserted.

The 3d Battalion of the 107th Infantry, composed of Companies I, K, L, and M, enter the trenches tomorrow night at 9 o'clock. The men will stay there for twenty-four hours.

PENNSYLVANIA ANNULS THE BROADWAY LIMITED

Company Withdraws Fast Passenger Train from Service to Meet War Conditions.

The first step to carry out the intention of the general committee now operating the Eastern railroads as a unit to cut out competing through services and bring all facilities down to the minimum necessary, was taken yesterday when the Pennsylvania Railroad, in response to a request of the committee, withdrew from service the Broadway Limited, the twenty-four train which has been running between New York and Chicago. The train runs today for the last time until further notice.

At the offices of the New York Central it was said that their service so far has been unaffected.

The text of the Pennsylvania's announcement, published as an advertisement in this morning's TIMES, is as follows:

"At the request of the General Operating Committee of Eastern Railroads appointed by the Railroad War Board, in order to expedite the movement of Government supplies and war materials, the Broadway Limited twenty-four train between New York and Chicago will be withdrawn from service, effective Dec. 1. Tickets already sold for passage in this train after Nov. 30 will be redeemed at offices where purchased."

The Broadway Limited became a twenty-hour train in November, 1912, at which time the Pennsylvania and New York Central agreed to extend by two hours the running time of their eighteen-hour Chicago service. The change followed accidents, which led the railroads to consider that the faster time was unsafe.

PROPOSE LEGAL SERVICE.

Plan to Aid Drafted Men and Dependents Put Forward.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Home Defense Committees of New York State have been asked by the State Defense Council to form legal service committees, to give such aid to dependents of soldiers and sailors as can be rendered.

"This work is entirely apart from and in no way conflicting with the legal work suggested by the Federal authorities in connection with the Federal Draft Exemption Boards," said the letter to the Home Defense Committees. "Volunteer legal service now suggested is for the assistance of drafted men, or their dependents, after they have been accepted for service in the National Army. All appeals could be made to this committee direct, and from it information could be secured as to how dependents should proceed to recover a part of a soldier's pay, to secure their legal allowance, to apply for war risk insurance, or to avoid embarrassing litigation.

"By naming several men able to deal with this problem and to co-operate with the Red Cross and any other relief agencies active in your county, a valuable work can be undertaken. One or more members of such sub-committee should be from the legal profession, or if a committee of the County Bar Association has already been named, the members of such committee could well be included."
